N.B.—In the Punjab Record and the Punjab Law Reporter, and also in the Punjab Weekly Reporter, the cases are known by theirnumbers and not by the pages where they are printed; (e.g.) 4 P. R. 1910 would mean Case No. 4, in the Punjab Record of 1910. The same explanation applies to the Punjab Law Reporter as well as to the Punjab Weekly Reporter also. It has also to be remarked that the Punjab Record, the Punjab Law Reporter and the Punjab Weekly Reporter, have been divided into two sections, Civil and Criminal.

Vakalatnama.

See LEGAL PRACTITIONERS—PLEADER.

(1)—Construction of document—Vakalatnama—General powers held inclusive of a power to file an appeal.—A Vakalatnama given for the purpose of authorising the person to whom it was given to file an application to sue as a pauper, after various special powers, contained a power "to take any other proceedings which may be necessary." Held, that this general power was sufficient to authorize the making of an application for leave to appeal as a pauper and to appeal. RUKMINA v. LAGMANI, A.W.N. 1898, 29.

(2)—Prisoners—Execution of vakalatnama.—The fullest opportunity should be given to prisoners to execute vakalatnamas to whomsoever they please, and without reference to the mode in, or circumstances by, which they may be influenced to do so. In the matter of the petition of SHEK DADABHAI valad SHEK MUHAMMAD, 1 B.H.C. 16.

(3)—Vakalatnama—Acceptance need not be in writing.—S. 39, Civ. Pro. Code, does not require that the acceptance of a vakalatnama must be in writing. The absence of acceptance in writing cannot be said to vitiate the authority to act. All that the section requires is that the appointment of a pleader must be in writing and filed in Court (Per Banerjee, J.) SHAMA PROSAD GHOSE v. TAKI MULLIK, 5 C.W.N. 816.

(4)—Validity of—Signature—Vakalatnamah—signed by an amanuensis in the presence of executant and by his direction, executant being illiterate.—Where certain appellants in a civil case being illiterate, caused their signatures to be put upon a vakalatamah authorizing certain pleaders to file and conduct the appeal by the pen of their family priest and in their presence. Held, that the vakalatnamah so signed was a valid document. RAM TAHAL v. SUMER MAL, A.W.N. 1894, 90.

(5)—Advocate of Chief Court—Power to be filed.—An Advocate of the Chief Court of Vakalatnama—concluded.

Punjab not being an Advocate of a chartered High Court, must file a power of attorney to empower him to appear in civil cases. In re AN ADVOCATE. 103 P.R. 1890.

(1)—Under-valuation—Jurisdiction — Appellate Court.—Where it appears on appeal that the suit had not been rightly valued, and that, if rightly valued, the Court of first instance would not have had jurisdiction to try it, the appellate Court may entertain the objection, though it had not been raised in the Court below. SHEO GOBIND RAWUT v. ABHAI NARAYAN SING, 5 B.L.R. App. 17.

(2)—Suit—Valuation—Appeal.—On a suit being admitted on a certain stamp, tried and decreed for the plaintiff, the defendant's appeal could not be dismissed on the ground of "under-valuation." EMUDDIN KHAN v. RAM KISSORE KOWAR, 5 B.L.R. App. 30.

(3)—Act XXI of 1863, s. 27—Appeal—Value.—A party cannot obtain a right of appeal to the High Court under s. 27, Act XXI of 1863, by valuing his appeal at Rs. 3,100, when his own statement shows that the value is only Rs. 1,590, and the difference is made up by damages which he does not claim in the suit. MUTU v. VEERAPAH CHETTY, 8 B.L.R. App. 91=17 W.R. 243.

(4)—For purposes of jurisdiction.—The subject-matter of an appeal should be valued for the purposes of jurisdiction according to the law in force at the date of the appeal and not of the suit which has led to it. MUTHAMMAL v. CHINNANA GOUNDEN, 4 M. 220.

(5)—Valuation for purpose of appeal—Suit for sum less than Rs. 5,000 and decree for a greater sum than Rs. 5,000 — Appeal to the High Court.—Where a plaint is for a sum less than Rs. 5,000 but the decree is for a sum greater than Rs. 5,000 the value of the suit must be taken as equal to the amount of the decree, and an appeal from the decree therefore lies to the High Court. AMMU v. KUNHUNNI MENON, 4 M.L.J. 43.

(6)—Act VI of 1871 (B.C), s. 22—Appeal—Subject-matter—High Court—Jurisdiction.—Where an original suit is brought for a sum exceeding Rs. 5,000 or for property exceeding that value, and the decree is for a less sum or for property of less than that value, the appeal according to s. 22, Act VI of 1871, will lie to the High Court. In re DULICHAND, 9 B.L.R. 190=18 W.R. 261. [F., 18 W.R. 316, 19 W.R. 131, 12 A. 581 ; R., 5 N.W.P. 175.]

(7)—Valuation of suit for purposes of Court-fees and for jurisdictional purposes — Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887), s. 8—Court Fees Act (VII of 1870)—Appeal.—The provisions of s. 8 of Act VII of 1887 apply to appellate Courts as well as to Courts of first instance, and provide that the value of the subject-matter of a suit for purposes of Court-fees and the value for purposes of jurisdiction shall be the same. The plaintiff instituted a suit of the nature mentioned in s. 8 of Act VII of 1887, and valued his claim at Rs. 664 for purposes of Court fees and at Rs. 14,000 for jurisdictional purposes. The appeal from the decree of the Court of first instance was held to lie to the District Court and not to the High Court. BAI VARUNDA LAKSHMI v. BAI MANE GAVRI, 18 B. 207. [F., 50 P.R. 1896, 6 C.L.J. 427=11 C.W.N. 705 ; Appl., 63 P.R. 1902, 6 P.R. 1904 ; Appr., 32 C. 734=9 C.W.N. 690 ; R., 20 B. 265, 6 O. C. 255.]

(8)—Memo of appeal insufficiently stamped—Duty of Deputy Registrar.—A Deputy Registrar ought not to return a petition of appeal on the ground that the stamp-fee paid thereon is insufficient. The right course for him, if the requirements as to stamps are not complied with, is not to return the petition of appeal, but to lay the matter before the Court, in order that it might determine whether or no it should reject the petition of appeal. But if the appellant is ready to pay what is required, then, whether the time for filing the appeal has expired or not, the Deputy Registrar is bound to receive it, provided the petition of appeal was originally presented in time. SYED AMBUR ALI v. KALI CHAND DOSS, 24 W.R. 258. [Cons., 12 A.129, F.B.; R., 19 C. 747, 20 C. 41.]

(9)—Appeal -Excess stamp—Refund.—Where excess stamps, have been filed owing to an appeal having been over-valued, the surplus amount must be refunded. In the matter of MR. G.H. GRANT. 14 W.R. 47.

(10)—Act XXVI of 1867, sch B, art. 11, Note B—Valuation of suit—Interference by appellate Court.—Where the first Court has proceeded precisely in the manner pointed out in Note B, under art. 11 of sch. B of Act XXVI of 1867, by deputing a Civil Court Amin to hold a local investigation as to the annual profits and market value of the land in suit, on the question raised by the defendant in the suit as to the jurisdiction and proper stamp for plaint, the appellate Court has no power to interfere with the finding of the first Court on the point of valuation of the property in suit. MAFIZUDDIN alias ARSHAND ALI CHOWDHRY v. KARIMUNISSA BIBI, 6 B.L.R. App. 11=14 W.R. 381.

(11)—Act XXVI of 1867, sch. B, art. 11, Notes A and B—Valuation of suit—Jurisdiction—Decision of first Court—Finality—Commission—Appeal.—When an objection was made with regard to the market value of the property in the first Court and that objection was held to be bad, the decision of the Court under Act XXVI of 1867, sch. B, art. 11, Notes A and B passed thereupon as to the market value, becomes final even though no commission had been issued under the section, the Court not being bound to issue any commission. Upon the decision so passed, there is no appeal. Where the Munsif has thus decided that the value of the suit was within his jurisdiction, and that decision being final, the appellate Court cannot rule that on that point the Munsif had no jurisdiction. ISHAN CHANDRA MOOKERJEE v. LOKENATH ROY, 6 B.L.R. App. 12=14 W. R. 451.

(12)—Law at time of presentation, applicable.—The valuation of an appeal must be according to the Act in force at the time of its presentation, and the original valuation under a Law obsolete at the period of appeal can have no influence on the decision. ANONYMOUS, 5 M.H. C. App. 44.

(13)—Court-fees—Act XXVI of 1867—Appeal filed after Court Fees Act came into operation — Stamp duty.—An appeal filed after the Court Fees Act came into operation should be stamped according to the provisions of that Act, although the suit was instituted while Act XXVI of 1867 was in force. The Court executing the decree directed the claim to be numbered and registered as a suit between the decree-holder as plaintiff, and the claimant as defendant, under s. 229, Act VIII of 1859. The claimant appealed against that order and the lower appellate Court dismissed the appeal on the ground that the claimant had no locus standi in the case in execution and could not, therefore, object to its issuing. The claim was valued by the plaintiff at Rs. 230. The Sub-Judge dismissed the suit for want of jurisdiction and held that, as the object of the plaintiff in bringing the suit was to obtain a division by actual partition, he must apply, in the first instance, to the Taluqdari Settlement Officer under s. 11 of Act VI of 1882 (Bombay Taluqdari Act). The plaintiff preferred an appeal to the High Court. An objection was taken in second appeal on behalf of the defendant that the appeal lay only to the District Court. Held that the suit being one for a declaration and consequential relief under s. 7, cl. 4 (c) of the Court-Fees Act and the claim being valued at Rs. 230 only, the appeal lay to the District Court under s. 8 of Act VII of 1887. The plaintiff appealed, but the lower appellate Court dismissed the appeal as the order was not appealable. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court, valuing his relief at Rs. 245, being the difference between Rs. 325, the Court fees on Rs. 6,090 and Rs. 80, the Court fees on Rs. 1,015. Held that the relief was correctly valued. The arrears of rent had not been intended to be set off against the mortgage-debt. The lower Court, being of opinion that the suit really was one for money had and received, and valuing the claim at Rs. 1,000, called on the plaintiff to make good the stamp duty within a fixed time. The plaintiff having refused to pay the deficient stamp duty, the suit was dismissed under s. 54, cl. (c) of the Civ. Pro. Code (1882). Held that the lower Court committed a double error. Firstly if the suit was really one for accounts being taken, the plaintiffs were entitled to value the suit approximately as per provisions of s. 50 of the Civ. Pro. Code, (1882) and under s. 7, cl. (IV) of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870). If the lower Court found that the suit was not one for an account, but the recovery of money, the plaintiff should have been called upon to value relief precisely. (60)—Suit found to be under-valued, liability of, to dismissal—Appellate Court not competent to remand for making up stamp-duty.—This was a suit for possession of a share in a mehal, and for setting aside a kobalah by which the property had been illegally alienated. The plaintiffs valued their suit at three times the sudder jumma of the share claimed by them, and the first Court gave them a decree. The Principal Sudder Ameen considered that the suit was under-valued, the valuation not having included the necessary amount for the cancelment of the kobalah, and sent the case back to the Moonsiff with directions to call upon the plaintiffs to make up the proper amount of stamp-duty, and then to send the case up to the Judge for transmission to the proper tribunal. The High Court held that the Principal Sudder Ameen was wrong in returning the case to the Moonsiff as he did, for, the difference in valuation, if proved, affected the jurisdiction of the Moonsiff's Court, and s.350 of the Procedure Act would not apply; and the case ought to have been dismissed as not brought in the proper Court. The High Court also allowed the cross appeal to be taken by the respondent urging that the Moonsiff's valuation was correct because the plaintiff was not bound by the price said to have been paid under a kobalah which he averred to be collusive and which he was seeking to set aside. The operation of the last clause of s. 19 of the Tenancy Act cannot be limited to those tenants only who can prove a continuous separate holding for 30 years by themselves or by their immediate ancestors. (79)—Punjab Courts' Act (XVIII of 1884), s. 3—Valuation of suit—Jurisdiction—Suit by second mortgagee for possession against mortgagor and first mortgagee.—A second mortgagee sued the mortgagor and the first mortgagee for possession of the property mortgaged on payment of the amount due to the first mortgagee. The valuation he fixed was the sum secured by his mortgage. Held, that the value of the suit for the purposes of jurisdiction under the Punjab Courts Act, 1884, with reference to the definition of "value" contained in s. 3 of the Act, was not necessarily identical with the value of the property to which the suit related, when it related to any property. Also since the redemption of the prior mortgage was included in the subject-matter of the suit for possession as mortgagee under the mortgage to the plaintiff, part of the consideration being the sum to be paid to redeem the prior mortgage, the redemption of which was a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to possession under his mortgage, the value of the suit was therefore the value of the plaintiff's interest as mortgagee which cannot exceed the sum secured by the mortgage to him. The District Judge held, referring to 10 B.L R. 193, that the suit should have been instituted in the Munsif's Court. Held that the question of jurisdiction was one thing and the question as to whether the plaintiff failed to make out his case to the whole of the property claimed and the damages asked for another. import.—Where a plaintiff definitely fixes a certain sum as the amount of his claim, this is the value of the original suit, and the appeal lies accordingly: but when he fixes a certain sum as the amount of his claim, only approximately or tentatively, and prays that the amount of his claim may be ascertained in the course of the suit, the general rule is, that the amount found by the Court to be due to him is the value of the original suit for the purpose of determining the forum of appeal. Per Curiam.—When, in a suit for possession of land and mesne profits, which is originally valued at a sum below Rs. 5,000, and which is instituted in the Court of a Subordinate Judge, but in which the whole amount actually found due, inclusive of mesne profits payable by the defendant to the plaintiff, is over Rs. 5,000, an appeal lies to the High Court, and not to the District Court. (31 C. 365, Appr. and 8 C.W.N. 233, Cons.) In estimating the value of the original suit, the interest on the amount of mesne profits subsequent to the institution of the suit, is not to be taken into consideration. Per Mookerjee, J.—The value of the original suit means the value of the relief claimed in the original suit. The valuation of a suit as made by the plaintiff may by either definite or approximate. In the latter case, the relief claimed is tentative, and not final, and such approximate valuation does not determine the forum of appeal. The Court makes an investigation and determines the amount which the plaintiff is entitled to recover. When the plaintiff upon such adjudication accepts the amount determined by the Court, the value of the relief obtained by him, which is in substance also the relief claimed by him, is the value finally determined. In such a case, if the defendant prefers an appeal, he is entitled to proceed on the assumption, that the real value of the original suit is the value as adjudged by the Court and accepted by the plaintiff. If such value exceeds Rs. 5,000, the appeal lies to the High Court. (17 C. 704, 6 C. W. N. 346, 23 C. 536, Appr.) The forum of appeal depends, not merely upon the value as adjudged, but upon the value as accepted by the plaintiff after adjudication. (21 C. 550, R. and doubted; 16 A. 286, Disc.) When the plaintiff accepts the decree for the amount of mesne profits found and allowed by the first Court, the original valuation made in the plaint, which was approximate and tentative, is altered, and the valuation as determined by the first Court becomes the plaintiff's valuation. Where the plaintiff asked for past as well as future mesne profits, and paid Court-fees on the amount claimed for past mesne profits only, the provisions of s. 11 of the Court Fees Act were applicable in respect of the whole suit. (33 C. 1232, Appr.; 15 B. 416, Diss.) Under s. 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, the value of the suit upon which the Court-fee has been assessed and paid without objection, is the value for the purposes of jurisdiction. The Subordinate Judge decided that the true value was above Rs. 5,000. The defendant appealed to the Court of the Judicial Commissioner. The plaintiff contended that under s. 18 of the Civil Courts Act, the appeal should have been filed in the Court of the District Judge because the value of the suit did not exceed Rs. 5,000 and he further contended that in a suit for pre-emption the subject-matter is the right of pre-emption the value of which, and not that of the property itself, determines the question of jurisdiction. Held, that the value of the subject-matter of this suit was the value of the property claimed. (125)—Suit for redemption—Denial of mortgage—Valuation of suit—Dekhan Agriculturists Relief Act (XVII of 1879), chap. II, s. 3—Applicability—Jurisdiction—Appeal.—In a suit for redemption, the valuation of the subject-matter does not depend on the value of the mortgaged property. Where the mortgage itself is denied and the mortgagee does not say what he claims in respect of the mortgage debt, the amount found to be remaining due on the mortgage, if any amount was due at the time when the suit was filed, would represent the true valuation of the subject-matter of the suit. The plaintiffs, who were agriculturists, instituted a suit to redeem certain property, alleging that it had been mortgaged to the defendant's father (deceased) for Rs. 50, and that the debt had been paid up out of the rents and profits arising from the mortgaged property. The defendants denied the alleged mortgage and contended that they had been in possession as owners for more than 50 years. The first Court found that the mortgage was proved and that the debt had been more than paid off out of the profits of the property. It also held that, as the value of the property exceeded Rs. 100, chap. II of the Dekhan Agriculturists Relief Act (XVII of 1879) did not apply to the case, and gave a decree awarding possession to the plaintiffs. On appeal to the District Court, the District Judge reversed the decree, being of opinion that the mortgage set up was not proved. The plaintiff preferred a second appeal to the High Court. Held that, as the Court of first instance found that no sum remained due, and as the original advance was only Rs. 50, the provisions of chap. II of the Dekhan Agriculturists Relief Act (XVII of 1879) were applicable to the case, and that no appeal lay to the District Court from the decision of the Court of first instance. purpose of determining the value of the subject-matter of a suit for redemption, it is the amount of the mortgage the rights connected with which are the subject of contention in the suit, that must be taken as the basis, and that therefore the objection as to jurisdiction was untenable. [R., 14 C.P.L.R. 154]. The plaintiff's right to redeem was denied by the defendant who alleged that, by virtue of the gahan lahan clauses contained in the mortgages, the mortgaged lands had become his absolute property, but the lower Court had rightly recognised the plaintiff's right to redeem in spite of the gahan lahan clauses, the ruling in 1 B.H.C. 199, laying down that gahan lahan clauses are themselves of no avail, being in force in the Presidency of Bombay with regard to mortgages with conditional sale clauses [F., 14 B. 78; Appr., 6 Bom. L.R 38; R., U B.R. 1897—1901, Vol. II, 502.] Another objection raised in this case, against the account of the two mortgages being taken as one, was upheld. The mortgages were perfectly distinct transactions relating to different lands, and there is nothing in s. 13 of the Dekhan Agriculturists Relief Act of 1879, which could be taken as enabling the Court to treat the mortgages as one. The mere fact of their having been included in the same suit for redemption could not affect the question. RAMACHANDRA BABA SATHI v. JANARDAN APAJI, 14 B. 19. [F., 34 B. 260 L.R. 137.]

The defence set up has nothing to do with such a question. GOBIND SINGH v. KALLU, 2 A. 778 (S. A. (128)—Mortgage—Suit for redemption—Valuation of suit for jurisdiction—Where a mortgagor of immoveable property sues for possession of it from the mortgagee by redeeming the mortgage, the value of the subject-matter of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction is the amount of the charge on the property and not the value of the property. As a suit must be valued in the first instance at least upon the plaint, before any answer by the defendant, the amount alleged in the plaint to be due on the mortgage is prima facie the value of such suit, and even if it turns out that the amount is understated, this would hardly be a fatal variation, and provided the mortgage is found to be proved and the amount found to be actually due does not exceed the pecuniary limit of the Court's jurisdiction, a decree for redemption may properly be made. The character of the suit, as one for possession, is not altered by the nature of the pleas which the defendant may set up as an answer to the suit, whether they are pleas calling in question the proprietary title of the plaintiff, or merely disputing the amount of the mortgage charge, or taking objection on some other ground. Though the decree was for a sum much below Rs. 1,000, the value of the property attached exceeded that sum. The Munsif returned the plaint for presentation to the proper Court on the ground that the value of suit was beyond his jurisdiction. Held the Court had jurisdiction to try the suit since the decree was for a sum less than Rs. 1,000, the jurisdictional limit of the Court. The general rule applicable to a suit, in which the sole question to be determined is whether the property attached is or is not liable to be attached and sold in execution of a decree, is that when the amount of the decree exceeds the value of the property sought to be sold, the latter is the value of the suit, but when the value of the property attached exceeds the amount sought to be realized, the value of the suit is the value of so much of the property sought to be sold, as will, on sale, satisfy the amount sought to be realised by sale of such property. (140)—Pecuniary jurisdiction of Court original or appellate — Plaintiff's valuation — Amount decreed—Civil Courts Act (XII of 1887).—For the purposes of determining the proper appellate Court in a suit, it is the value of the original suit as assigned by the plaintiff in his plaint that must be taken into consideration and not the value as found by the Court. The jurisdiction to hear a suit and make a decree or to hear an appeal and make a decree in appeal, must be determined by the value assigned in the plaint, otherwise there would be no certainty as to the Court in which a suit or an appeal should be brought. So, it is the plaintiff's valuation in his plaint that must control the jurisdiction, not only of the first Court, but also of the appellate Court, and not the amount which may be found and decreed by the first Court or by the appellate Court. A preliminary decree was passed directing the defendant to render accounts. On defendant's failure to account, plaintiff filed an account claiming that Rs. 11,000 was due and prayed for a decree for that amount. Plaintiff subsequently reduced the amount to Rs. 9,000. Defendant, thereupon, objected, and on an account being taken plaintiff's suit was dismissed and he preferred an appeal to the District Judge valuing his appeal at Rs. 4,500. The District Judge held that the appeal did not lie to him as the value of the suit was Rs. 9,000 and not Rs. 2,000. Held that the appeal lay to the District Judge as the value of the suit must be considered as that stated in the plaint (Rs. 2,000). The Judge assumed that he should have valued his suit at Rs. 75, and dismissed the appeal. Held, on revision by the High Court, it did not follow that property which was purchased for Rs. 75 was not worth Rs. 105 or a great deal more, and that the Judge was bound to take the valuation put by the plaintiff on his suit as indicated by the stamp, in the absence of any fraud. (3)—Reg. XI of 1825, s. 4, cl. 1 (3)—Formation of chur by gradual accretion — Suit by Government—Cause of action Setting up case different from plaint, effect of—Right of Government confined to assessment of revenue. A chur which had been formed by gradual accretion was first settled with the putneedar of mouza B, and then with its zemindar. During the second settlement, another chur formed which, after having been the cause of disputes between the putneedar of B and the putneedar of the adjoining mouza D, was taken possession of by the latter, after it was declared to be an accretion to his mouza in all the three suits brought by him to establish his right, in one of which the Government also was made a party. Subsequently, the Government brought a suit for possession of the second chur to which those suits related, and for setting aside the decrees in the two suits in which it was not made a party, stating the result of those suits to be the cause of action. A suggestion which was not made in the plaint and did not appear in the issues, was made in the lower Courts, that the first chur which had been settled with the Zemindar of mouzah B, and which had been over and over again described in documents to which Government was a party as "contiguous to the bank of the river H," as "adjoining" and as "contiguous" to mouzah B, originally came into existence as an island, and that the Government were entitled under cl. 3 of s. 4 of Reg. XI of 1825, to take exclusive possession of it with all its accretions. Held that Government was not at liberty to depart from the allegations with which it had come into Court, that, as the right of Government in case of such accretion was limited to its revenue only and not to its actual possession, they were bound to accept the result of the litigation between the owners of the respective mouzahs, and to settle the revenue with that person who had been declared to be the owner. The purchaser denied adoption, but admitted he was the vendor's undivided brother and justified the sale. Held, even if the adoption was not proved, on the defendant's admission, the plaintiff should get a moiety—if the sale could not be justified. The rule that decree should follow pleadings is only intended to prevent surprise, and cannot apply to a decision based on the admissions of the defendant. APPAYYA v. RAMIREDDI, 11 M. 367.

(5)—Issues—Special appeal.—A Judge is not bound to decide a question not raised by the plaintiff. When a case comes before the High Court in special appeal, the parties are to be held to the case made in Courts below. TARA CHAND ROY v. NOBIN CHUNDER ROY, 21 W. R. 132.

(8)—Plaint—Variance—Partnership—Suit for money advanced.—Variance between plaint and proof (as for instance, between the contract alleged and the contract proved) does not necessitate the dismissal of a suit under the Civ. Pro. Code. Where a person brought a suit for money advanced and for half profits on an alleged partnership, held that although his claim to half profits failed or was abandoned, he was entitled to a decree for the balance of the advance still due to him (Trevor, J., contra). SHEIKH MAHOMED REEZAOODDEEN v. HOSSEIN BUKSH KHAN, 1 W.R. 300.

(9)—Raising issues after variance is shown.—A plaintiff will not be allowed to set up one case, and, having proved another, to ask for issues to be raised to suit the proof; but when a plaint and its proof necessarily lead to one or more particular issues, it is the duty of the Court, if these issues do not come by surprise on the defendant, to raise such issues, and to give the relief thereon to which the plaintiff is entitled. (11)—Failure to prove allegations—Opposite party entitled to benefit of presumption arising from.—It was ruled in this case that the law, in allowing parties to conduct their suits through authorised agents or mooktears, does not contemplate, that, if they are not examined themselves, they may put the Court off with an agent or witness who has got no personal knowledge of the facts upon which the decision of the case depends. Every party to a litigation is expected to prove the allegations upon which he relies, and, although the onus of proof might be, in the first instance, upon his adversary, the latter is clearly entitled as to the burden to the benefit of such presumptions as naturally arise from the failure of the former to fulfil this obligation. GUNEE BISWAS v. SREEGOPAL PAUL CHOWDHRY, 8 W. R. 395.

(12)—Advance of money for trade—Agreement to repay out of profits—Breach of agreement—Crediting profits for old debts—Suit for money advanced, maintainability of.—Plaintiff advanced a certain sum of money to the defendant to carry on an indigo factory, under an agreement (karbar-namah) in which it was stipulated that such advance should first be repaid out of the profits realised from the manufactured indigo. The former, who had taken the whole amount the profits which exceeded considerably the amount of the advance, credited it all on account of some old debts of the defendant's father, in distinct violation of the terms of the agreement under which the money was borrowed. Plaintiff then sued the defendant for the recovery of advance money. Held that the plaintiff's suit ought to be dismissed altogether, and that it should not even be allowed to proceed against the defendant as his father's representative, in as much as the plaintiff, in seeking to have the defendant declared personally liable for a sum of money for which he was in no way liable, did not institute the suit ingood faith. F. PERROUX v. RAE LUCHMEEPUT SINGH, 12 W.R. 113.

(13)—Non-proof of defendant's plea—Decree—Nature of.—The setting up by the defendants of a title in themselves which they failed to prove does not prevent the Court from deciding according to the truth of the case. MUTLOOB ALI v. MUSSUMMAT KIRIA, 1 Agra 276.

(16)—Pleadings—Bond—Tender of payment —Want of consideration—Plea not allowable.—In a suit by the plaintiff against certain purdanashin ladies for the recovery of money due on an instalment-bond, the latter pleaded tender of payment but failed to prove the same. On appeal, it was urged that the ladies were in reality over-reached by the plaintiff, and that they were made to execute the bond for money which they never owed. Held, that it was too late for them to urge that point. Their written statement was silent as to any such treatment and they defended the suit throughout on the ground that they did all they could to induce the plaintiff to take the money as it fell due and were not therefore amenable to the penal clauses of the bond. (17)—Execution of decree—Sale—Obstruction to purchaser — Suit for possession—New case made by Appellate Court—Arrears of rent.—In execution of a decree against one R (the widow of T), certain land belonging to T was sold and the auction-purchaser, who was obstructed by S (the brother of the deceased) T when attempting to take possession, instituted a suit against S for possession of the property. The defence was that neither the plaintiff nor his predecessors in title had been in possession within 12 years, and that the defendant had purchased the property from T under a kobala. The first Court decreed the claim. On appeal, the Judge having ascertained from the execution records which he sent for that the decree was a personal decree for rent against the widow, held that what the auction-purchaser-plaintiff took by his sale was only the life interest of the widow and accordingly dismissed the suit. Held that the lower Appellate Court was wrong in having made a new case for the defendant, the more so without raising a fresh issue and allowing the plaintiff an opportunity of meeting it. Held, further, that, the decree being one for arrears of rent on particular property, it was not merely a personal decree against the widow, but would bind the tenure also. (25)—Pleadings—Variance between case set up and evidence —Practice —Contract of sale set up—Contract of agency proved.—In a suit for the recovery of damages for breach of contract, it was alleged in the plaint that the defendants entered into a contract with the plaintiffs for the purchase of indigo seed, that the contract bound the plaintiffs to the sale, and the defendants to the purchase, that the plaintiffs were ready to deliver the seed, but that the defendants refused to take delivery. From the evidence of the plaintiffs it appeared that they did not enter into the contract alleged in the plaint, but agreed to buy for the defendants as their agents. The question to be determined was whether, under the circumstances, the defendants were liable to pay the price of the seed; and the issues which were raised were issues which admitted of that question being tried. However, the Judge dismissed the suit, holding that the plaintiffs were bound to prove their case as stated in the plaint and that their denial of the relationship of vendor and purchaser was fatal to their claim. Held, that the Judge was wrong in saying that he was bound to try the suit in the manner in which the plaintiffs framed there plaint. He ought to have framed and tried the issues on the merits instead of dismissing the suit on an objection taken to the frame of the plaint. The object of the plaint was to bring the matter in dispute between the parties before the Court, but upon the settlement of issues, the Judge is to ascertain what is the real question to be tried, and at the hearing, if he can, either upon the issues already framed, or upon amended issues, determine that question, he ought to do so. (26)—Suit for ejectment by landlord—Failure to prove lease—Case put forward in plaint—Alternative case—Practice.—A party must be limited to the case which he puts forward in his plaint. He may indeed, from the commencement of the suit, put forward in his plaint an alternative case, and thus the defendant will have notice that he has more than one case to meet and will not be taken by surprise. Where the plaintiff has not put forward an alternative case he may have leave to amend his plaint and to state his case therein correctly, if the Court think that he has rested his claim upon wrong grounds from misconstruction, ignorance of law or fact, mistake or misconstruction of documents. The Court will then make such order as may to it seem just, regarding the adjournment of the hearing and costs. But, as a general rule, a plaintiff must abide by his plaint. The adoption by the Courts of a general principle of decision other than this would encourage perjury and forgery. made use of by the defendants with the knowledge that they were forged for the purpose of supporting their alleged mokurruree title. On this ground, he asked to have these papers declared forgeries and to recover possession of the land. He however failed to prove either that the papers were fabricated or that the defendants made use of them knowing their character as such. Having failed in this, he however asked for a declaration that the defendants had no right to occupy the land, which was the subject of the suit, at a fixed rent. Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to have a declaration of this kind for two reasons: firstly, a declaration of this kind could rightly be asked for only in a separate suit against each separate occupant of the land; secondly, the plaintiff having chosen to prove a specific fraud against the defendants and having made his cause of action entirely dependent upon that, he could not be allowed at the trial to succeed upon a matter which was entirely collateral to the fraud, and in the face of a finding that no fraud had been established. The defendant pleaded that the mortgage was for Rs. 256 and not in the year 1839. The Court of first instance included in the first issue the question whether the principal mortgage money was Rs. 175 or Rs. 256, and allowed the valuation of the claim to be increased to Rs. 256, but rejected the claim, on the ground that the particular mortgage recited by the plaintiff had not been proved. The District Judge confirmed this decree, though he thought it probable that there was a mortgage for Rs. 256. On appeal to the High Court, held that the plaintiff was entitled to have the question of the mortgage for Rs. 256 inquired into, and the decree of the lower Court was reversed and the case remanded for a decision on the merits. It was found by the Judge that a balance was yet due by the plaintiff, and the question arose whether the order of the Judge allowing him to recover possession on payment of balance was a correct order. The High Court was of opinion that a large balance yet remaining in favour of the defendants, the plaintiff was, till it be paid off, not entitled to recover possession. The suit should be deemed to have been brought prematurely and should be dismissed, for, the mortgagor could not disturb the possession of the mortgagees so long as the balance

Although that cause of action was not stated in the plaint, but a different one, viz., the decree in the ejectment-suit, still, if the plaintiff alleged and proved the facts from which the Court would be enabled to draw conclusions of law for itself, the plaintiff ought not to be strictly bound to the alleged accrual of the cause of action, so long as that arose within 12 years before the commencement of the suit. The defendant contended that he was not a bhowlee tenant and that he held the whole jagheer as mokurrureedar; but the defendant failed to establish his plea and it appeared that the defendant was holding the jagheer at a nukdee rent. Held that the plaintiffs could not succeed, as they failed to establish their case. In a suit for a balance of rent on the ground that the defendants were bhowlee tenants of a jagheer and not mokurrareedars as claimed by them, a roobakaree (a Court proceeding), in which certain decree-holders of an ancestor of the defendants sought to attach his mokurraree rights in the jagheer, was held to be relevant evidence under s. 13 of the Evidence Act. a raiyat to obtain a pottah at a fixed rent, under s. 3 of Act X of 1859, on the ground that the lands have been held at a fixed rent which has not been changed from the time of the permanent settlement; if the plaintiff fail in proving such a holding, he is not entitled in that suit to have a decree under s. 5 for a pottah at a fair and equitable rate. DOORGA MAHTOON v. KANHYE LALL AJHA, Marsh 371=2 Hay 422.

(59)—Suit for ejectment—Failure to prove kubooleut and rejection of pottah filed, effect of.—Plaintiff, in this case, came into Court relying on a kabooleut as his main deed, and, having failed to adduce any evidence to prove its execution, subsequently filed a pottah which the lower appellate Court rightly declared to be not proved. Plaintiff then sought to fall back on a general statement that he had a jote pottah, that the lands in question were comprised in it, and that, therefore, he could oust the defendant who was duly in possession. But the High Court held that plaintiff, having failed to prove the kubooleut, and his pottah having been rejected, it was not open to the plaintiff to seek to rely on such general statement. GOBIND CHUNDER LAHORY v. JARDINE SKINNER AND CO., 7 W.R. 163.

(60)—Suit for pottah from shareholder—No evidence as to what is fair and equitable rate of rent—Right to pottah on ground of being occupancy ryot—Procedure.—The plaintiffs sued as ryots to obtain from twelve anna-shareholders a pottah corresponding with a kubooliat which they said these twelve anna-shareholders had taken from them, and according to the promise to give them a pottah contained in the chittee which they also said was exchanged at the same time. The lower appellate Court came to the conclusion that the plaintiff had failed to make out the ground on which he relied when he brought his suit for obtaining a pottah from the twelve anna-shareholders; but the Court was further of opinion that the plaintiff had made out that he was entitled to the right of occupancy which is given by the rent law, and consequently, as occupancy ryot, he was entitled to obtain from the zemindar a pottah at a fair and equitable rate of rent, and finding that there was no evidence before it upon which it could arrive at a conclusion as to what would be, as a matter of fact, a fair and equitable rate of rent to be paid for the land, gave them a decree at the old rate. Held that this decision was erroneous, because there was no evidence upon which the question as to the fair and equitable rate of rent could be determined. Had the plaintiff rested his case upon the ground that he was a ryot entitled to a right of occupancy, he would have challenged the defendant to prove what was the fair rate of rent according to the plaintiffs' allegation in respect of it. The right to a pottah, which he had upon the ground of his being an occupancy ryot, was a right to obtain a pottah from all the 16-anna shareholders jointly, and not from the 12-anna shareholders separately. If then, the Court allowed the change of character in the suit to be made at all, it ought to have sent back the case to be tried by the first Court upon fresh evidence with the direction that the remaining 4-anna shareholders should be added as party defendants jointly with the 12-anna shareholders. (61)—Suit for declaration and for rent—Assessment—Withdrawal of one claim—Jurisdiction—Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869.—Plaintiff sued (1) for a declaration that certain land was mal; (2) for the assessment of rent on it; and (3) for arrears of rent at the rate assessed. The first Court dismissed the suit altogether. On appeal a question was raised whether the suit could lie. Then the plaintiff elected to sue under the Rent law, and wished to abandon his claim, in respect of the last two points, and to ask merely for a declaratory decree that the land was mal. But the District Judge held that the suit having been tried under the special jurisdiction created under Act VIII of 1869, he was unable to grant his request. Held that, when the claim of the plaintiff had been reduced to a simple claim for a declaration, and therefore to a claim which was undoubtedly within the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts, the Judge was at liberty, and that he ought, notwithstanding that the suit had been originally registered as a suit under Act VIII of 1869, to have proceeded with that part of the case and to have disposed of the appeal as to that only. (65)—Enhancement—Plaint—Duty of plaintiff to state substance of claim.—In a suit for enhancement of rent, it is incumbent on the plaintiff, in his plaint, to state clearly the substance of his claim, that is, he should state that particular mode in which his claim arose as well as the amount of that claim. Thus, where a case was decided as a contention as to enhancement between landlord and tenant, plaintiff cannot be allowed in appeal to rest upon an alleged stipulation in a farming lease, the existence of which he suppressed in the Court below, reserving to him the right of collecting an enhanced rent. Previous and up to betrothment, the affair rests legally in promise." Assuming that the ceremonies which are alleged to have taken place, though falling short of marriage or even of a complete betrothel, constitute a contract to marry, the only relief claimable by the party complaining of the breach of such contract is by way of damages, and not by specific performance of the contract. A suit brought on the allegation of a perfect betrothal, equivalent to marriage, for possession of the so-called wife cannot be tried and decided by the High Court in special appeal, as if it were a suit for damages on account of breach of contract of marriage. (69)—Suit for establishment of title—Decree on ground of long possession, if valid.—In a suit for establishment of title, a decree cannot be granted in favour of the plaintiff on the ground of his having been in possession for a long time, for, the Court cannot grant a decree upon a ground not suggested in the plaint or in the issues tried. BHAYGO BIBEE v. MAHOMED WAZIL, 25 W.R. 315. [R., 2 C. 418.]

(70)—Plaint—Suit based on title—No proof of title—Proof of possession—Probative value of such proof.—If plaintiff set up a specific title, and failing to prove that, yet caused it to appear that she had a clear bona fide possession from which the Court could infer a good title of some kind, and that the defendants were mere trespassers and wrong-doers, the Court would not shut her out in consequence of the mere form of her plaint. KYLASH KAMINEE DOSSIA v. JUDOO BASHINEE DOSSIA, 22 W. R. 390.

(71)—Suit for land—Plea of possession for above twelve years under mokurruree lease—Failure to prove plea—Nature and duration of defendant's occupancy rights from continued possession to be determined.—In this suit for possession, plaintiff alleged that defendant was holding possession of certain lands of which he the plaintiff, held a lease from the proprietor. Defendant pleaded that the lands were being held by him for over 12 years under a mokurruree lease. Such lease was denied by the proprietor and lessor who was also a party in the suit. The lower appellate Court, observing that the defendant had failed to discharge the burden of proving his mokurruree right which rested on him, and that his mere possession as a squatter could not be given effect to, affirmed the first Court's judgment in favour of the plaintiff. It was contended by the defendant on special appeal that, admitting that he had failed to prove his mokurruree right, still, by reason of his long continued possession as a tenant, he had acquired the right of occupancy, and therefore ought not to have been ejected from the lands. The High Court remanded the case directing findings as to what the nature of the alleged occupancy was and how long it had subsisted, and observing that, if the defendant should be found to have actually attained rights of occupancy by reason of his having held the land for over 12 years, on payment of rent, he ought not to be dispossessed. (72)—Suit for demolition of building—Claim based on title—Owner—Relief on title by prescription—Pleadings.—In a suit for the demolition of a pucca building recently erected by the defendant on land lying between the premises of the two contending parties, the case set up by the plaintiff was that the disputed land was his own property and that he had reserved it specially for the purpose of enabling himself to repair his wall when necessary. The Munsif dismissed this portion of the claim upon the ground that the plaintiff had given no evidence to support it. No appeal was preferred to the Judge against this portion of the Munsif's decision. In special appeal, it was argued for the plaintiff that the Judge ought to be called upon to state his opinion as to whether the evidence on record was not sufficient to make out a title by prescription in plaintiff's favour. Held that, as the plaintiff's claim to use the land in question was expressly put upon the ground of his title as owner, he had no right to fall back upon a title by prescription after having failed to make out the case originally set forth in the plaint. (73)—Suit by decree-holder for declaration that property is liable to attachment—Property found not to belong to judgment-debtor—Decree on basis of judgment-debtor having attachable interest—New case for plaintiff—Power of Court —Practice.—Where, in a suit brought by a decree-holder for a declaration that the plaint property was liable to attachment and sale as property belonging to the judgment-debtor, it was found that the latter was not the owner, but had only an attachable interest in the land as permanent tenant, and the lower appellate Court, on that finding, awarded possession to the plaintiff, held, on second appeal, reversing the decree of the lower Court, that its order made an entirely a new case for the plaintiff, which he never made himself at any period of the trial. IRANGOWDA v. SESHAPA, 17 B. 772.

(74)—Suit for rent in kind under kabuliat—Dismissal of suit for failure to prove kabuliat—Decree at rate admitted by defendant.—Where, in a suit to recover Rs. 185-7-3, being the value in money, of arrears of rent for two years which the plaintiff alleged to be payable in produce under a kabuliat executed by the defendants' father, the defendants denied that the rent was payable in produce and alleged that the kabuliat had been set aside, that, under a subsequent arrangement made between the parties, the annual rent payable by them was fixed at Rs. 29, and that the plaintiff had sued them on a previous occasion for rent in money and not in grain, and had obtained a decree at that rate, and the Judge, finding the defendant's case proved, held that as the plaintiff had set up a false claim, he was not entitled to a decree and dismissed the suit; held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for arrears of rent at the full rate admitted by the defendants. KISHEN MOHUN MOOKERJEE v. RAJOO DEY, 13 B.L.R. 245, Note=19 W.R. 234.

(75)—Suit for rent—Kabuliat not proved—Right to decree on admission of defendant.—In a suit for rent, the plaintiffs failed to prove the kabuliat which fixed the amount of rent and there was no evidence on the part of the plaintiffs to show that they were entitled to the amount at the rate they had estimated it.

Variance between Pleading and Proof —concluded.

Held, that they were entitled to recover the amount admitted by the defendants to be due as rent. It would be unreasonable to hold that because the plaintiffs have been guilty of setting up a forged kabuliat, they should be obliged to bring a fresh suit to recover an admitted balance of rent. After the passing of the decree in the terms of the award V also having died B sought to execute the decree by sale of the vatan property against the heirs of V and N as the representative of his deceased father. N contended that the vatan property in his hands was not liable as the assets of his father. Held, that the award was not passed against N in his personal capacity and the decree which was framed in the terms of the award was not a personal decree which could be executed by sale of N's interest in the vatan nor was that interest assets of D's estate. childless, and R had a son P, the appellant, born on the 15th September 1848. After B's death and before P was born, the Revenue authorities placed the vatan under sequestration; and it so remained till the 10th August 1863, when the vatan was settled upon K, under Gordon Settlement. On the 15th September 1865, K made the mortgage in dispute of the vatan to the father of the respondents. Litigation ensued between K and her mortgagee, with the result that on 31st August 1875, the father of the respondents was placed in possession of the property. K died in November 1877. P commenced the present suit on the 16th August 1887 praying, inter alia, that the villages in suit being in the nature of vatan property the mortgage was not binding after the death of K and also asked for possession: Held, (1) that the decision in Kalu Narayan v. Hanmapa (I.L.R. 5 Bom. 435), that a mortgage by a vatandar of vatan property executed in 1871 when Regulation XVI of 1827 was still in force was in its inception void against the heir of the vatandar, and did not become validated against the heir by reason of the repeal of that Regulation by Act III of 1874 (Bombay), was directly applicable to the present case; (2) that assuming that the appellant was barred by limitation from recovering the lands as heir of his father from those claiming under K and consequently his title as vatandar from his own birth was extinguished, yet that circumstance did not alter the tenure. The lands remained vatan, and K was vatandar de facto with all the rights and subject to all the restrictions incident to that tenure: consequently, she could not make any alienation which would be valid against her own heir; and (3) that though the appellant's earlier title be extingusihed by limitation, there was nothing to preclude him from asserting his title as K's heir; (4) that if the mortgage was void against the appellant and not merely voidable, no amount of acquiescence short of the period of limitation would give it validity as against the appellant. (1)—Alienation by the holder enures for his life-time—Suit by alienor's heirs to set aside alienation — Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 21.—V and D, joint vatandars of certain vatan lands, alienated them to defendants 1—3 in 1872. D died shortly after and V died on the 26th April, 1893. Within twelve years of this date V's sons sued to recover possession of the lands from the defendants: D's sons were joined as party defendants (defendants 4, 5). The plaintiffs alleged that, at a partition between V and D, the whole of the vatan lands had fallen to the share of V. The first Court found the partition not proved and awarded plaintiff's claim to the extent of half the lands. On appeal, the defendants Nos. 4 and 5 claimed that, on the findings of the first Court, they should be awarded possession of the other half of the vatan lands. This was allowed on appeal: Held (1) that time for the purposes of suit ran from the death of V, the survivor of the two vatandars. The fact that vatan land is attached to the office deprives it of some of the incidents which would attach to it, if it were ordinary land in the possession of a Hindu family. A vatandar is entitled to alienate the vatan land for the term of his natural life, and his children, although not separate in interest from him, have no right to object to such alienation until after his death. (1)—Prior and subsequent purchases—Suit by prior purchaser against subsequent purchaser—Right of pre-emption whether valid plea—Cross-suit.—Certain land owned by the first defendant was mortgaged to the other defendants and certain others. The first defendant conveyed this land by registered deed to the plaintiffs, the deed providing for the payment of the mortgage-debt to the mortgagees. Subsequently, the first defendant conveyed the same land to the mortgagees by registered deed expressly mentioning the prior conveyance to the plaintiffs. The present suit was instituted by the plaintiffs against the vendor and the mortgagees to recover possession of the land conveyed to them. In their plaint, they alleged a previous tender, at the proper time, of the mortgage-money to the mortgagees and a refusal by them to accept the tender. The mortgagees in their answer challenged the validity of the plaintiff's conveyance and relied upon the conveyance to themselves, but they did not traverse the allegation of a tender of the mortgage-money. Two of the defendants subsequently raised the plea that they were entitled to a right of pre-emption over the lands conveyed at its market value. Held that such plea was no answer to the plaintiff's suit, and was therefore inadmissible, the proper course being for such defendants to bring a cross-suit to enforce the right claimed. (2)—Sale by one of several co-sharers—Sowing of corps by purchaser—Suit for pre-emption—Rival claims of purchaser and pre-emptor to crops.—When a transferee of immoveable property believing in good faith that he is absolutely entitled thereto, has planted or sown crops on the property, and is subsequently evicted therefrom, by a person having a better title, he is entitled to such crops if they are growing on the property at the time of his eviction; and where he has received possession of the produce of the crops before his eviction, and a fortiori, according to the principle above stated, he will be entitled to retain it. In this case, the Chief Court followed the rule contained in s. 51 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), though the Act was not in force in the Punjab, as they thought that the rule was equitable and was in accordance with practice, which in the absence of express agreement to the contrary, usually obtained in the province, when the right to possession of cultivated land was transferred from one person to another. reason of the bargain being annulled at the instance of any one, including a pre-emptor (67 P.R. 1881, 4 A. 357, D.), a third person brought a suit for pre-emption against the original vendee and the parties to the present suit and obtained a decree for possession, held, that the plaintiff (purchaser) was entitled to recover from the vendor (defendant) the loss sustained in the transaction. The words "digar dawdar," in one of the clauses in the vendor's contract on which the vendee relied, being very wide, they included a person claiming property by right of pre-emption. KHONMON BIBI v. SHAH MALI, 111 P.R. 1908.

(4)—Decree against purchaser on a mortgage previous to sale —Vendor cannot maintain suit to set aside.—Plaintiff, who had sold a shop to certain persons, sued to set aside a mortgage, on which the defendant had previously brought an action and obtained a decree against those persons, and to have the shop exempted from the effect of the decree. It was before the said previous suit brought by the present defendant, on his mortgage, that the plaintiff had made his sale to his vendees and had covenanted with them that he had a good title. In the present action, to which the plaintiff's vendees were not parties, he claimed to set aside the mortgage and decree, on the ground that the mortgage was fraudulent and that, as he was liable on his covenant, he was entitled to maintain this action. It was held that the instrument of mortgage had merged in the decree and this action was not maintainable, unless the plaintiff was entitled to have the decree in the prior suit set aside. By the sale, he had parted with all his interest in the property before the institution of the prior suit, and had no manner of right to the property enabling him to maintain the present action questioning the above decree that had been passed in a properly instituted suit, in a previous litigation and against parties interested at the time. (9)—Contract of sale—Specific performance. —Suit for possession of a four-anna share of a Raj and Zemindary under a kobala or bill of sale, purporting to be an absolute sale for the sum of Rs. 75,000 executed at a time when the alleged vendor was neither in possession nor had established his title to the Raj and Zemindary. The vendor, who had established his title to the Raj, and was in possession, by his answer set up this case—that, being in want of money to carry on suits to recover the Raj and Zemindar, he applied to one K (whose rights had become vested by purchase in the plaintiff) who agreed to make advances to him on condition of his executing the bill of sale, and that no part of the consideration money there expressed was paid on execution of the bill of sale, though some inconsiderable advances were made to him ; that he was afterwards pressed to execute a bond to secure the sum of Rs. 75,000 hypothecating the whole Raj and Zemindary in substitution of the bill of sale, but that no consideration was paid on that occasion, the real contract being one to secure moneys already advanced and future advances, which contract had not been complied with by K's assignee. Held by the Judicial Committee on the evidence, that, the real arrangement between the parties was for K to make advances, from time to time, and that the form of the contract was a device adopted to evade the effect of the transaction being stamped with the character of champerty and that the bill of sale must therefore be set aside. In a suit so framed to obtain possession, the appellate Court will not impose terms upon the defendant to repay the advances made by K, as the plaintiff, his assignee, had his remedy and could sue on the bond. It is very questionable in any case whether the effect of the execution of a bill of sale by a Hindu vendor is to pass an estate

By a collateral agreement it was stipulated that, if payment was not made on the day specified, interest was to be paid at one per cent. per mensem from the due date. The vendor however was not able to give a good title to the property until long after the appointed day, as he had to institute a suit for clearing his title. Held, that the vendee's obligation to pay interest and the vendor's obligation to execute a valid sale-deed are mutually dependent, and that interest was payable only from the date on which the vendor could give a clear title. The stone was delivered at Karnal, but on examination it was found to be unsuitable for the purpose for which it was supplied. Defendant sued plaintiff for recovery of price and damages, and obtained a decree. Then plaintiff filed the present suit against defendant, asserting that it was the latter's duty to return the stone to him. Held, that the plaintiff had no cause of action and that defendant was not bound to put himself to the expense and trouble of returning the stone, that it was sufficient for defendants to notify to plaintiff that the stone was lying at Karnal at his risk, and that it was the business of the plaintiff to take the stone away if he was so minded. (16)—Advance—Time of the essence—Contract Act, ss. 64, 65 and 74—Return of deposit—Breach of contract.—White, C J. and Miller, J.:—(Sadasiva Iyer, J., Diss.)—In a contract between a vendor and purchaser where a sum is paid as deposit by the purchaser by way of guarantee or security for the performance of the contract of sale and time was of the essence, the purchaser, if he fails to be ready with the purchase money at the essential time, cannot recover back the deposit. Where the deposit bears a small reasonable proportion to the price, it can be regarded as a security which is liable to forfeiture if such stipulation exists. S. 65 or s. 74, I.C.A., does not apply to such deposits. White, C.J.:—If the purchaser repudiates the contract, the vendor may retain the deposit. If, where time is not of the essence of the contract, the vendor rescinds after the agreed date, it is for the purchaser to show that he was ready and willing to perform the contract, within a reasonable time after the agreed date. If time is not of the essence of the contract, failure to perform on the agreed date does not in itself amount to repudiation, but express intimation by the purchaser that he repudiates his contract is surely not necessary. And if the party in default fails to fulfil his contract on the agreed date, the onus is on him to show that he did not intend to repudiate. Sadasiva Iyer, J.:—As regards the enunciation of the general universal principles of the Law of Contracts, the Contract Act was intended to be as exhaustive as possible. Stipulations for forfeiture of deposit money are governed by the I.C.A. In a breach of contract, the distinction between penalty and liquidated damages has been abolished by the Indian Contract Act, and Courts have got full power to do equitable justice between the parties. Money received by a vendor under a rescinded contract of sale (properly rescinded by the vendor) should be returned to the purchaser, leaving the rescinding vendor to recover damages from the purchaser for his breach of the contract. B sued for possession and obtained decree in respect of the one half-share purchased by him. D, subsequent to the sale to B, sold the other half of the shop and the house to M. In 1908 M obtained a decree against B for possession by partition of half the shop and the house. B in 1909 sold his half to M.R. It appeared that D was only entitled to half-share in the property sold. M. R. sued for possession but the Court gave him decree for the refund of his purchase money. Held, that M. R. as representative of B was entitled to possession of the share purchased by B and subsequently transferred to him, and that M.R. was not debarred from suing by the decree which M had obtained against B, for in that suit M had admitted B. as owner of the other half and he only claimed that his one-half share should be separated from that of B. SHAM SINGH v. PREM SINGH, 260 P.W.R. 1912=17 Ind. Cas. 508.

(19)—Portion of price left with vendee to clear encumbrances—Rights of vendor.—Certain property was sold by a private sale. The property was subject to a mortgage and a sum of money was left in the hands of the purchaser for the purpose of redeeming the mortgage, but the amount due on the mortgage was in excess of the amount left in the hands of the purchaser. The mortgagee instituted a suit for sale and in execution sold the property which fetched a smaller sum than was left in the hands of the purchaser. In a suit by the vendors against the purchaser for recovery of the difference between the amount left in the hands of the purchaser and the amount the property fetched at the auction sale, held that the plaintiffs, after a decree had been passed on the mortgage, should have paid into Court the difference between the amount due and the amount left in the hands of the purchaser, and then have called on the defendant to pay the sum which was in his hands. It was the duty of the vendors to give a clear title to the purchaser, subject only to the payment by purchaser of the sum left in his hands. BADRI DAS v. JIVAN LAL, 10 A.L.J. 480=15 Ind. But where an agent is directed or authorised by his principal to pay to a third person money existing or accruing in his hands to the use of the principal, and he expressly or impliedly contracts with such third person to pay to him, or to receive or hold the money in his behalf, or for his use, as the case may be, even if he had fresh instructions from the principal not to pay to such third person and if the person entitled to the payment excuses a portion of the amount in favour of the person directed to pay to him, that is a benefit derived by the latter from the creditor for which he is not bound to account to the person by whom he is directed to make the payment. Where a vendee admits non-payment of consideration in terms of the bond, the onus is on him to show that it was subsequently paid. A vendor's lien can be lost only by an express or implied contract of waiver. A vendor, who has directed the purchase money or a portion thereof to be paid to a third party, must be taken to have waived, by a contract necessarily implied from his conduct, the right to a lien for any portion of the money to be paid to the third party under the agreement. (31 C. 57, P. C., 29 M. 305, 7 M.L.T. 376, R.) There is a clear legal distinction, though a fine one, between a vendee owing money to the vendor being directed to pay it to a stranger and a person being entrusted with another's money to be paid to a stranger. In the one case the money is received and kept by the person who is to make the payment as agent. In the other it is merely an obligation that he is bound to render and which he has been authorised to render to a third person. In a suit framed for the recovery of a portion of the consideration alleged to have been paid for sale of a village, relief will not be granted by way of damages for non-execution of the conveyance, because the suit was not framed as one for damages, in which case other defences might have been open to the defendant. ——1.—General—continued.

an interest in land—Discretionary power of Court—Only parties to the contract can be parties to the suit—Title by the head of a joint Hindu family is doubtful without the concurrence of all co-parceners.—In a suit by vendor for specific performance, only the parties to the contract can be made parties to the suit. Where doubt is thrown upon a title owing to strangers making claims upon the property, the truth or falsehood of which can only be ascertained in a litigation between those strangers and the vendor, that doubt cannot be resolved in a suit for specific performance. In determining whether a title is so doubtful that a Court of Equity will not enforce it upon a purchaser, the ground of that determination must be the state of facts existing at the time the suit was brought. The quality of a title is to be investigated as at the time, it was last offered to the purchaser. If, at the time, there were facts in controversy between vendor and purchaser, of a kind which might be ascertained in an enquiry between them alone, then, the quality of the title is found, not as when it was last offered, but was when the enquiry has been made. Still, the quality of the title, though the Court can only declare it after the enquiry, was potentially the same as between vendor and purchaser, when last offered. That is not the case when, in order to clear the title, the claims of third parties have to be investigated and separate suits filed and decided. When the question between vendor and purchaser is, whether a title is good, bad or doubtful, the Court has to decide between those parties to which category the title is to be assigned. Where the question turns upon the general law or the construction of particular instruments, the Court is in a position to declare the title good or bad. But, whether the title is good or bad, where there is reasonable probability that, forcing it on the purchaser, it will involve him in litigation, the Court ought not, in the exercise of its discretion, to force it on an unwilling purchaser. Wherever a title is challenged and the challenge can only be met by the proof or disproof of facts, peculiarly within the knowledge of strangers to the contract, and, where they are the only persons who can lay all the proofs adequately before the Court, the title is, to that extent, doubtful. No title offered by the head of a joint Hindu family, or a family in which, whether in fact joint or not, claims are put forward by members to the property as ancestral, could be good enough to be forced on an unwilling purchaser, unless all the co-parceners concurred. one of the vendors, whether assignable.—First defendant, who purchased certain property from defendants Nos. 2 to 4, subsequently, executed to the 2nd defendant alone a certain counterpart deed undertaking thereby to re-sell the property to that defendant on his repaying the purchase-money. The 2nd defendant assigned his rights under the counterpart, to the plaintiff who instituted the present suit to recover the land on paying off to the 1st defendant the amount due to him. Held, that the sale-deed to, and the counterpart by, the 1st defendant could not be construed as constituting a mortgage so as to entitle the plaintiff to redeem the property and further that the above counterpart created a contract, personally with the second defendant alone, which was not assignable and that its assignment, therefore, could confer no rights on the plaintiff as against the defendant. (24)—Broker—Position and rights of—Commission—Subsequent Modification of contract-or between buyer and seller does not affect—Commission of broker.—In the case of a sale, the broker is entitled to his commission, if the relation of buyer and seller is really brought about by his act, although the actual sale has not been effected by him. Where the plaintiff sued the Municipality of Bombay for brokerage in respect of land purchased by them, held that, if during the time the broker was negotiating with the vendor, the latter was induced to consent to the sale, the broker was entitled to his brokerage. It was not material to inquire what operated upon the mind of the vendor to bring about this condition of mind, whether it was the advice of her friends or the knowledge that her land could be acquired compulsorily, or the persuasions of the broker. It was sufficient to support the broker's claim if the vendor's acceptance of the terms was brought about during his intervention; and the fact that the Municipal Commissioner stepped in at the last moment and himself actually struck the bargain, did not deprive the broker of his claim to brokerage. [R., 9 Bom. L. R. 1232; D., 22 B. 540] A broker is entitled to his commission where he has induced in the vendor the contracting mind, i.e., the willingness to open negotiations upon a reasonable basis; and his commission cannot be affected by the fact that a change or modification of the terms of the contract is made between the buyer and seller without the broker's intervention. To speak of these contracts of sale and purchase as being "cancelled" is perhaps not accurate; but what is meant is that a contract of the one class is followed by a contract of the other, having the effect of cancelling and reducing liability on the first. In a suit by the owner of the house, the convicted person, for recovery of possession, held that the Deputy Commissioner had no right to or title in the house, and could not confer even on a bona fide purchaser any better right than he had, and that therefore the plaintiff was entitled to recover possession. Defendant having failed to pay, accordingly, the said plaintiff's creditor sued the plaintiff and certain purchasers of his hypotheca from plaintiff and realised from such purchaser the amount due by plaintiff. Plaintiff, thereon, alleged an undertaking by her to repay the purchasers the amount they had to pay to her creditor and instituted the present suit to recover that amount as damages from the defendant. Held, plaintiff's suit, as for damages, was not maintainable and her cause of action would arise only on payment of any money by her, but the defendant, having failed to comply with the terms of sale, was bound to pay up the purchase-money directly to plaintiff, her vendee, and limitation for a suit by the latter begins to run only from when the performance by the defendant of his agreement to pay the plaintiff, vendor's creditors, becomes no longer possible. ——2.—Bills of Sale.

(1)—Contract of sale—Specific performance.—Suit for possession of a four-anna share of a Raj and Zemindary under a kobala or bill of sale, purporting to be an absolute sale for the sum of Rs. 75,000 executed at a time when the alleged vendor was neither in possession nor had established his title to the Raj and Zamindary. The vendor, who had established his title to the Raj, and was in possession, by his answer set up this case—that, being in want of money to carry on suits to recover the Raj and Zamindary he applied to one K (whose rights had become vested by purchase in the plaintiff) who agreed to make advances to him on condition of his executing the bill of sale, and that no part of the consideration money there expressed was paid on execution of the bill of sale, though some inconsiderable advances were made to him ; that he was afterwards pressed to execute a bond to secure the sum of Rs. 75,000 hypothecating the whole Raj and Zamindary in substitution of the bill of sale, but that no consideration was paid on that occasion, the real contract being one to secure moneys already advanced and future advances, which contract had not been complied with by K's assignee. Held by the Judicial Committee, on the evidence, that the real arrangement between the parties was for K to make advances, from time to time, and that the form of the contract was a device adopted to evade the effect of the transaction being stamped with the character of champerty and that the bill of sale must therefore be set aside. In a suit so framed to obtain possession, the appellate Court will not impose terms upon the defendant to repay the advances made by K, as the plaintiff, his assignee, had his remedy and could sue on the bond. It is very questionable in any case whether the effect of the execution of a bill of sale by a Hindu vendor is to pass an estate irrespectively of the actual delivery of possession. It was also agreed that A should pay the balance of the purchase-money, and complete the sale by a certain date, and that A should forfeit the above-said amount of advance if he should fail to pay the money and complete the sale by the stipulated time. On A's failure to complete within the stipulated time, B rescinded the contract under s. 55 of the Contract Act, and A brought a suit for specific performance or for the return of the deposit. The lower Court, finding that time was of the essence of the contract, and that B exercised his option of avoiding the contract under s. 55 on A's failure to complete, refused to give A specific performance, but ordered B to return the deposit paid by A at the time of executing the contract of sale. It was contended that, since it was expressly stipulated that the amount was to be forfeited by A in the event of his delaying to complete the contract by a certain date, A was not on his failure to complete, entitled to the return of deposit. Held, per Sankaran Nair, J. (Wallis, J., dissenting and Sankaran Nair, J.'s opinion prevailing) :—Under the Indian Contract Act, the vendor can recover only the damages sustained by breach of contract, and if he rescinds the contract, he must restore the deposit, and that, as in this case, no damage has been sustained, A is entitled to the return of the deposit (10 A. 27, 16 M. 474, 29 M. 118, R.; 19 A. 849, 23 B. 56, D.) Where a person, at whose option, under s. 55, a contract is voidable, rescinds it, while he gets compensation under ss. 73 and 74 for the breach, he has to restore any benefit, so far as may be, to the other party (s. 64), the object being to replace the parties in the position which they occupied before the contract was made. The deposit was prima facie, therefore, to be restored under s. 64. This is consistent with the rule of English law that, where there is no abandonment or repudiation of the contract by the purchaser, and the vendor puts an end to the contract, he cannot claim to retain the deposit. S. 64 applies to all contracts that are voidable and not merely to those voidable under ss. 19 and 19-A. Where it is clear from the language of the stipulation and the intention of the parties that the amount of deposit was the agreed amount of damage, then the party committing the breach of the agreement is not entitled to recover his deposit. But when it is clear that the stipulation is only a penalty, the stipulation cannot be enforced. Ss. 73 and 74 are intended to get rid of the distinctions between penalties and liquidated damages, and s. 74, as amended by Act VI of 1899, shows with sufficient clearness that a deposit, as such only, is not forfeited by any breach of contract. The "penalty" in this section means any provision intended to compel the performance of a contract, and hence includes a deposit. Per Wallis, J.—Ss. 73 and 74 deal with the right to recover compensation for breach of contract, and do not deal with the right of the defaulting party to recover back a deposit he has paid, or with the right of the other party to retain it. The distinctions drawn by Courts of Equity between stipulations for liquidated damages, and stipulations for penalties, having no bearing in this case. Courts of Equity do not regard a stipulation for the forfeiture of a deposit as a stipulation for a penalty from which equity will relieve. A deposit regarded as security or guarantee for the performance of a contract must be regarded as outside of and collateral to the main contract, although consisting of money. But the provisions of s. 64, requiring the party avoiding the contract to restore any benefit he has received thereunder, as far as may be, do not extend to a deposit regarded as a guarantee. So there is no authority for the proposition that, where time is of the essence of the contract and the vendor owing to non-payment is entitled to treat the contract as rescinded, and does so, he

(3)—Covenant for quiet enjoyment—Breach—Measure of damages.—According to the cases decided under English law, a purchaser or tenant evicted from his holding is entitled to recover the value of the land from which he has been evicted, calculated at the date of eviction, from a vendor or landlord who has guaranteed his title. Where the deed between the vendor and the vendee contains a covenant for quiet enjoyment, there can be no reason why the full value of the property as existing at the time of the breach of the covenant should not be recoverable. As to mortgaged land, it is difficult to arrive at the true damages. In ordinary cases, a mortgagee, when deprived of his security, can only recover his mortgage money as damages for breach of the covenant for quiet ejectment. But, where, as in the present case, the mortgage-deed contains a covenant on the part of the mortgagor not to pay off the mortgage for a long term of years, the plaintiff may, in addition, be awarded damages for having been deprived of a favourable and, for many years, permanent investment. In estimating, however, the value of the prospective profits of such a mortgage to the mortgagee, for the purpose of ascertaining the loss of future profits incurred by him on account of the breach, all circumstances must be taken into account and it is the duty of the Court to value such profits as a jury would. The defendant then leased it for 15 years and left the country. Held that the lease was a substantial violation of the contract entered into between the parties, and that the vendor's representatives were entitled to a reconveyance of the property on payment of the sale price. Plaintiff brought a suit in 1896 against defendant 1 for specific performance of his contract; and a decree was passed in his favour on the 8th March 1897, in virtue of which a conveyance of the thikan was executed to the plaintiff by the Court. In taking its possession, however, plaintiff was resisted by defendant 2. Plaintiff, then, instituted this suit against defendant 2 for possession: Held (1) that plaintiff had a right to the thikan which must prevail against any title acquired by defendant 2 by virtue of the conveyance to him; (2) that as an actual conveyance was executed in favour of defendant 2, plaintiff was entitled to a declaration that defendant 2 held the property for the benefit of the plaintiff to the extent necessary to give effect to the contract of the 25th June 1895; (3) that defendant 2 should be ordered to execute to the plaintiff a proper conveyance of the thikan; and (4) that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for possession. ——4.—Breach of Warranty.

(1)—Warranty of title by seller, when buyer may sue for breach of—Allegation and proof of loss sustained by buyer.—A warranty of title amounts to a contract by the seller that, in consideration of the buyer purchasing the property and paying the consideration-money, he, the seller, will make good to the buyer any loss which the buyer may incur by reason of the buyer not having a good title to the property. This is an absolute contract from the moment it has been entered into, and the buyer can sue upon it at once if he can show that the seller has not a good title in accordance with his undertaking, and that he has sustained loss in consequence. Although the buyer may thus bring an action on a warranty of title, if he can show a breach of that warranty, it does not follow, as a matter of course, that he is entitled to recover back, as damages, the whole of the consideration-money, or that, on its being ascertained that the seller had no title, the conditional sale would on that account become nullified. SYUD SAYEF ALI v. SYUD MAHOMED JOWAD ALI, 7 W.R. 196.

(2)—Warranty of title—Misrepresentation—Sale—Fraud—Allegation of fraud—Refund—Caveat emptor.—An advertisement setting forth a description of villages and calling upon intending purchasers to come forward, is substantially an implied warranty of title and makes the advertiser responsible to the purchaser deceived by such misrepresentation. In cases like this, it is a sufficient proof of fraud to show that the fact of ownership, as represented, was false, and that the person making the representation had a knowledge of a fact contrary to it. [F., 18 W. R. 276.] Where fraud has been substantially alleged, the absence of a stipulation to refund the consideration money for a putnee lease does not protect the grantor of the lease from refunding; but where there is no allegation of fraud, the maxim caveat emptor may apply. (6)—Sale of property by mortgagee under power of sale - Sale on condition of purchaser taking such title as vendor can give—Absence of any title whatever in vendor — Purchaser whether could be compelled to complete purchase.—This was a suit brought to recover from the defendant the balance of the purchase money of a house put up for auction-sale by the plaintiff, a mortgagee of the house, and purchased by the defendant. Plaintiff, the vendor was found to have never had any title to the house, having taken it up on mortgage from one R.D. who had stolen the title-deeds from the real owner in possession. As such mortgagee, therefore, plaintiff never acquired any title whatever to the property and, consequently, he had none to give to the defendant. The present action, though brought in form as a suit to recover the residue of purchase-money, was virtually one to compel specific performance of the contract to purchase. The question therefore had to be decided whether, having regard to one of the conditions of the sale in the following terms, "The vendor shall not be bound to give any better title to the purchaser than he himself possesses, and the purchaser shall take the premises sold with such title only as the vendor can give him," the Court could compel the defendant (the purchaser) to complete the purchase, notwithstanding that the plaintiff vendor was found never to have had title of any sort, nor even the possession to offer to the purchaser. Held that the defendant could not, under the circumstances, be compelled to complete the purchase, and plaintiff was not entitled to recover the balance of the

The defendant was entitled to say that the stipulation contained in the above-mentioned condition necessarily implied that his vendor had some title, however defective it might be, and no information received by him at the auction had the effect of giving him any notice to the contrary. This arrangement was recited in the sale-deed with the consent of the vendors, the vendee and the surety. The vendee not being given possession of the property, sued the vendors for possession. The defence was non-receipt of full consideration and a lien to the extent of consideration not received. Held, (1) that the sale was complete and binding, and that the vendors could not resist the claim; (2) that the surety, and not the vendors, were entitled to claim the unpaid balance; (3) that the surety was not an agent of the vendors but was more than an agent; (4) that the vendors had no lien; (5) that the surety also had no lien as he was not in possession of the property; (6) that, even if the surety had a lien, he should have asserted it himself, and that the vendors could not assert it on his behalf or take over his lien and act as if it were their own lien. The deed was duly registered and the vendor applied to the Revenue authorities to effect mutation of names in favour of the purchaser. There was nothing to show that it was the intention of the vendor and vendee that the ownership in the land was not to pass until after the payment of the consideration. Held that the transaction had passed beyond the stage of a mere contract of sale, and that the purchaser was entitled to a decree declaring that, on condition of payment of the price to the vendor, the plaintiff, would be the owner of the right, title and interest of the vendor in the property covered by the deed of sale. ——6.—Consideration.

(1)—Sale of property—Effect of non-payment of consideration - Vendor remaining in possession —Suit by vendee.—Although ordinarily, in a transaction of sale, it may be reasonable to suppose that the seller does not intend to pass the property to the purchaser until he has received his purchase money or until it has been properly secured, it is not an absolute and binding rule of law that the non-receipt of the consideration money in full entitles a vendor to avoid a sale which is otherwise complete.

The probable intention of the parties to be ascertained from their acts should be considered. If the vendor has executed a conveyance of the property and has delivered the deed to the purchaser, and has put him into possession of the land, a subsequent default by the purchaser in the due payment of the purchase money would not, in the absence of fraud, make void the sale or give any other right to the unpaid vendor than a right to sue for the money. Any decree in the vendee's favour might be stayed as to its execution until he had brought into Court or otherwise deposited for the vendor's use the purchase money still remaining due and unpaid. MOHUN SINGH v. MUSST. SHIB KOONWAR, 1 Agra 85. [F., 11 A. 244=A.W.N. 1889, 96.]

(2)—Sale-deed executed and registered, non-payment of consideration under, not sufficient to prove that the parties did not intend it to be operative.—When a conveyance has been duly executed and registered by a competent person, it requires strong and clear evidence to justify a Court in holding that the parties did not intend that any legal effect should be given to it. In order to establish that both parties had intended that the deed should be a mere sham, it needs to be shown for what purpose other than the ostensible one the deed was executed. The mere circumstances that the vendor continued to remain in possession retaining the sale-deed with himself, and that no consideration had passed thereunder, could not afford evidence of such intention on the part of the vendor and vendee. RANGA AYYAR v. SRINIVASA AYYANGAR, 21 M. 56. [Appr., 1 M.L.T. 452; L., 32 M. 325=17 M.L.J. 350=4 M.L.T. 279.]

(3)—Registered deed of sale, denial by vendor of receipt of consideration under—Continuous possession with vendor—Onus on vendee to prove passing of consideration.—The party to a deed duly executed and registered, who alleges non-payment of consideration, is ordinarily bound to prove his allegation. But, where, as in the present case, possession had never been transferred after the sale, and the vendee and his predecessor had silently submitted to the withholding of possession for upwards of eight years, such circumstances, combined with the continuous possession of the vendors, should be taken to favour their allegation that possession had been withheld, because of the non-payment of consideration, and to raise such a counter-presumption as to make it incumbent on the vendee to give evidence that consideration had in fact passed on the sale-deed, and to account for his having been out of possession of the property since the purchase. (4)—Bills of sale—Seller's admission of consideration before Registrar—Suit for possession—Kind of decree.—Though the seller may have acknowledged receipt of consideration before the Registrar he may yet deny receipt of the same, and evidence is admissible to prove that money was not actually received, with reference to the practice obtaining in the country of preparing the sale-deed and registering it before payment. Under the ordinary rule of law, the purchaser has a right to sue for possession when a part of the consideration has been paid, and the seller to sue for the balance of their price, if there is no evidence of an intention of the parties to the contrary. GOOR PERSHAD v. NUNDA SINGH, 1 Agra 160. [F., 11 A. 244.]

(5)—Contract—Agreement to sell—No passing of consideration—Right of owner to sell to another—Right of purchaser.—A mere agreement to sell without any consideration passing would not bar the right of the owner to sell the property to another; nor would the agreement affect the validity of the said sale. (6)—Registered deed of sale reciting payment of consideration money—Sale held void for failure of consideration—Vendor's right to recover possession on setting aside sale.—In this case the plaintiff, who on the 18th November, 1892, had executed a deed of sale of certain land in favour of the defendant, sued to have the deed set aside, and possession of the land restored to him from the defendant, on the ground that the sale-deed was void for want of consideration. Defendant alleged payment of the consideration and relied on the recital in the deed which was as follows:—"I received the above-mentioned sum (consideration) 12 days ago——I (the plaintiff) have received payment of the money." The Court of first instance, on the evidence, held that no consideration whatever passed for the sale, which was therefore void and ought to be set aside, and accordingly decreed possession to the plaintiff. The Lower Appellate Court, though it agreed with the first Court so far as regards non-payment of consideration-money, rejected the plaintiff's claim on the ground stated by it as follows:—"A vendor of immoveable property who has given possession to the purchaser is not entitled to rescind the contract of sale and recover possession, merely because the purchase-money has not been paid. His remedy is to sue for the sum due having a lien on the property for the amount. Held, reversing the decree of the Lower Appellate Court and restoring that of the first Court, that there was no contract and therefore no transfer of property. The transaction as it stood purported to be a sale and nothing else and, as a sale, it was void for want of consideration. Per Farran, C.J.—The radical distinction between a perfected conveyance and a contract must, in cases similar to the present, be always borne in mind. (7)—Right to refund of earnest money—Agreement for sale of ship—Failure of consideration.—Plaintiff and defendants entered into an agreement for the sale by the defendants, who were thereby stated to be the absolute owners of a certain ship, to the plaintiff of the said ship. The defendants agreed with the plaintiff that they would, immediately upon payment of the purchase-money, execute to the plaintiff and another a proper bill of sale of the ship. The defendants were unable to get a properly registered bill of sale of the ship made out owing to infirmity of their own title, but were willing, so far as they could, to convey. The plaintiff had made part payment in respect of the price of the ship. Held that the consideration had failed, and that the plaintiff was entitled to a refund of the money paid by him in part payment, and of sums disbursed by him under the agreement on account of the expenses of the ship. In pleading a purchase for valuable consideration in this country, the very first averment in the plea is that the person selling either was seised, or alleged that he was seised, for an absolute title, and that he contracted to sell, and did sell, and convey that absolute title asserting it to be such to the purchaser who paid his money for that which was thus sold. far affected by subsequent decree in suit for residue of purchase-money.—This was a suit for possession of a share in a mouza under a sale to plaintiff by defendant. The latter pleaded that plaintiff was not entitled to maintain the suit because he had not paid a large portion of the purchase-money. The High Court was of opinion that the contention of the plaintiff on special appeal could not be upheld, viz., that possession ought to have been decreed to him, inasmuch as a decree for the balance of the purchase-money had been passed in favour of the vendor in a separate suit brought by him for that purpose. The defendant had every right to detain the property until the full amount of the price agreed upon had been paid to him ; and, if he had this right, the Judge in the Court below acted properly in dismissing the suit with costs. The mere fact of the decree having been subsequently passed for the residue of the purchase- money in another suit, cannot affect the validity of the defence relied upon in the present case, nor was it shown that the decree above referred to had been satisfied. The property in the goods in dispute in this case was held to remain with the defendant, the vendor, notwithstanding that it might, to some extent, have been placed in the possession of the vendee by being laden on his boat, since the whole transaction of the vendee was a gross and deliberate fraud. Further, in this case, the vendee purchased the goods with the pre-conceived design of not paying for it, and the sale passed no property to him in the goods ; also, upon the contract itself, the property in the goods was not to pass until their price was paid. (6)—Deed of sale in fraud of creditors, property recoverable under, only as against person executing it.—The decision of the lower appellate Court was impugned on the ground that the Principle Sudder Ameen should not have dismissed the plaintiff's suit for possession of land for the mere reason that the deed of sale of such lands in his favour, having been executed in fraud of creditors, he could not recover under it; and the High Court held that the lower Court's view of the law was good as the defendant was a purchaser from the person who executed the fraudulent deed and was in no way a party to the fraud. There was no evidence that the defendant joined in the fraud, but, even if he had done so, the plaintiff could not in law recover against him under the fraudulent deed inasmuch as he was not the person by whom the deed was executed. skilled legal adviser and client in respect of property, the subject of advice) is liable to be called in question by the vendor, and to be set aside at his instance if it be found that the other party made an unfair use of his advantages. In such cases undue influence is presumed until the contrary is proved, and it is incumbent on the purchaser to prove that all the terms of the contract are fair, adequate and reasonable. (9 W.R. 299, F.) Where a mooktear, in consequence of proceedings taken by him as the agent of his client got possession of property on her behalf, and sought to retain possession adversely to her on the ground of an alleged contract entered into with her when he undertook to be her legal adviser or manager, the case was held to fall under the operation of the above rule of equity. R.A. PUSHONG v. MUNIA HALWANI, 1 B.L.R. A.C. 95=10 W.R. 128.

(2)—Sale by expectant heir of reversionary interest—Sale by youth just out of minority, grounds for setting aside—Burden of proof.—The peculiar principles upon which Courts of Equity deal with sales by expectant heirs of reversionary interests and according to which, whenever the purchaser fails to prove that he gave a fair value for the property, the sale is to be set aside, even without proof of fraud, can have no application to the case of a sale by a young person of an estate, vested in him, but to be obtained only on litigation. Such a person when he seeks to set aside the sale must establish the fraud, actual or constructive which entitles him to relief. It is not sufficient for him to show that he did not receive the full value of the estate to which the result of the litigation must ultimately show him to be entitled, because the difference between that value and the purchase money may be taken to represent the difference between certainty and immediate enjoyment on the one hand and risk, worry, expense and delay consequent on litigation on the other. In this case the plaintiff sued merely as for a declaration of title to the property in respect of which the defendants pleaded a previous sale not denied by the plaintiff, and it was held that before he could ask for a declaration of his title, he was bound to mention in his plaint the fact that he had parted with that title and to allege the particular circumstances, such as fraud or misrepresentation, on which he may rely as entitling him to have the sale itself set aside, and that, if sufficient ground existed for cancelling the sale, the Court may proceed after permitting the plaintiff to amend his plaint accordingly. (3)—Vendor and purchaser—Misrepresentation by vendor—Suit for damages—Burden of proof.—In order to maintain a suit founded upon a false representation by a vendor, it is essential that the purchaser should have been induced thereby to enter into the contract and to act to his detriment. It is incumbent on the plaintiff in such a suit to make out by evidence his right to recover damages on account of the fraudulent representation alleged to have been made by the defendant. Also the injury, in order to support the suit, must have been the immediate, not the remote; consequence of the misrepresentation. Where a representation has been made for a purpose different from the result which is alleged as the ground of damages, responsibility only attaches where the damages are proximate. In the present case, there was no evidence that the plaintiff had been induced to purchase the shares in Bank in question by reason of the defendant's alleged false representations as to the soundness and solvency of the Bank, and the Judicial Committee on appeal affirmed the decree of the High Court, dismissing the plaintiff's suit. (4)—Purchaser of property on private sale, suit by, against subsequent Court purchaser—Collusion pleaded by defendant—Onus on defendant—The suit related to a house which the plaintiff alleged he had purchased under a private sale-deed, but which the defendant claimed as purchaser at a subsequent Court-sale. The first appellate Court, on defendant's appeal upheld his contention that the sale to the plaintiff was collusive and colorable, but the High Court held, that there was nothing in the evidence, against the house in dispute having been bona fide transferred to the plaintiff, that the onus of establishing the collusive nature of the sale to the plaintiff lay on the defendant who alleged it, that he, having failed to prove the same, the lower appellate Court should not have held that the sale to the plaintiff was invalid on account of fraud or collusion. A, thereupon, sublet the portion of the house which the vendor made over to him and realized rent. B then sued A to recover half the rent so realized; held that, as there was no actual division of the house between A and B in consequence of their not having obtained complete possession, and as the purchase was a joint transaction, B was, notwithstanding his having failed to pay his half-share of the purchase-money, entitled as joint owner with A of the portion of the house sublet by A to recover half the rent realized by A. (4)—Mortgage lien by deposit of title deeds—Bona fide purchase of property for value by registered sale-deed—Effect on prior lien.—A person who had deposited the title-deeds of his house with another sold them to a third. The vendor gave a false account of the title-deeds by stating that they had been lost. Held, in a suit by the depositee of the title-deeds, that though a security resembling simple mortgage is created by the deposit of title-deeds, the purchaser was a bona fide purchaser for value, without notice of the plaintiff's lien, and that he was protected against the claim under the previous lien. (6) Mortgage-deed of land, stipulation as to a house in, binding on purchaser of the house without notice.—Where a mortgage-deed in respect of certain lands contained a covenant relating to a house to the effect that, on any disturbance of the enjoyment of the lands under mortgage, the money might be realised from the house, a subsequent bona fide purchaser of the house for value without notice of such covenant would be bound by the stipulation, since the bona fide purchase cannot, by itself, operate to secure a larger interest than that which the vendor himself had and was competent to transfer. (7) Encumbered property—Registration—No notice—Concealment of fact by mortgagor—Loss of lien.—S mortgaged an estate to M by a bond which was registered. After registration, M having obtained a money-decree against S attached the estate in execution, and sold it without making any mention of the mortgage. He afterwards obtained a decree on his registered bond, and sold it to a party who attached the estate in execution. The purchaser of the estate intervened under s. 246, Civ. Pro. Code. Held, that the purchaser of M's decree stood in the same position as M who could not set up the lien under his bond as against a purchaser who had been induced by M himself to buy the property in the belief that S's title was a valid one. The vendor also parted with all title deeds relating to the property. The vendor subsequently mortgaged the property to the plaintiff who had no knowledge that the full amount of the consideration money was not paid to the vendor though he knew that the vendor was in possession of some portion of the property: Held, that the defendant was estopped from contending that she had a lien on the chawl for the unpaid balance of the purchase money by her declaration as to receipt of the whole purchase-money, and by her act of handing over the title deeds. Per Batchelor, J.—A vendor of immoveable property who endorses upon the sale deed a receipt for the purchase-money cannot set up a lien for unpaid purchase money as against a mortgagee for value without notice under the purchaser. (2)—Bona fide agreement for sale—Subsequent registered conveyance with possession and with notice—Effect.—Where a bona fide contract, whether oral or written, is made for the sale of property, and another party afterwards buys the property with notice of the contract, the title of the party claiming under the contract prevails against the subsequent purchaser, although his purchase may have been registered and although he has obtained possession under his purchase. (3)—Sale of land—Sale deed registered—Subsequent sale to person without notice—Possession given—Purchase-money utilised for paying prior mortgagee—Rights of subsequent vendee—Priority—Equities of parties.—This was a suit for recovering the plaint land from B, C, D, and E, plaintiff having purchased the same under a registered sale dated 16-7-1886 from B. B and C remained ex parte. D set up a claim to part of the suit land alleging his purchase thereof under a prior registered sale dated 2-9-1885. E claimed ownership of the remaining portion of the land under a sale-deed dated 10-12-1887 from B for Rs. 550. At the time of his purchase, he had no notice of the plaintiff's prior sale, and he had also obtained possession. He contended that, in case possession be decreed to the plaintiff, the latter must repay him his purchase-money (Rs. 550) because this amount had been applied by his vendor in paying off a prior mortgagee of the year 1881, who, at the date of his purchase, was in possession. Held (1) that the lands in the possession of D cannot be recovered by the plaintiff, the former claiming under a prior sale which was also registered, (2) that the plaintiff was entitled to the lands in E's possession, because the registration of the plaintiff's prior sale-deed was equivalent to notice to the latter, who cannot claim priority over the plaintiff by reason of the plaintiff's purchase not having been accompanied with possession, and (3) that, because E's purchase money was applied, in part, in paying off a mortgage on the land (of the year 1881), the plaintiff cannot, in equity, recover the property without paying E so much of the purchase-money as was so applied. (4)—Vendor and purchaser—Notice of interest—Inquiry—Notice in accurate as to particulars—Notice from person having interest—Discharge of liability.—If a person knows that another has or claims an interest in property for which he is dealing, he is bound to inquire what that interest is; and if he omits to do so, he will be bound although the notice was inaccurate as to the particulars or extent of such interest. Where a notice comes from the person who claims an interest in the property, it is doubtful whether the purchaser can discharge himself from liability, supposing it is afterwards proved that the person really had an interest in the property. GOBIND CHUNDER MOOKERJEE v. DOORGAPERSAD, 14 B.L.R. 337=22 W.R. 248.

(5)—Benami sale—Real owner in possession—Sale by nominal owner—Rights of purchaser.—Where property in the name of one person is in the possession of another who is the real owner thereof, a person desirous of purchasing the property is bound to inquire what is the nature of the possession of that other, though he may be a purchaser for value. If he does not think fit to do so and purchases the property from the nominal owner, he takes subject to the rights of the person in possession. HAKEEM MEAH v. (6)—Liability of lands purchased from Hindu devisee for testator's debts, same as in English Law—Liability, when arises—No duty cast upon purchaser to make enquiries—Burden of proof of notice of misapplication of purchase-money—Constructive notice through Solicitor.—The question, how far lands purchased from a Hindu devisee are liable in the hands of the purchaser for the testator's debts, stands almost on the same footing as a similar question would under the present English Law [R., 9 C.L.R. 173, 10 C.L.R. 113.] The creditor of the ancestor or testator might follow his lands into the possession of a purchaser from the heir or divisee, if it could be proved that such purchaser knew—(a) that there were debts of the ancestor or testator left unsatisfied; and also (b) that the heir or devisee, to whom he paid his purchase-money, intended to apply it otherwise than in the payment of such debts. [R., 16 A. 483, 25 B. 202, 6 Bom. L.R. 800.] But a purchaser, ignorant on either of these points, has a safe title; for no duty is cast upon the purchaser from the heir or devisee to enquire whether there are any debts of the ancestor or testator, or to see to the application of his purchase-money, even where there is an express charge of debts by the testator on the devised estate, at least when the devisee is also executor. Even where there is an express charge of debts, the burden of proof is entirely on the creditor to show that the purchaser from the devisee had notice that the latter intended to misapply the purchase-money. For such purchaser to be affected with constructive notice through his solicitor, the latter himself must have actual notice. GREENDER CHUNDER GHOSE v. MAKINTOSH, 4 C. 897=4 C.L.R. 193.

MASSIM MEAH v. SHAM DOSS, 22 W.R. 189.

(8)—Sale of property by person without title—Bona fide purchase without notice—Purchaser building on land—Real owner standing by—Compensation.—Where the real owner of property sold by a third person was not aware of the sale at the time it took place (though he came to know of it subsequently) the purchaser claiming to be a bona fide purchaser without notice must show that, before he completed his purchase, he did everything that he ought to have done and made all proper enquiries. The property in question in this case, within twelve years before the date of his purchase, having stood in the name of the real owner, it was incumbent upon the purchaser to have enquired how it came to belong to his vendor, how the vendor came to sell it and what was his right to do so. Where the real owner, however, subsequently came to know of it and remained quiet when the purchaser was building upon it, he is bound, before he could claim the property, to make compensation to the purchaser for the money he has expended in improving the property. (9)—Equities of mortgagor, mortgaged property followed by, even where purchaser is mere agent—Notice to agent notice to principal—Purchaser notwithstanding hostile claims, not to be deemed as innocent purchaser without notice.—On the sale of mortgaged property in auction subject to the right of redemption of the mortgagor, even when it happens that the purchaser has bought the property at the sale in the capacity of an agent and not as principal, the equities of the mortgagor follow the property. The principal cannot, through the hand of his agent, take the land free from the mortgagor's equities. The case is similar to the one in which notice to the agent of the purchaser is held to be constructive notice to the principal so as to fix him with a trust or a burden relative to the subject of purchase, which, without notice, he would have escaped. If a man buys in the face of hostile claims, he runs the risk of those claims eventually turning out to be well-founded. Whether he at the time honestly thinks he has reasons to disregard them or not, he cannot afterwards set himself up as an innocent purchaser without notice. He must stand or fall by the strength of his own right as against that of the opposing claimant. SEEDEE NAZEER ALI KHAN BAHADOOR v. RAJAH OJOODHYA RAM KHAN, 8 W.R. 399.

(12)—Sale—Reservation of right of re-purchase—Purchase without notice of reservation—Failure of vendor to pay purchase money within stipulated time—Right of vendor to claim re-purchase from purchaser without notice.—Plaintiff sold the plaint lands to the first defendant reserving a right of re-purchase. The vendee sold it to another, who purchased it for value and without notice of the reservation of the right. The plaintiff did not pay the purchase money within the stipulated time, but filed the present suit to recover the property under the power of repurchase. Held that he had no right to recover the property unless he was relieved against forfeiture. But, as the second defendant had purchased the property without notice of the right of re-purchase, plaintiff could not succeed in the suit. SAMAKAUNDAN v. PERUMAL CHETTI, 2 M.H.C. 14.

(13)—Sale of putnee—Pleas in former suits for rents, not sufficient notice to bona fide purchaser for consideration.—The defendant in this case was in the position of an innocent purchaser for valuable consideration without any notice of the title of the plaintiffs. Antecedent to the purchase, certain suits had been brought against the defendant's vendor and decreed against him alone, and the pleas set up in those suits for rent were held not to avail the plaintiffs as constituting notice to the purchaser. The plaintiffs, if they had any real interest in the property, ought to have protected it by having their names inserted in the putnee pottah, or otherwise, in such a manner that an innocent purchaser could not be deceived. that, if the vendors sold to the plaintiff, keeping back from him the fact of a former sale, in which one of them took part, this would be a fraud upon the plaintiff, which would render the doctrine of caveat emptor inapplicable, and would give the plaintiff an equitable right to recover the money obtained from him by fraud. ALA BAKHSH v. NABI BAKHSH, 26 P.R. 1884. (90 P.R. 1876, D.)

(15)—Purchaser of land—Prior sankhat.—The plaintiff sued upon a sankhat mortgage and got a decree. The property was accordingly attached under that decree. But a claim against the attached property was preferred by a purchaser from the mortgagor subsequent to the san mortgage but prior to the decree. The attachment was raised, and the plaintiff filed a suit for a declaration of his right to sell the property, which was thrown out in both the lower Courts. Held, in special appeal, that if the sankhat was duly executed for valuable consideration, or even if the defendant had notice of it at or before the date of the purchase, the plaintiff was entitled to a decree in the nature of a decree for foreclosure and sale of the property, with costs. GIRDHAR RANCHODDAS v. HACAMCHAND REVACHAND 8 B.H.C.A.C. 75. [Diss., 6 B. 193; Not F., 13 A. 28=A. W. N. 1890, 216.]

(16)—Attorney and client — Constructive notice—Secrecy—Practice—Costs.—A presumption as to notice having been given to his client by an attorney where such notice would involve a confession, by the attorney, of a fraud practised by himself will not be made. The principle of constructive notice is inapplicable where the party seeking the benefit of it has been guilty of secrecy in the transaction, with constructive notice of which he seeks to affect a purchaser. Where the respondent had been guilty of such secrecy he will have to give the appellant his costs in both Courts. HORMASJI TEMULJI v. MANKUVARBAI, 12 B.H.C. 262.

(17)—Purchaser for value—Notice of actual or constructive trust.—Notice, sufficiency of.—The established doctrine of Courts of Equity is that, if a purchaser of an estate at its full value takes with notice of a trust, he is, subject to the protection afforded by the statutes of limitation, bound to the same extent and in the same manner as the person of whom he purchased; for, knowing another's right to the property he throws away his money voluntarily under his own free will. And this applies equally to a mortgagee, who is pro tanto a purchaser. The doctrine is applicable to charities in the same manner as between private persons with, it seems, an exception in favour of charities; for it has been ruled that a purchaser without a notice from a purchaser with notice shall be bound by the claim of the charity. Also, if the trustee sells the land to a bona fide purchaser without notice and, afterwards himself becomes the owner of the land, though for good and valuable consideration, the trust as to him

L.R. 326.] What is sufficient to put a purchaser upon enquiry is good notice, i.e., where a man has sufficient information to lead him to a fact, he shall be deemed cognizant of it. In equity, it is sufficient to charge a man with knowledge that he had that before him, which, if he had used due diligence, would have afforded the knowledge he desires. A person purchasing, where there is a tenant in possession, if he neglect to enquire into the title, must take subject to such rights as the tenant may have. There is no difference in principle between the possession of certain lands as the object of a charitable trust, and under the trust, and the possession of a tenant, as the duty to make inquiry, arises from the fact that the estate is not in the actual possession of the vendor. There is the same equity in both the cases. MANCHARJI SORABJI CHULLA v. KONGSEOO, 6 B.H.C.O.C. 59.

——11.—Possession.

(1)—Possession, necessity of, in case of transfers among Hindus—San-mortgage recognised in Guzerat, possession not necessary in case of —Purchaser at sale in execution—Plea of want of notice—Priority of registered over unregistered deeds—Scope of rules.—The main ground of the general rule as to the necessity of possession being given to transferees is, that it is notice to all subsequent intending mortgagees or purchasers of the title of the party in possession; and the necessity of possession being dispensed with in the case of san-mortgages prevalent in Guzerat, such a mortgage, in other respects good, is valid as against subsequent transferees whether or not such transferees have had notice of the mortgage. Consequently, a purchase in execution, without notice, of property mortgaged by a sankhat optionally registrable, unregistered and without possession, is to be treated as subject to the mortgage. To hold that a subsequent mortgagee or purchaser for valuable consideration and without notice of a san-mortgage is entitled to priority over it, would be tantamount to depriving the san-mortgage of the benefit of the custom that possession is not necessary to validate such a mortgagee. [F., 6 B. 538, F.B.; R., 20 B 158, U.B.R. 1897—1901, Vol. II, 573, 27 B. 452.] The High Court has, in the rules made by it under s. 287 of Act X of 1877, provided for notice being given to purchasers that the sale only extends to the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor, and that the Court ordering the sale does not warrant the title. Consequently a purchaser who buys at such a sale an avowedly doubtful title, and pays for it on that understanding, cannot claim to be a purchaser for value without notice. The provisions of the Registration Acts that a document which is registered shall take effect, as regards the property comprised therein, against every unregistered document relating to the same property, can only apply where the two documents are antagonistic, but not where effect can be given to each without any infringement of the other. (2)—Hindu Law—Possession in transferor whether essential to make valid transfer of property.—On the contention of the defendants in this case the lower appellate Court held that the plaintiffs' transferor, not having been in possession of the property at the time of the transfer, the plaintiffs' claim was not maintainable. The High Court, however, held that the circumstance of the absence of possession in the transferor, at the time he executed the kararnama, in question, to the plaintiffs, did not prevent the plaintiffs from seeking to obtain possession from the defendants. The texts of Hindu Law which relate to the transfer of possession in such case must be construed to have reference only to the comparative strength of a title with possession and a title without it. (3)—Hindu Law—Sale—Possession.—Under the law administered in this Presidency before the Transfer of Property Act came into force, where all was done that the parties contemplated to complete the sale, the title of the first purchaser would not be defeated in favour of the second purchaser merely by reason that the latter did, and the former did not, obtain possession. (6)—Hindu Law—Sale by vendor without possession—Purchaser not entitled to sue in ejectment—Intention to sell mere right of entry, effect of, on purchaser's rights.—The execution of a bill of sale by a Hindu vendor does not pass an estate, unless there be a transfer of possession, actual or constructive. Consequently, the sale of an estate by a person who is not in possession cannot operate as a present conveyance, nor enable the purchaser to sue in ejectment. It is, however, settled law that a Hindu, whose estate is in the possession of a trespasser or a mortgagee, may sell his right of entry, as such, or his equity of redemption, as such, and that the purchaser may thereupon sue to eject the trespasser or to redeem the mortgage; and where in the case of a bill of sale purporting, in terms, to convey the property itself, it is clear upon the face of it that the parties intended only to convey a right of entry or an equity of redemption and nothing more, the Court should not lay stress on the mere terms of the instrument, but should give effect to the intention of the parties, and recognise the purchaser's right of action. (7)—Sale of land by a Hindu vendor without possession—Conveyance of mere right of action, right of vendee under.—A Hindu vendor cannot, by a bill of sale, pass corporeal property of which he is not in possession, though he may convey a right of action, either in express terms or by the use of such language as indicates that that, and nothing else, was the intention of the bill of sale. In this case, the vendors expressly stated that they were out of possession and that the property was in the hands of a mortgagee to whom it had been mortgaged without their authority. So, what was actually contemplated was nothing more than the transfer of the right of entry although the deed professed to convey the property itself, and the vendee in the result acquired the same right of action which his vendors had, notwithstanding that the latter were not in possession at the time of the sale. means of knowledge of the previous transaction. The fact that the second deed was executed on the same day as that of the plaintiff, and possession delivered under it, does not give rise to the presumption that the subsequent purchaser colluded with the vendor to defraud the plaintiff. Transfer of possession, as the necessary complement of a contract, is essential, according to Hindu law, in order to effect an absolute change of ownership by sale. The transfer of possession may be replaced by registration or by a decree giving notice to all of the change; but in the absence of some such public indication, the only right acquired by a vendee, as by a mortgagee or donee, is one of an equitable character enforceable only against the vendor and those taking under him with notice, and not against purchasers or sub-purchasers in possession without notice, whose legal title fully acquired cannot be cancelled by the Courts, on the ground of dishonest or unconscionable means having been used in acquiring it. But in a conflict between two registered sale-deeds, executed on one and the same day, the vendee who has perfected his title by taking possession of the property must be preferred. According to the Hindu and the Muhammadan law as prevailing in Bombay, possession has been deemed to amount to notice of such title as the person in possession may have, and any other person who takes a mortgage or other charge upon, or purchases, immoveable property without ascertaining the nature of the claim of the person in possession, does so at his own risk. Ordinarily, though not always, possession in the grantee or assignee is deemed essential amongst Hindus and Muhammadans to the complete transfer of immoveable property either by gift, sale, or mortgage. Also, in the decided cases under the Indian Acts of Registration of and subsequent to 1864, which have not (as the prior enactments had done) given priority of rank to priority in registration, registration has still been treated as an equivalent for possession where the instrument earlier in date has been registered prior to the execution of the second instrument, but unaccompanied by possession. Mere registration has not, in England, been regarded as sufficient notice to subsequent transferees. The different rule prevailing in America, viz., that registration, is, in itself, constructive notice to all subsequent transferees, has been adopted by the Courts in Bombay. [Diss., 15 M. 268=2 M.L.J. 95, 23 C 790, 13 C.P.L.R. 43, 27 C. 356=4 C.W.N. 490, 7 C.W.N. 11; F., 18 B. 444, 26 B. 538, 6 Bom. It is a doctrine common to the Courts both of Law and Equity, and rests upon the ground that it would be plainly impossible that any action or suit could be brought to a successful termination if alienations pendente lite were permitted to prevail. It is immaterial whether the alienees had or had not notice of the pending proceedings for, if this were not so, there would be no certainty that the litigation would ever come to an end. (1)—Mortgage with possession—Assignment of equity of redemption by mortgagor—Notice to mortgagee if necessary—Further loan by mortgagee to original mortgagor, when assignee liable to pay up—Presumption from circumstances and conduct of assignee.—According to English Law, an assignment of an equitable estate in immoveable property will be complete without notice thereof to the owner of the legal estate. Nor is there any rule of Hindu law requiring that notice of the assignment of the equitable estate should necessarily be given to the first mortgagee in possession whose position may be considered analogous to the holder of the legal estate in English Law. In this case, the defendant had taken a mortgage with possession of certain properties. The mortgagor then sold the equity of redemption to the plaintiff who allowed the property to continue to remain in the mortgagor's name in the Collector's register. The defendant having subsequently made further advances to the mortgagor on the security of the same properties, plaintiff was held liable to pay the further advances as well before he could redeem the property from the defendants. The assignee's title might be complete in law, notwithstanding the absence of any notice of the assignment to the mortgagee, yet, upon general principles of equity, if the assignee's conduct was such as to amount to a standing by and allowing the mortgagee to make further advances to the mortgagor under the supposition that he continued to be the owner of the equity of redemption, such conduct would have the effect of giving a better equity to the mortgagee, and the mere fact of the assignee allowing the assignor's name to continue to stand in the Collector's register, would amount to such conduct on the part of the assignee. (4)—Hindu Law—Mortgage—Sale--Estoppel. —A registered mortgage of a part of ancestral estate executed by the three senior members of a joint Hindu family, the remaining member of which had disappeared, and setting forth the family necessity was presumably a valid transaction. A purchaser at execution sale of the share of the absent member attached and sold by his creditors, could take only subject to the lien already created by the mortgage, and so also every subsequent purchaser. The mere fact that the original purchaser, being the undivided son of the mortgagee, disposed of the property to another without disclosing the previous mortgage to his father, did not create any estoppel against the mortgagee, unless there was active fraud or artifice by the mortgagee directly or indirectly. (5)—Suit by prior mortgagee—Subsequent mortgagee and alienee of equity of redemption not impleaded—Redemption.—The plaintiff in this suit for possession was the purchaser in execution of a mortgage decree obtained by him. The defendant in the suit resisted him alleging possession under a registered mortgage and an assignment of the mortgagor's equity of redemption. On the question arising whether the defendant could be ousted by the plaintiff without his being allowed an opportunity to redeem the plaintiff's mortgage, it was held that because the defendant should have been impleaded by the plaintiff in his suit against the mortgagor, he could not stand in a better position than he would have been if his mortgage suit had been properly framed with the present defendant figuring as a party thereto; that is to say, the plaintiff was bound to give the defendant an opportunity of redeeming his earlier mortgage. The non-payment of the purchase-money at the time of sale makes no difference in this respect. (12)—Sale of mortgaged property, payment of advance—Entire responsibility of settling mortgage resting on purchaser — Refusal of vendor to effect mutation of names—Suit by purchaser for recovery of advance not maintainable.—A person bought certain property which had been already mortgaged to his son, under a registered sale-deed. The purchaser, after paying a small portion of the purchase money to the vendors, retained the balance for the purpose of paying the amount due on his son's mortgage. The deed of sale contained stipulations that the purchaser was to take upon himself the entire responsibility of settling with his son, the mortgagee, and that he was not under any circumstances, to be entitled to reclaim the purchase-money. The vendors, without repudiating the sale or the purchaser's title, refused to effect mutation of names in favour of the purchaser as the latter had not settled the mortgage claims. Held, in a suit by the purchaser for recovery of the purchase-money, that such a suit would not lie, as the purchaser's right and remedies are in no wise affected by the refusal of the vendors to effect mutation of names, which was not tantamount to a rescission of the completed contract of sale. When a man enters into a contract of purchase with another, and receives the purchase-money, and the contract is one which, under the law in force at the time, requires registration, he does virtually agree that he will register that contract and so enable the other party to reap all the advantages of it, and is therefore compellable to do so. to give a clear title to vendees. Part of the purchase money was left with the vendees, not as a mere deposit of the vendor's money, but for being retained as a security that the property sold should be freed from the incumbrances upon it so that the vendees may get a clear and good title. They were entitled to retain it until the vendor provided the rest of the money necessary for the discharge of the incumbrances. From the nature of the transaction it was not a deposit upon which the vendees would be liable to pay interest unless they refused or omitted to pay the money when they were informed by the vendor that he was prepared to pay the balance necessary for the clearance of the entire incumbrances. (3)—Breach of contract to sell immoveable property—Vendor's failure to furnish title-deeds—Suit by vendee for specific performance or damages—Duty of vendor to give "title free from reasonable doubt."—On agreement by the defendant to sell a house to the plaintiff, the latter had paid earnest money at the date of the contract, the balance of the price having to be paid after the execution of the sale-deed. Plaintiffs repeatedly applied to the defendant for the title-deeds relating to the house to enable them to prepare the deed of conveyance. The defendant could not give the above, as she was neither in possession nor had the control of the title-deeds. After further correspondence between the parties, plaintiff filed this suit for the specific performance of the contract of sale with small damages or for damages for the loss of the bargain in its entirety. It was argued that the case came within the principle of law that a vendor is bound to do everything that he is enabled to do by force of his own interest, and also by force of the interest of others whom he can compel to concur

(4)—Mortgage—Power of sale—Sale—Confirmation by mortgagor—Right of purchaser.—A mortgage deed contained a power of sale. In exercise of that power, the mortgagee executed a deed of sale to the defendant. The deed professed to be a conveyance in fulfilment of a previous contract of sale made by the mortgagor with the consent of the mortgagee. It was, in its commencement, and conclusion, according to the form of words usually followed when the mortgagor is the vendor, his mortgagee joining in the conveyance. But the words of conveyance were by the mortgagee alone and without any words of confirmation by the mortgagor. Held that the purchaser did not by the deed, acquire an indefeasible estate. (6)—Purchase of rights and interest of indigo concern—Purchaser entitled only to assets from date of purchase—Sale with retrospective effect.—Plaintiff sued for the assets of an indigo concern, alleging a purchase by him of the rights and interest of certain persons therein from the Official Assignee. The plaintiff did not produce any deed of sale to show his right to the indigo cash and rents existing prior to the date of his purchase, and his right to them was clearly denied on the averment of a previous sale of the indigo by the Official Assignee to certain other persons. Held, that the suit was rightly dismissed, the plaintiff having failed to prove his right to the items stated in the plaint. Nor could the plaintiff claim the indigo and rents appropriated and taken away by the agent of the Official Assignee prior to the date of the sale to the plaintiff, unless the sale of the assets was

(7)—Sale--"Milkeut" and "hukeequt"—Rights of purchaser.—Plaintiff purchased the rights and interests of a former proprietor in a village. The words used in the certificate of sale are that the purchase was of the "milkeut and hukeequt" of the former proprietor. It was admitted that that would not carry with it the rights and interests of the proprietor in his house or in any gardens attached to the house. But it was contended that it carried with it the rights to an orchard or mango tope planted by the late proprietor. Held, that the purchaser did not acquire any such rights. He obtained by his purchase only the proprietary rights. RAM JHAN GUNDEREE v. LALLA GODADHUR LALL, 3 W.R. 32. [R., 10 W.R. 212.]

(8)—Mortgage for balance of consideration—Inability of vendor to put purchaser in possession of entire property—Reduction of consideration for mortgage pro tanto—Claim to portion of property sold, by third party—Power of purchaser to compromise with claimant—Whether vendor bound by compromise--Clause in conveyance that, if damage was sustained for any other cause, vendor would not be responsible, whether sufficient to relieve vendor's liability under s. 55, sub-s. 2, Transfer of Property Act—Purchaser's claim for expense of litigation with successful claimant.—Where a purchaser takes a conveyance and, being unable to pay the whole of the consideration in cash, executes a mortgage security for the unpaid balance, and it subsequently transpires that the purchaser is entitled to a deduction from the price settled because the vendor is unable to transfer what he had agreed to sell, the consideration for the mortgage will also be reduced pro tanto. A purchaser may well compromise or refer to arbitration any adverse claim made upon him, which would be covered by the vendor's covenant of title, without giving notice to the vendor of the claim on the proceedings, and he will be entitled to recover under the covenants the amount paid or awarded to be paid by him as compensation and costs to the claimant (a). The only qualification to the rule is that, if the vendor has no notice of the claim and of the intention to compromise it, he would be at liberty to prove in defence that the claim was unfounded either wholly or partially or that he could have made better terms than the purchaser, or that the purchaser made an improvident bargain, and in these respects he would have to bear the burden of proof. His position is worse if, with notice of the claim, he declines or fails to remove or contest it himself. He cannot then even allege any such ground of defence. Therefore where the vendor was a party to the suit and quietly acquiesced in the adverse decision by the original Court, he cannot successfully turn round and contend that the compromise, which took place between the claimant and the purchaser in his presence in the appellate Court and without any protest on his part, was improvident. In a conveyance, the vendor declared that he had not made any gift, etc., of the property, and that, if on account of any such incumbrance any damage was sustained by the purchaser, the vendor would indemnify him. This was followed by a clause that, if damage was sustained from any other cause, the vendor would not be responsible therefor. Held, that this clause was not comprehensive enough to negative the liability of the vendor, which he may incur, by reason of the breach of the covenant implied, under s. 55, sub-s. 2 of the Transfer of Property Act, to the effect that the seller must be deemed to have contracted with the buyer that the interest he professed to transfer subsisted and that he had power to transfer the same. When reliance is placed upon an express contract to exclude the operation of the statute, the contract to be binding must be expressed in plain and unambiguous language; if the vendor uses expressions reasonably capable of misconstruction or if he uses ambiguous words, the purchaser may generally construe them in the manner most advantageous to himself (c). Where an action is brought against the purchaser by a person with superior title, and the former compromises by paying money, he is entitled in an action upon the covenant for title to recover the whole sum so paid and his costs, from the vendor. But this principle is inapplicable to the case where the litigation expenses he incurred were caused in a large measure by the exaggerated claim of the person with superior title, for which his vendor was in no way responsible, and he voluntarily gave up costs which in the event of ultimate success he might have been awarded, and he had realized a substantial amount as profits from the portion of the property which he obtained from his vendor though he finally lost it. Plaintiff obtained a conveyance from the missing heir of one of the old proprietors with the object of impeaching the defendant's title as purchasers. Held, that the mere fact that the sale to the plaintiff was at the instigation of a former discharged mortgagee did not of itself make it void, if the vendor to the plaintiff had some share or interest in the property by inheritance, and transferred it for valuable consideration (it would have been sufficient if a former debt due by the vendor to the plaintiff formed the whole or part of the consideration), with the intention that it should take effect as a transfer of his right as heir. Held, further, that the mere circumstance, that all the co-sharers were indebted was by no means, of itself, enough to confer authority on some only of several co-sharers to dispose of the shares of the absentee co-sharers. The goods were shipped and the insurance was effected in the name of P, and consigned to his correspondents or partners. vendee's insolvency, stop the goods sold in transitu. Agents for the purchase of goods have a lien on the goods, when purchased, for the monies paid and the liabilities incurred by them in respect to such purchase, and they are not bound to part with the possession of the goods or to deliver them until they are re-imbursed or secured for such advances and liabilities. Where the vendor is not otherwise paid than by having received the insolvent's acceptances, he may stop the goods, if the buyer had in the meantime become insolvent, though he has negotiated the bills and they are still outstanding and not yet at maturity. Whilst the goods sold remain in the hands of a carrier employed to convey them to their original destination as between buyer and seller, no case of constructive possession in the buyer arises unless where the carrier enters expressly into some new agreement distinct from the original contract for carriage. The mere acts of marking and sampling the goods, or giving notice to the carrier to hold the goods for the buyer, though done with the intention to take possession, do not establish a constructive possession in the buyer, or affect the right to stop in transitu. Where the right of stopping in transitu vests in the consignor, it cannot be defeated by any claim made upon the goods in their transit by a creditor of the consignee, as, e.g., by process of attachment at the suit of such creditor; for the vendor's right of stopping in transitu is the elder and preferential lien. (13)—Transfer of Property Act (Act IV of 1882), s. 55—Vendor and purchaser—Covenant for title—Waiver.— There was no express covenant for title in an agreement of purchase executed by the purchaser after the Transfer of Property Act came into force. The purchaser made part-payments of the purchase-money, entered into possession, effected repairs, and tried to raise money by mortgaging the property. These acts evidenced a waiver on his part of the covenant for title implied in such agreements by s. 55 of the Transfer of Property Act; and notwithstanding a notice by the purchaser that he would not be responsible to the seller for interest on the balance of the purchase-money unless the latter made out a good title, the seller was entitled to interest at the agreed rate up to date of payment with a lien on the property for the balance of the purchase-money. GHOUSIAH BEGUM v. RUSTUMJAH, 13 M. 158.

(14)— Unpaid purchase-money — Vendee giving bonds for purchase-money to vendor—Bonds unregistered—Admissibility in evidence. —Where bonds given by the vendee of certain land, in consideration for sale, to the vendor, are not registered and, as such, not admissible in evidence, the latter is not bound to rely on the bonds in order to establish a charge on the property sold as regards the purchase-money not paid to him. (15)—Mortgage—Purchase of equity of redemption—Money kept in deposit for mortgagee—Liability of vendee--Court-fees--Where a decree was passed only against the mortgaged property and the plaintiff appealed for the defendant to be made also personally liable, the Court, without laying down any general rule, considered the Court-fee paid on the memorandum of appeal, viz., Rs. 10, as sufficient. A vendee of the equity of redemption who withholds the mortgage-money from the vendor in order to pay it to the mortgagee, cannot be considered a trustee of the mortgagee, so as to become personally liable to pay the amount withheld by him to the mortgagee, and the money so withheld cannot be treated as money received for the mortgagee's use, nor can the vendee be said to be agent of the vendor. By virtue of a statement in the sale-deed that the amount is kept as 'amanat,' and the vendee will pay it to the mortgagee, he represents the mortgagor and not the mortgagee. MUHAMMAD SADIQ v. decree for sale on a puisne mortgage, and it was notified in the proclamation of sale that there were two prior mortgages on the property. The decree-holder purchased the property after obtaining the permission of the Court. Subsequently it was decided that the two mortgages were invalid. The original mortgagor, judgment-debtor, then brought the present suit to recover the amounts due on the said two mortgages as vendor's unpaid purchase-money, or as money which the decree-holder purchaser ought in equity to pay to the judgment-debtor. Held, that, on the sale of property subject to incumbrances, the vendor gets the price of his property whatever it may be, whether the sale be private or by public auction, together with an indemnity against the incumbrances affecting the property. After the purchase is completed, the vendor has no claim to participate in any benefit which the purchaser may derive from his purchase. Held, further, that there was no estoppel against the purchaser. (17)—Rights inter se—Vendor agreeing to pay back the purchase-money if there be any prior hypothecation or vendee be dispossessed—Prior usufructuary mortgagee does not come within the agreement—Vendor not liable—Sale—Agreement—Construction.—The vendors to a sale entered into an agreement with the vendee that, if by reason of a prior hypothecation or by reason of any kind of interference on the part of the vendors, any portion of the property sold went out of the possession of the vendee, the vendors would return the purchase-money in whole or in part with interest. Prior to the sale, however, the vendors had executed a registered usufructuary mortgage, by virtue of which the property passed out of the hands of the vendee: Held, that the usufructuary mortgage did not fall within the purview of the agreement. The vendors were not liable to the vendee in damages, especially when a portion of the purchase-money was still in the pocket of the vendee. The vendee must be presumed to have had notice of the registered mortgage. All that the vendors undertook to do was to put the vendee in such possession as they had, namely, proprietary possession. This was subject to the possession of any prior mortgagee who was already in possession. MUSAMMAT MUMTAZ-UN-NISA v. BHAGIRATH, 6 Ind. Cas. 114.

(20)—Purchased goods consigned through Railway—Goods receipt note issued by Railway authorities, not an instrument of title within s. 103 of the Contract Act--Endorsee of Railway receipt, extent of rights of.—The G.I.P. Railway Company brought this interpleader suit to determine the title to certain goods in their hands, over whoh the first defendant claimed to exercise his right of stoppage as the unpaid vendor of the insolvent consignee and, of which the second defendant claimed delivery as the holder of the Railway receipt issued for the goods and endorsed to him by the consignee to secure an advance made on it. On a reference of several questions made by the Chief Judge of the Bombay Court of Small Causes, the High Court held that the handing over to the consignee's agent, by the first defendant, of the receipt issued by the Railway authorities at the latter's place of business could not be deemed to amount to such a delivery of the goods to the consignee as to deprive the first defendant, his vendor, of his right of stoppage in transitu when the goods remained in the custody of the Railway Company before delivery of them over by the Company to the consignee. Nor was the Railway receipt, in the form in which it was issued, an instrument of title within the meaning of s. 103 of the Indian Contract Act. The language of the receipt did not indicate any authority to the assignee by endorsement to so claim and receive the goods as to exclude the vendor's right of stoppage in transitu. As regards a portion of the goods, however, which had arrived at its destination and had been loaded by the assignee into carts with a view to carry them off, but which the Railway servants subsequently refused to allow to be taken out of the station yard, in consequence of a telegram from the vendor to stop them, the Court held that the delivery into the carts determined the vendor's right of stoppage in transit, since there was no sufficient notice to the carriers under s. 105 of the Contract Act, as such time and under such circumstances that they might have communicated it to their servants in time so as to have prevented a delivery to the buyer. (21)—Contract of sale—Delivery by passing a lease—Sale becomes complete—Vendor can sue only for money—Order in possessory suit dissolved by a subsequent contract of sale between the parties—Suit to enforce such a contract—Limitation Act, sch. II, art. 47.—The defendant sold land to the plaintiffs and delivered possession thereof by passing a lease for it to the plaintiffs. Held that the sale was a completed transaction, even though the purchase-money was not paid, and the only remedy of the defendant was to sue for the amount. A contract of sale between parties, subsequent to the order of a Mamlatdar in a possessory suit, regarding the property in dispute, dissolves the order of the Mamlatdar and renders it unnecessary to sue to set it aside. A suit to enforce such a contract of sale is not time-barred by reason of not being brought within three years of the date of the order of the Mamlatdar. SAGAJI v. NAMDEV, 1 Bom. The Government like any other seller may impose whatever conditions it pleases, in reference to property which it offers for sale, prior to the sale; but when it has expressly stated that it will not allow a particular objection to operate, it is not at liberty subsequently to the sale to impose a condition on the sale not only novel but directly at variance with the terms under which it offered the property for sale. (1)—Caveat emptor—Warranty of title—Purchaser's duty.—According to the rule of caveat emptor, the buyer is bound by law to take care of himself; he is bound to see that what he buys he buys after satisfying himself that there is a good title. If a person choses to buy property without looking into the title, he does so at his own risk, and the law will not help him to set aside his bargain. If a deed of purchase has been once executed, unless there is an eviction by the vendor or some person claiming under him, there is no right of action against the vendor and the purchaser is without remedy. (3)—Doubt as to plot sold—Alteration in registered deed—Duty of Court.—Improper registration by a Registrar could not afford any presumption of fraud against the parties to a deed, nor could fraud be imputed from the mere fact of a deed containing additions, before some conclusions have been arrived at as to the circumstances under which they may have been made. Where the defendant alleged that the plot of land sold was not that sued for, but some other different plot, though the number and extent given of the land were those of the land sued for, but the other descriptions of the plot tallied with what was alleged to be sold, but for some addition to the description which, the defendant alleged, was made by the Registration officer and the plaintiff colluding with each other, held that it was important for the decision of the case to find out when and by whom the additions were made, and that the case should be remanded to the lower appellate Court for deciding that point. (4)—Purchase in consideration of covenant—Purchase in consideration of sum of money.—A conveyance or sale in consideration of a covenant to pay a sum of money in the future is different from a sale in consideration of money which the purchaser covenants to pay. The distinction between the two may seem fine, but it is a real distinction. The latter gives rise to a charge while the former does not. WEBB v. (7)—Creation of lien—Title—Notice of charge—English law as to right of bona fide purchaser for value without notice.—By contract and deposit of title-deeds, B charged certain land in favour of A as a security in respect of the non-delivery of the title-deeds of an estate bought by A from him. After the creation of this charge, the land was transferred by B to C. The Sudder Court having decided that the contract was not operative as an hypothecation or pledge, even between the parties to it and that A had no right of suit against C, to whom the land had been transferred: Held by the Privy Council, reversing that decision, that the agreement created a lien on the land, and that no positive law was shown to forbid giving effect to such agreement. The owner of property subject to a lien or charge can in general convey to another no title higher or more free than his own; it lies always on a succeeding owner to make out a case to defend such prior charge. The law in India does not enable a purchaser of land to look only to the apparent title in the Collector's books, or the presumed title of the owner in possession; and it is beyond the province of a Court of justice to give effect to the title of such a purchaser to the extent of defeating a prior lien or charge conceding that a purchaser for value bona fide, and without notice of the charge, would have an equity superior to A's right. Held that a purchase in good faith by C had not been proved. If the English doctrine on this subject be adopted, as the rule prescribed by justice, equity, and good conscience, its qualifications and restrictions should not be rejected. VARDENSETH RAM v. (10)—Contract—Consideration to be paid to vendor's creditor—Failure — Damages.—A vendee's failure to pay the purchase-money to the vendor's creditor according to the stipulations in the contract between them, cannot give rise to a cause of action for the vendor to sue the vendee for damages. The vendor in order to maintain a suit must prove special damage. The mere execution by the vendor of a promissory note for interest due to his creditor subsequent to the sale, without actual payment, is not proof of such damage. DORASAMI TEVAR v. (16)—Vendor under a registered deed of sale—Deed of sale remained with vendor—Want of possession—Failure of consideration—Intention to transfer not given effect to—Subsequent sale to temple under registered deed.—S executed and registered a sale-deed in respect of a house in favour of first defendant: but neither the deed of sale nor possession of the house passed to the first defendant, the vendor having retained with himself both the deed and the possession of the house. Subsequently, S sold the house to a temple, and attorned to the temple authorities as a tenant. He was in possession as a tenant till his death. Since his death, the first defendant, the vendee, under the first deed of sale, got possession of the property, the subject of the first sale. The temple authorities now sued for possession basing their title on the sale-deed by S in favour of the temple. The first defendant contended that the first sale in his favour was for cash paid as consideration. This fact was found against him. Plaintiffs contended that the sale in favour of S was not given effect to. It was found that the sale was in consideration of S's marrying first defendant's daughter, and that the marriage having fallen through, the sale did not take effect. Held, that, the transfer having been intended to be effected only in the event of the marriage taking place, and the marriage having fallen through, the intention to sell was not carried out and no property passed to the first defendant. (17 M. 146, R.) Held, further, that though the handing over of the sale-deed after registration was not necessary to vest the property in the vendee, it could not be laid down as a general rule that mere registration of an instrument operates to transfer the property. (17)—Transfer of proprietary right when vendor undertakes to pay land revenue—Recovery of sum due on account of land-revenue, suit for, by lambardar against co-sharer—Covenants affirmative and restrictive—Covenant annexed to the ownership of the property sold by the vendor—Transfer of Property Act, s. 40.—In November 1896, S sold some plots of land included in his share in a village to the respondent. In the sale-deed it was stated that four plots of the land sold were bila lagani and one of the stipulation was "if in the present settlement any revenue be assessed upon and become payable in respect of these four plots, the purchaser shall have no concern with it. I will pay it myself the purchaser and his heirs will hold the land free of revenue." In January 1900 S sold the remainder of his share to the appellant. In the sale-deed there was no mention whatever of the sale to the respondent or of the stipulations set out above. At the recent settlement the plots held by the respondent were formed into a "sub-patti" and assessed at Rs. 6. The appellant sued the respondent for recovery of Rs. 7-8-7 alleged to be due on account of land-revenue, lambardari dues, etc. The respondent contended that he was an under-proprietor not the proprietor of the land and therefore not a co-sharer of the appellant and further that the appellant was bound by the agreement made between the respondent and the vendor. The equitable doctrine is that a person who takes with notice of a covenant is bound by it, but this applies only to restrictive and not to affirmative covenants. Held, therefore, that the vendor's covenant was distinctly affirmative, not restrictive and was not binding upon the appellant. Held, that the vendor had parted with all his rights in respect of the land sold to the respondent, who became full proprietor thereof, and that the existence of an agreement by the vendor that he would pay any revenue that might be assessed on the land could not affect the completeness of the transfer of proprietary right. Held, further, that the vendor's agreement to pay the revenue was not binding upon the appellant. It was not a covenant of a restrictive character nor was it annexed to the land transferred to the appellant; therefore s. 40 of the Transfer of Property Act did not apply. RAMADHIN DITCHIT v. Subsequent to the sale, an arbitration, to which the vendee was not a party, took place between the widow and certain other persons, and the award gave to those persons the one-third share which remained with the widow, and decided that the deed of sale should be treated and considered as a good transfer of the other two-thirds. Held that the award confirmed and ratified the title and act of the widow vendor and, that the vendee, though not a party to the award, could rely on it as estopping the other parties from denying his vendor's title as between them and her, and an answer to any case which they might set up in question of his title. They sued on their mortgage and got a decree, and, in execution thereof, attached the property in dispute. A claim petition by the plaintiffs was dismissed on the ground that the sale-deed was fictitious, and hence the present suit. Held that the defendants were competent to show, if they could, that the sale made a few days before the mortgage was fictitious and that possession never left their mortgagor, and, that, even supposing that the defendants had means of knowledge of the prior sale, owing to the fact that the deed was registered one, they were in no way hindered in the suit by that knowledge from pleading the fictitious character of the deed. (25)—Sale—Counter agreement for redemption —Mortgage—Condition against alienation.—(By the Full Bench, Stuart, C.J. doubting).—Where simultaneously with a sale, the vendee executes an agreement that the vendor might redeem, within a certain time, on repayment of the purchase-money, provided such money was paid out of his own pocket and was not raised by a transfer of the property, the transaction, reading the two documents together, is one of mortgage, and not of sale; the vendor would have a right to redeem the property; and the condition against alienation is inequitable and incapable of enforcement either against the vendor or his representatives in title. Per Pearson, J.—The vendor did not bind himself, after the conversion of the sale into a redeemable mortgage, not to alienate the property, and a transfer is not positively, but only implicitly prohibited, by the terms used in the instrument executed by the vendee. What the vendee says is, that he will not recognise the transferee as having acquired, by the purchase, the equity of redemption, or cancel his own sale-deed. Such a declaration appears to be beyond his legal competence and to be of no effect. RAM SARAN LAL v. AMIRTA KUAR, 3 A. 369, F.B. (N.W.P. 1866—1867, p. 7, F.B., F.) [R., 131 P. (28)—*Deed of conditional sale—Beng. Reg. XV of 1793 — Beng. Reg. XV of 1793 did not operate to prevent the assignment becoming absolute after the expiration of the time limited for repayment of the consideration, and that Reg. XVII of 1806 had not a retrospective effect, and therefore did not apply; and that, even if the entire amount of the purchase-money were satisfied out of the proceeds of estate before the time for the conditional sale becoming absolute, the vendees would acquire a perfect title. (31)—Sale-deed—Agreement by vendees—Pre-emptor refusing to accept obligations of—Party to agreement.—A vendor when he sold his property obtained from the vendees a deed of agreement in his favour which together with the sale-deed were duly registered. The defendant (who as co-sharer got the sale deed cancelled by right of pre-emption) was put in possession of the property. He refused to accept the obligation of the agreement by the vendees in favour of the vendor. The vendor sued the pre-emptor to enforce the agreement. Held, that the right of pre-emption is merely a perterential right entitling a co-sharer to come in before a stranger to purchase, but clearly entitling him only to purchase on the same conditions as were bona fide offered by the stranger and accepted by the vendor under the original contract between them; the fact that he was not personally a party to the agreement which the vendor seeks to enforce is immaterial, that the agreement, always provided that it was bona fide and real, is a part of the consideration of the sale, the obligations of which the defendant is clearly bound to accept and from which, unless he can show that it is vitiated by fraud or collusion, he cannot be exonerated. KHAIT SINGH v. HEERA DASS, 1 Agra 78.

(32)—Sale of immoveable property — Effect on sale of subsequent agreement to reconvey—Pre-emption.—An absolute transfer by sale of a share in a village vests the property completely in the vendee, inclusive of all the rights appurtenant and incident to the ownership of a share; and the rights of the vendee are in no way affected by the option given by the vendor to the vendee to re-purchase the property in a given time, until such option is actually exercised. Therefore, so long as the option is not exercised by the vendor the vendee can assert and enforce a right of pre-emption attaching to his ownership of the share purchased by him. BHAJAN v. In this case, the Chief Court followed the rule contained in s. 51 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), though the Act was not in force in the Punjab, as they thought that the rule was equitable and was in accordance with practice which, in the absence of express agreement to the contrary, usually obtained in the province, when the right to possession of cultivated land was transferred from one person to another. BAKIR ALI v. BELI RAM, 36 P. R. 1883.

(34)—Limitation—Pre-emption — Sale and subsequent agreement for re-purchase.—A sold a certain share in a zemindari to B. C, a co-sharer, thereupon brought a suit for pre-emption of that share. During the pendency of the suit, A, B and C entered into a registered agreement that, on payment to B of the price paid by him at a fixed time in any year by either A or C, he should reconvey the share. Sometime after, A purporting to treat the transaction as a mortgage by conditional sale, applied under s. 83 of the Transfer of Property Act, paying the price into Court for a re-conveyance of the property to him. On B's refusing to take the amount, A applied for re-payment to him of the said money, stating that B may be in possession and that the said agreement may be treated as void. Sometime afterwards D filed a suit for pre-emption of the same property. The question was whether the limitation for this later pre-emptive suit was to be calculated from the date of the sale or from the date of the last application of A to treat the agreement as void. Held that the original sale was absolute, and it was not and could not be converted into a mortgage by conditional sale by the subsequent agreement, and that therefore limitation was to be calculated from the date of the original sale. On appeal by the plaintiff, a preliminary objection was taken as to the non-payment of the sum into Court as directed by the decree. It was contended that the suit stood dismissed with costs under s. 214 of the

Civ. Pro. Code, that the decree had become void by reason of s. 18 of the Punjab Laws Act and that the decree-holder had lost his right of pre-emption so far as related to the sale in dispute. Held, that, although it was held in 70 P.R. 1890 that non-compliance with the direction in the decree of the Divisional Judge was not fatal to the further prosecution of the appeal, and that ss. 17 and 18 of the Punjab Laws Act, 1872, did not extend to a Court of appeal as regards suits for pre-emption on a sale, they applied to a Court of first instance, so that, under s. 17, plaintiff's decree in the present suit had become void. (39)—Sale of zamindari share—Tanks—Joint property—Wajib-ul-arz.—The plaintiffs and the second set of defendants were the proprietors of a one-anna four-pies share in a five-annas four pies thoke in a certain village. In this thoke there were two tanks which had been excavated by F, the common ancestor of the plaintiffs and the second set of defendants. The latter who held a seven-pies share in the thoke conveyed four pies of this share to the first set of defendants with all the zamindari rights and interests appertaining to the same. The purchasers having used the tanks for irrigating their fields, the plaintiffs brought the present suit against them and their vendors to restrain them from using the tanks for that purpose. They alleged that the tanks were the exclusive property of the family of F; that this had been declared in the Wajib-ul-arz, and that, as the tanks were the undivided property of the family, an alienation of his interest therein by one member, without the consent of the other members, was invalid. The question therefore was, whether the rights held by the vendors in the two tanks were distinct from and independent of their zamindari rights, or of such a nature as would render them inalienable. It was found that the tanks were dug by F, the common ancestor referred to above, but the land was the common property of the village, and all that the wajib-ul-arz provided was that the co-sharer who excavated the tanks should have the right of irrigation therefrom, and that the other co-sharers should not be at liberty to irrigate their lands from such tanks without his permission. It was found also that, at the time of the sale to the first set of defendants, the second set of defendants did not form members of one and the same joint family with the plaintiffs, but that they held their seven-pies share separately. Held that the condition in the wajib-ul-arz fell far short of showing, either that the tanks were to be the exclusive property of the co-sharer who dug them, or that they should form a kind of property wholly irrespective and independent of the zamindari rights of such co-sharer; and that, although the share in the tanks of the second set of defendants may not have been specified by metes and bounds, still this circumstance alone was not sufficient to subject them to the rules which govern the shares of the members of a joint Hindu family as to alienation. Plaintiff's suit was accordingly dismissed. BINDESHRI PRASAD v. BHAWANI DIN, A.W.N. 1884, 211.

(2)—Voluntary payment on behalf of another—Re-imbursement.—Where the plaintiff ceased to be the owner of an estate which had passed into the hands of the defendant and, on the latter's failure to pay the Government revenue on it, the revenue authorities enforced payment from the plaintiff, as mutation of names had not been effected, held that the plaintiff could not recover the amount from the defendant, as the payment was not made at the defendant's request, express or implied, and as the plaintiff was not bound in law to make the payment of the revenue due on the defendant's estate. CHUNIA v. KUNDAN LAL, A.W.N. 1882, 150.

(3)—Payment of assessment by Talukdar under protest—Right of Talukdar to sue.—Plaintiff, the Thakor of Limbdi, held several villages in the Ahmedabad District. Litigation carried on between the Thakor and the grassias of one of the villages resulted in a compromise, and, carrying out the decree passed in pursuance of the compromise, a moiety of the village was handed over to the grassias. On the Government demanding jamabandi for that moiety, the Thakor objected, on the ground that he was paying a lump jama for the whole of his Taluka, including the above half of the village assigned to the grassias. The Government however, passed a resolution that that half belonged to the grassias but that they were willing to take the jama imposed on that moiety from the hands of the Thakor. He therefore paid the same for two years under protest, and then brought this suit to recover the same and for a declaration that the village was included in his Taluka and so not liable to any separate jamabandi assessment. The lower Court dismissed the suit finding on a preliminary issue regarding the question of cause of action that plaintiff had no cause of action against Government in respect of the village and that plaintiff had voluntarily paid the jama and could not therefore sue to recover it. Upholding the objections taken on appeal, viz., that the payment of the jama by the Thakor was not voluntary because he, as talukdar of the whole village, had an ultimate interest in the assessment of any part thereof and that therefore he had paid, under protest, the demand made by the Government on the grassias to prevent that moiety being put up for sale, the High Court reversed the decree of the lower Court, and, holding that the suit was maintainable, remanded the suit for trial on the merits. (6)—S. 69, I.C.A., 1872—Voluntary payment —Interest at the time of payment sufficient—S. 14, Reg. VIII of 1819 (Putni), scope of.—S. 69, I.C.A., does not require that the person, who made the payment, should have done anything actively to keep up the interest which he claims. All that is required is that the payment should be made by a person, who is interested in the payment. A payment of rent by the purchaser of a putni taluq, during the pendency of an appeal for setting aside the putni sale, is not a voluntary payment, as the purchaser is a person "interested" in the payment of the money under s. 69. (25 C. 305, F.) And the remedy, which he has under s. 69, is not in the event of the sale being set aside, curtailed by s. 14, Reg. VIII of 1819. RADHA MADHUB SAMONTA v. SASTI RAM SEN, 26 C. 826. [D., 7 O. C. 146, 11 O. C. 279.]

(7)—Ss. 69, 70, Contract Act—Arrears of rent due on tenure at time of sale, paid by execution-purchaser—Liability of tenure-holder—Privity of contract—Charge.—Rent is, by operation of law, the first charge on a tenure, and a person who purchases the same at an execution-sale must, in the absence of anything to denote the contrary, be taken to purchase it, charged with the rent which was due in respect of it at the time of its purchase, and there being no privity between him and the judgment-debtor, he cannot recover from the latter the money which he is obliged to pay for the rent so due at the time of the purchase. Hence, a plaintiff—the purchaser of the tenure mortgaged, in execution of a mortgaged decree—who pays the money due under a decree obtained by the landlord against the tenure-holder, for arrears of rent, for the period anterior to the confirmation of sale, is not entitled to recover the money paid by him for satisfying the rent-decree. (9)—Voluntary payment—Assignee of portion of claim made co-defendant.—A payment made by a judgment-debtor, not to the decree-holder but to a person who is said to have obtained an assignment of a portion of the plaintiff's claim and who is therefore made a pro forma party a (co-defendant) in the suit, and who has not asserted his rights in the suit and no decree is given in his favour, is a purely gratuitous act which cannot defeat the rights of the decree-holder. KANOONGOE BUKTESHUR v. RAJAH CHUNDER SEEKHUR, W.R. 1864, Mis. 8.

(10)—Voluntary payment—Deposit in Court.—Where money was deposited in Court by a judgment-debtor under protest for the purpose of preventing an injurious sale, and the depositor, declaring his intention to bring a regular suit to set aside the summary order rejecting his claim, prayed that the sum might be paid to the decree-holder, and the sale stayed, the payment was held not to be a voluntary payment. (11)—Voluntary payment—Money paid for benefit of another—Interest at the time of payment sufficient—Position of party taking possession under order of Court.—A party's taking possession of property under a decree or order of Court though such decree or order is afterwards set aside, is not wrongful seizure. The proposition, that a person who is in wrongful possession is not entitled to recover sums spent on account of outgoings, is not a proposition of law admitting of no exception. For, it seems to be common justice that, when a proprietor in good faith, pending litigation, makes the necessary payment for the preservation of the estate in dispute, and the estate is afterwards adjudged to his opponent, he should be recouped what he has so paid, by the person who ultimately benefits by the payment, if he has paid, through no fault of his, to reimburse himself out of the rents. He is bound to account for mesne profits for all rents and profits which he has received, or which without wilful default he might have received. But if owing to circumstances beyond his control, and still more if in consequence of some wrongful conduct on the part of his opponent, he has received less than what he has had to pay for the preservation of the estate, it would seem to be in accordance with justice, equity, and good conscience,—there being no specific rule to the contrary—that he should recover the difference on the final adjustment of accounts. The claim, here, is in the nature of salvage, and the law relating to sales for arrears of Government revenue recognises an equity to re-payment in the case of a person who, not being a proprietor pays the Government revenue in good faith to protect a claim which afterwards turns out to be unfounded. 10, R.) Estoppel and waiver in such a matter are questions of conduct and must necessarily be determined on the particular circumstances of each case. If each of the parties has by his acts intentionally caused the other to believe that the payment was a regular satisfaction of the obligation, and the parties have acted on that belief, neither can afterwards deny the regularity. In a case where the exiguity of a debt depends on two consecutive defaults, a creditor might reasonably be willing to waive the first of them on condition that it was not repeated. A default, once condoned by a waiver, will not, in the absence of express agreement, be revived by the occurrence of any succeeding default. There could be a waiver of contractual as well as decretal rights. BALLABDHAS v. DALIP SINGH, 7 N.L.R. 147. (1 B. 125, 2 B. 356, R.)

(9)—Waiver, acceptance of overdue instalments.—Though there may be a failure to pay punctually under an instalment decree, still the subsequent conduct of the parties may preclude either of them from afterwards asserting that the payment was not made regularly and in satisfaction of the obligation under the decree. The question whether payment and acceptance of overdue instalments cannot by themselves form waiver is one to be determined on the circumstances of each case. KASHIRAM v. PANDU, 4 Bom. (10)—Bond payable by instalments—Provision to pay entire sum in case of default of any one instalment—Subsequent acceptance of instalments—No right to claim entire sum.—Where a bond payable by instalments provided that on failure to pay any instalment the whole sum secured by the bond should be at once recoverable and the obligor failed to pay some of the instalments as they fall due but the obligee received payment thereafter instead of requiring payment of the entire sum secured by the bond, the subsequent acceptance of instalments constituted a waiver of the obligee's right to claim the entire sum. (11)—Instalment bond—Payment after default—Intention of parties necessary factor in determining waiver.—Where a bond payable by instalments provided that, on default in the payment of any one instalment, the whole sum in one lump was to be payable without the objection of the remaining instalments not falling due, the obligee cannot set up a payment after default as constituting a waiver, unless he is in a position to show that such payment was intended as a payment of a particular instalment and was accepted as such. rule, that, where an instalment bond gives the creditor the right to sue for the whole amount on default of payment of a single instalment, there is no waiver of that right by acceptance of part of an overdue instalment or by receipt of interest. The ruling in 31 C. 83 is an obiter dictum. The question of waiver is a question of fact to be determined according to the circumstances of each particular case. OSMAN SHAHA v. MAHOMED AMAR SIRKAR, 9 Ind. Cas. 22.

(13)—Instalments — Default in payment.—The plaintiff agreed, in 1901, to sell to the defendant his lands for Rs. 1,000, and put the latter in possession. The terms of the contract were, (1) that the purchase-money should be paid annually by instalments of Rs. 100 each on certain fixed dates; (2) that, in case of default in the payment of the first instalment on the due date, the plaintiff should be entitled to recover it as rent and sue for possession of the lands; (3) that, in case of default in the payment of any three or four subsequent instalments on the due dates, the plaintiff should be entitled to recover possession of the lands and claim the unpaid instalments as rent; and (4) that, on payment of all the instalments, the title to the land should be treated as having passed to the defendant by sale, but that in the meantime the plaintiff should continue owner thereof. The plaintiff sued for possession of the lands, alleging default in the payment of the instalments of 1904, 1905 and 1906. The lower Courts, finding that there had been waiver by the plaintiff as regards the first two instalments and probably as regards the third also, dismissed the suit. On appeal: Held, that, as to the first three instalments, the plaintiff dealt with the defendant in such a way as to show that he did not insist on payment on the dates fixed in the contract; and that, after that course of conduct, he was not warranted in enforcing payment according to the strict terms of the contract without previous intimation to the defendant to that effect. CHAGAN CHUNILAL v. SUKU BARKU. 13 Bom. L.R. 891.

(14)—Omission to claim interest—Pleading.—Both parties stipulated for payment of rent on certain dates, and, if not so paid, of a certain rate of interest until paid. The rent not having been paid at the time agreed on: Held that the landlord's omission to claim interest, instalment by instalment, for the fractional time that the rent was not paid after it became due, did not justify the plea that the interest stipulated for was not due, or warrant the belief that the plaintiff had waived his claim to interest. RUTTY KANT BOSE v. GUNGADHUR BISWAS, W.R. F.B. 13=1 Ind. Jur. O.S. 6 =Marsh 40.

(15)—Waiver of right to interest on arrears of rent—Receipt of arrears of rent for long time without interest.—By the terms of a kabuliat, rent not paid when due was to bear interest. The zemindar received rent for a period of ten years without making any demand of interest in respect of arrears, and without claiming to apply any portion of the payments towards the discharge of interest. Having subsequently brought a suit for interest, the Courts below were of opinion that the zemindar had waived his claim to interest and dismissed his suit. Held, that there were facts justifying such an inference, and that their finding could not be reviewed in special appeal. DINDOYAL PORAMANICK v. PRAN KISHEN PAUL CHOWDHRY, Marsh 394=W.R.F.B. 117=2 Hay 423.

(16)—Interest—Omission to claim interest on arrears of rent, in the past, whether waiver.—The mere omission to claim interest for past years from a tenant at the stipulated rate, cannot amount to a waiver of the landlord's right to claim interest at that rate. SHYAMA CHARAN MANDAL v. HERAS MOLLAH, 26 C. 160. (5 C. 102, F.)

(17)—Renunciation, nature and effect of—Mutual mistake, relief against.—There may be a valid renunciation of rights by general expressions, but it is natural and obvious that they cannot be held to embrace rights of which the existence was in fact unknown or of which it cannot be, with certainty, made out that the author of the expressions was thinking. It would be puerile to assume an intent to renounce rights of which the very existence was ex concesso unknown. The mere acting as if a rule of law existed which did not exist will not make that law which is not law. And a man is at liberty to insist upon his rights unless he has lost them by renunciation, compromise, or by force of a rule of law. A man may, no doubt, by an agreement operating as a compromise or mutual arrangement, preclude himself from afterwards setting up a right which at the time he did not consider that he possessed but only when it would be in some way against the true effect of the agreement to set up the right, in other words, when it appears to have been the object of the arrangement to preclude an after-claim of the kind. Where the case is one of an arrangement come to under a mutual mistake, against such an agreement as a bar to his after discovered claim a party is equitably entited to relief. SUBBIEN PILLAY v. ARNACHALA IRUNGOL PILLAY, 5 M.H.C. 444. [R., 14 M.L.J. 175, 14 M.L.J. 415, F.B., 28 M. 182.]

(18)—Omission to raise defence in prior suit, bar to subsequent suit based on such point.—One J sued her husband's brother's wife K, as owner by right of inheritance, to recover the property of her deceased husband, and in that suit K resisted J's claim on the ground of her preferable right to inherit. Having failed in that suit, K subsequently sued to recover half of the property on the basis of a family agreement made between her and J's deceased husband. This agreement was designedly suppressed at the period of the former suit. Held that the suit must be dismissed, that K now insisted upon a valid family compact varying the ordinary rules of inheritance, having previously appealed to those general rules litigated the matter through these Courts, designedly keeping back the compact upon which she now sought to insist, and that there could be no stronger case of an absolute waiver of that contract and of conduct rendering it wholly inequitable to permit her now to insist upon it (b). Semble :—Where a defendant has been sued by a plaintiff upon his right of ownership, the plaintiff's recovery negatives all grounds of defence to that action then existent and within the plaintiff's knowledge. (19)—Withdrawal of original plaintiff—Substitution of new one.—Though the substitution by the Court of the purchaser of the original plaintiff's rights in the place of the latter, was irregular, still, such irregularity was held to be cured by the consent of the defendant as was evidenced by his conduct in offering no opposition to what took place in the first Court, and in actually appealing against the judgment on the merits, making the substituted plaintiff one of the respondents. BEER CHUNDER ROY v. SHAIKH TUMEEZOODDEEN, 12 W.R. 87. (9 W.R. 487, D.)

(21)—Order of Court directing adjustment of account between parties—Objection to account not taken in time—Effect.—Where a Court directed an Ameen to adjust the account between the parties to a suit according to the account given in by the defendant, and the plaintiff took no exception to it either when the Court ordered the accounts to be taken or when the report was filed by the Ameen, and the accounts were moreover taken in the plaintiff's presence, held, the lower appellate Court ought not to have disallowed the sums debited in the account, because the defendant had failed to prove each item mentioned in his account. KANTEE CHUNDER DUTT v. GOPEE MADHUB NEOGEE, 11 W.R. 3.

(22)—Mesne profits—Claim of judgment-debtor for deduction when to be made—Execution.—If a judgment-debtor who has been decreed to pay mesne profits claims a deduction on account of Government revenue which he has paid, he should, when called upon by the executing Court to show cause why he should not pay the amount of mesne profits claimed by the decree-holder, bring forward that objection and make good his claim. If he fails to do so, the appellate Court will not interfere. NUBO COOMAR CHATTERJEE v. RAMDHUN CHATTERJEE, 15 W.R. 266.

(23)—Purchase of zemindari rights by Government—Purchaser at sale of such rights by Government—Settlement by Government with taluqdars—Position of purchaser and taluqdars.—The Government, under its rights of purchase in auction of the zemindari rights of certain pergunnahs, not only waived its rights to cancel the tenures of the talookdars but actually admitted them to settlement, held out to them a promise of renewal, and at the time when it disposed of its zemindari rights to the defendants, recorded a resolution on a petition presented on behalf of the talookdars, that nothing was sold by the zemindari rights and that the taluqdari rights, whatever they might be, would be respected. The High Court was, under the circumstances, of opinion that the defendant, the purchaser, was bound to respect the intentions of Government and could not claim to put in force any rights which his vendor, the Government, had actually waived, and was, consequently, bound to respect the tenures of the plaintiff, a taluqdar, and of persons in his position. OBHOY CHURN ROY v. RAJAH ASANOOLAH, 2 W.R. Act X, Rul. 81. [Affirmed, 13 M.I.A. 317.]

(24)—Execution sale—Proclamation.—When the Court adjourned an execution sale and it was not at the request of the judgment-debtor, though it may have been in his interest, it was held that there should be a strict compliance with the law that requires thirty days to elapse between the proclamation and the sale. The mere application on date of sale by the judgment-debtor that only a share of the property should be sold on the ground that the proceeds would be enough to satisfy the decree, cannot amount to a waiver of the proclamation. (26)—Execution of decree—Inconvenience to decree-holder—Waiver.—H obtained a decree against K ordering the latter to reconstruct a verandah in the family house which had been improperly pulled down by him, within one month of the date of final orders according to a certain estimate. The decree also provided that in default, H was to have the right of rebuilding the verandah himself and be reimbursed by K, the expense not exceeding the estimate. K commenced the work more than a month after the final orders. More than one month after such commencement H procured an injunction forbidding K from proceeding with the repairs on the ground that he was not making them in accordance with the decree. K objected and pleaded necessity. Held that in making alterations which caused inconvenience to H, K had contravened the decretal order. Held, however, that H's conduct in looking on without remonstrance for a month while K was incurring considerable expense amounted to a waiver on his part of his right to take the matters into his own hands. Held, further, that nothing could be decreed which is impossible of execution. Although K as the original wrong-doer has no claim to be exempted from any consequence of his acts, still if, in doing what the decree supposed to be possible and which H declares is possible, damage is done to the premises, the debtor, K, after what he has done, ought to be held free from further liability. GOPEE KISHEN GOSSAIN v. HEM CHUNDER GOSSAIN, 16 W.R. 38.

(27)—Civ. Pro. Code, ss. 244, 291, and 311—Execution sale brought about by fraud—Waiver of right to object to sale—Plea of waiver when to be given effect to and to what extent—Public policy—Circumstances from which waiver to be inferred—Knowledge of rights waived, necessity of proving—Burden of proof—Presumption.—A waiver is an intentional relinquishment of a known right, or such conduct as warrants an inference of the relinquishment of such right, and there can be no waiver, unless the person against whom the waiver is claimed had full knowledge of his rights and of the facts, which would enable him to take effectual action for the enforcement of such rights. The burden of proof of such knowledge is on the person who relies on the waiver, and such knowledge must be made to appear. A presumption of waiver cannot be rested on a presumption that the right alleged to have been waived was known. When it appeared from the proceedings that a judgment-debtor only waived objections to an execution sale, on the ground of (1) non-issue of fresh sale-proclamations when the sale was adjourned from time to time, and (2) inadequacy of price as resulting therefrom, held—that this did not prevent him from attacking the sale on the ground (1) that the sale proclamation had never been issued and had been fraudulently suppressed at the decree-holder's instance and (2) that the price realised was inadequate by reason of the decree-holder's fraud. Whether there has been a waiver or not of the rights of a judgment-debtor to object to a sale and to what extent they may have been waived must depend upon the circumstances of each individual case; and the question has to be decided, not merely upon the language of the petitions preferred by the judgment-debtor, but with regard to the whole of the proceedings in the case, and particularly with reference to the order made by the Court upon the petitions. The right of waiver is subject to the control of public policy, which cannot be contravened by any conduct or agreement of the parties; and an agreement which seeks to waive an illegality may be void on grounds of public policy or morality. Quære—Whether, if it were made out that the judgment-debtors had, in fact, waived all possible rights to object to the validity of the sale, a Court of justice would give effect to the plea of waiver, when the sale was brought about by fraud upon the processes of the Court. (28)—Execution of decree—Consent decree in mortgage suit—Decretal amount to be paid by instalments—Whole amount to become due in default—Default by defendant—Overdue instalments received by decree-holder — Effect—Waiver.—A consent-decree in a mortgage suit provided for payment of the decretal amount by annual instalments of Rs. 50, payable on the 30th April of each year, and for the realization of the full amount due under the decree from the mortgaged property in default of payment of any one instalment. The 1st instalment became due on 30-4-1888, and the defendants having made default, the decree-holder took out execution and got an order for sale of the mortgaged property. But the sale was dropped on the judgment-debtor having paid Rs. 60 to the decree-holder out of Court on 13-11-1888 and the latter notifying the same to the Court. The second instalment also was not paid on the due date (30-4-1889), but subsequent to that date and before the date of the third instalment, several payments were made to the decree-holder amounting in all to Rs.53. After the third instalment became due, the latter took out execution for recovering the balance due under the decree. The lower appellate Court held, dismissing the application for execution, that the decree-holder had waived his right to execute the decree by accepting the above payments The High Court, on second appeal, held that the decree-holder had a right to execute the decree. The several payments in question, being only on account of the whole decree and not on account of the specific instalments in arrears, could not be sufficient evidence of a waiver. And even if they be taken as payments of overdue instalments, they cannot by themselves prove a waiver. BALAJI GANESH v. Wajib-ul-arz.

See PRE-EMPTION — CONSTRUCTION OF WAJIB-UL-ARZ.

(1)—Absconding co-sharers — Trustee.— A clause in the administration-paper of a village, stating in general terms that absconders from the village can receive back their property on their return, can neither be availed of by, nor affect, the rights of persons not parties to it. PIAREY LAL v. SALIGA, 2 A. 394.

(2)—Wajib-ul-arz — Absent share-holders—Trust.—An entry in an administration-paper that absent share-holders shall, on their return to the village, have their shares surrendered to them by their present occupiers, does not necessarily constitute a valid trust in favour of such absentees, though it may be evidence of such a trust. Such an entry cannot be regarded as evidence of a pre-existing trust or as an admission of such trust by the occupiers. HARBHAJ v. GUMANI, 2 A. 493. [R., 3 A. 458, 13 C.P.L.R. 99.]

(3)—Pre-emption, varieties of.—The right of pre-emption may be founded on Muhammadan Law, or, as is more generally the case, where it affects the Hindus, on long established custom having the force of law, or an special contract between the share holders; and the wajib-ul-arz may record the practice of pre-emption as based on any of these grounds; and the entry may be evidence either of custom or of the contract. ISRI SINGH v. GANGA, 2 A. 876, F.B.

(4)—Suit by Zemindar for haqq i-chaharam—Execution of decree—Sale of house in Mohalla—Right based on wajib ul-arz—Liability of auction purchaser.—Suit by Zemindar of a mohalla against the purchaser (decree-holder) in execution of a decree, for one-fourth of the sale proceeds of a house in such mohalla sold in such execution. The right claimed was based upon the terms of the wajib-ul-arz which stated, inter alia, that when a house in such mohalla was sold, a cess called chaharam was received by the Zemindar "according to the understanding arrived at between the Zemindar and the seller." Held, that the plaintiff had not acquired under the provisions of the wajib-ul-arz any right to one-fourth of the sale proceeds, that he could not claim such right against the auction-purchaser who was not a "seller," and that the terms of the wajib-ul-arz were only applicable to private and voluntary sales, and not to those held compulsorily under process of law. BENI MAHO v. ZAHURUL HAQ, 3 A. 797.

(5)—Evidence of custom—Entries in wajib-ul-arz—Express words necessary.—Entries as to custom in a wajib-ul-arz, however important they may be as evidence of such custom, are not conclusive proof. In any case, express words are necessary to prove any such special custom as would modify the general law. In the absence of such words in a wajib-ul-arz, the general Hindu law of adoption cannot be interfered with as to the widow's power of adoption. (N.B.—The question of a Hindu widow's power of adoption with reference to the text of the different schools of Hindu law and the cases decided by the different Courts, elaborately discussed. TULSHI RAM v. BEHARI LAL, 12 A. 328. [R., 17 A. 294, F.B.]

(6)—Object of — Recording sole proprietor's wishes, improper. — A wajib-ul arz was never intended to be used as an indirect means of giving effect to the wishes of a sole proprietor with regard to the nature of his tenure or the mode of devolution of the property which should obtain after his death, its purpose being to furnish a trustworthy record of existing local customs. SUPERUNDDHWAJA PRASAD v. GARURAD DHWAJA PRASAD, 15 A. 147 = A. W.N. 1893, 85. [R., 5 A.L.J. 79.]

(7)—Admissible evidence. — Wajib-ul-arzes are admissible as official documents made in accordance with law. GARURUDHWAJA PARSHAD SINGH v. SUPARANDHWAJA PRASAD SINGH, 10 M.L.J. 267, P.C. = 23 A. 37 = 5 C.W.N. 33 = 27 I.A. 238 = 2 Bom. L.R. 831 = 7 Sar. 724.

(8)—Wajib-ul arz, meaning of—Act XIX of 1873—Effect of recital in a wajib-ul-arz—Construction.—The term wajib-ul-arz in the North-Western Provinces is applied to what is considered to be the most important document contained in the official records relating to the village administration. Entries therein, properly made and authenticated by the signatures of the officers who made them, are admissible in evidence under s. 35 of the Indian Evidence Act in order to prove a family custom of inheritance, or, under s. 48 as the record of opinions as to the existence of such custom by persons likely to know of it. It would be incorrect, to lay down, as a general proposition, that a recital in a wajib-ul-arz cannot operate as a will in the case of a Hindu. The weight to be given to statements in a wajib-ul arz must depend, in each case on the circumstances in which the entries were originally made and the corroboration they receive from extrinsic evidence. A wajib-ul-arz contained the following provision: "Seven years ago, I adopted my sister's son M. He is my heir and will be the owner. If, after this agreement, a son is born to me, half the property will be received by him and half by the adopted son. If more than one son are born to me, the property will be equally divided among them, including the adopted son, as brothers." The natural-born son contemplated above was born but he died childless. On the construction of the above clause: Held, (1) that the words used were descriptive only; (2) that it was the intention of the maker of the wajib-ul-arz to give his property to M, as his adopted son capable of inheriting by virtue of the adoption and as the adoption was invalid it gave M the right to inherit, and the gift therefore had no effect upon the property. MUSSAMMAT LALI v. MURLI DHAR, 8 Bom. L.R. 402 = 3 A.L.J. 415 = 10 C W.N. 730 = 3 C.L.J. 594 = 28 A. 488 = 33 I.A. 97.

(9)—Construction of document—House tax—Cess —. Rent—Under the wajib-ul arz of a village, called Radhakund, the zemindar was declared to be entitled to one taka (six pies) per month for every house from the occupants of the village, and also from the owners of shops and temples. Held, that this payment (which was called "gharghanna") was not a house-tax or cess, but merely ground rent and did not require special sanction. BALWANT SINGH v. SHANKAR, A.W.N. 1908, 95 = 5 A. L. J. 361 = 30 A. 235.

(10)—Pre-emption — Custom or contract—Interpretation of document—Exchange - Variation in terms of Wajib-ul-arz.—The right of pre-emption arises in respect of an exchange. Where there has been a variation in the terms of the Wajib-ul-arz prepared respectively at two settlements, and the previous wajib-ul-arz recorded a custom, held, that the variation in the terms of the later wajib-ul-arz did not necessarily affect the custom. DARYAO SINGH v. JAHAN SINGH, 6 A.L.J. 735=31 A. 539=3 Ind. Cas. 903. (3 A.L.J. 646, D.) [Expl., 7 A.L.J. 406].

(11)—Pre-emption—Wajib-ul-arz—Construction—Contract or custom.—Where a Wajib-ul-arz said; "Aindn jari rakhna rawaj shufa ka kumko manzur hai:' Held, that it was a record of the existence of a custom of pre-emption which the co-sharers wished to continue. HAZARI LAL v. DURGA PARSHAD, 5 Ind. Cas. 114=7 A.L.J. 173=32 A. 187. (A.W.N. 1908, 120, 5 A.L.J. 470, D.)

(12)—Pre-emption—Wajib-ul-arz—Construction—Contract or custom.—The words used in a wajib-ul-arz were koi muqadma haq shufa ka dair nahin hua aiyando jari rakhna shufa ka ham ko manzu hai. Held, that the words were a record of contract and not of custom. KANCHAN SINGH v. MANI RAM, 7 A.L.J. 213=5 Ind. Cas. 212=32 A. 201.

(13)—Pre-emption—Wajib-ul-arz—Custom or contract—Construction.—The wajib-ul-arz of a village, prepared before it was partitioned into several mahals, gave a right of pre-emption, first, to a near sharer (hissadar karib), and secondly to another sharer in the village (dusre hissadar deh). No new wajib-ul-arz was prepared at the partition. The plaintiff pre-emptor was a co-sharer in one of the mahals into which the village was divided, but had no share in the mahal in which the property purchased was situate. The vendee was a stranger to the village. Held, per Stanley, C. J.—that the plaintiff could assert his right of pre-emption, notwithstanding the partition, and that the words hissadar deh, as used in this wajib-ul-arz, meant a sharer in the village (22 A. 1, D.) Held, per Banerji, J.—that the plaintiff pre-emptor could not pre-empt after the partition of the village, as, although he was a sharer in the village, he was not a co-sharer of the vendor, and that the words hissadar deh as used in the wajib-ul-arz meant a co-sharer of the undivided village for which the wajib-ul-arz had been prepared. DORI v. JIWAN RAM, 7 A. L. J. 133=6 Ind. Cas. 17=32 A. 265. (22 A. 1, F.)

(14)—Pre-emption—Wajib-ul-arz—Construction of—Custom or contract.—The words in the wajib ul-arz were 'Is waste ikrar ham malikan wa lambardaran ka yeh hai ke ta miad boundobast wa ayinda to takmil bondobast sanipaiband rah kar amal daramad karenge.' Held, that the record was a record of contract and not of custom. ASA RAM v. KANHAYA, 7 A.L.J. 365=6 Ind. Cas. 129=32 A. 399.

(15)—Pre-emption—Wajib-ul-arz—Construction—Custom or contract—Difference in terms of two wajib-ul-arzes—The wajib-ul-arz of a village prepared in 1833, when only two persons owned the village, provided that, if any one of the co-sharers wished to transfer his share in the village, it would be necessary for him to inform his co-sharers and to transfer it to them, but, if the transfer was made without the knowledge of the co-sharers, it was to be void, held, that the record was a record of contract which did not last after the settlement. In a later wajib-ul-arz prepared in 1860, the preamble was very similar to that of the earlier wajib-ul-arz, but the right of pre-emption was given, first, to nearer co-sharers, then to co-sharers in the thok and then to co-sharers in other thoks. Held, that the later wajib-ul-arz also recorded a contract, as the conditions contained in it as to pre-emption differed in material particulars from those in the earlier wajib-ul-arz. SRI BHAGWAT SINGH v. RAM JATAN, 7 A.L.J. 406=6 Ind. Cas. 587. (31 A. 539, Expl.)

(16)—Suit for enhancement of rent—Clause in wajib-ul-arz against enhancement, effect of.—A clause in the wajib-ul-arz of a village by which a zemindar had agreed not to enhance rent, was held to apply only during the period of the settlement which was being made at the date of the wajib-ul-arz, and not to any period subsequent to such settlement. BAICHOO RAM v. DOWLUT RAM, 2 N.W.P. 8.

(17)—Wajib-ul-arz—Copy of, when admissible.—As the wajib-ul-arz on which the suit was based was destroyed in the mutiny, the plaintiff tendered in evidence a book obtained from the tekseel office which purported to contain copies of the wajib-ul-arz authenticated by the initials of the Settlement Officer. Held, that under these circumstances the lower Court was right in accepting it is a genuine copy of the wajib-ul-arz prepared at the time of the settlement and as the copy purported to give the signatures of the persons by whom the original was executed and the name of the official in whose presence the instrument was executed, it was held that the lower Court ought to have accepted the copy in proof not of a wajib-ul-arz which had been contemplated but of one which had been executed and accepted. Held, also that the wajib-ul-arz was not a mere contract but a record of rights made by a public servant, and consequently, without attestation or execution by the proprietors of the mouzah, it was entitled to weight as evidence of village custom. DEBI DUTT v. SHEIKH ENAIT ALI, 2 N.W.P. 395.

(18)—Wajib-ul-arz—Construction.—A wajib-ul-arz of the village provided that "when any co-sharer wished to alienate his share, he must offer it first to the nearest co-sharer, then to the co-sharer in the thoke, etc.," and that "in case of mortgage or other kind of transfer which did not extinguish the proprietary right, the pre-emptor, etc. Held, that these expressions in the wajib-ul-arz must be taken to contemplate all alienations, not only by sale and ordinary mortgage, but by conditional sale, and that the term "co-sharer" must be taken to mean the transferee for the time being of a

(19)—Wajib ul-arz not signed by vendor—Pre-emption.—The fact that the wajib-ul-arz is not signed by the vendor will not matter, if he knew of it or had assented to it, or knowing of it has not repudiated it. LUCHMAN DAS v. NIRBHEY RAM, A.W.N. 1881, 114.

(20)—Wajib-ul-arz—Haqq-i-chaharam—Custom—Proof.—In a suit by a zemindar for haqq-i-chaharam, based on local custom, the vendor of the property contended that the vendee had agreed to meet the charges and the vendee denied the existence of such custom in the village or in the wajib-ul-arz. The Munsiff decreed the suit, finding that the right was sanctioned by the wajib-ul-arz. The District Judge, on appeal, found that the suit was based on the wajib-ul-arz, but that there had been no sale, and on those findings dismissed the suit and decreed the appeal. Held, that the District Judge was wrong in believing that the claim was based on the wajib-ul-arz and that there had been no sale. The following issues should be tried and determined by the Court (i) whether there was valid evidence that, by custom, a vendee was liable in the village to pay the hak, (ii) whether the class of the vendee operated to make any difference in respect of such liability, (iii) what the quota payable should be. ASGHAR ALI v. RAM GHOLAM, A.W.N. 1881, 137.

(21)—Wajib-ul-arz—Haqq-i-chaharam—Compulsory sales.—Held, that the terms of the Wajib ul-arz in this case, which were stated to contain and express the nature and incidence of the cess (haqq-i-chaharam), did not contemplate and could not be applied to sales of a compulsory character, such as a sale in execution of a decree. GOPAL MISR v. FAZAL ALI KHAN, A.W.N. 1881, 165.

(22)—Custom—Wajib-ul-arz—Further proof.—Where a claim is based on village-custom, the wajib-ul-arz affirming the existence of such custom is not by itself sufficient to support the claim; but it must be supported by proof of instances in which the custom has taken effect. MUHAMMAD ALI v. HARBHAGAT RAI, A.W.N. 1882, 29.

(23)—Wajib-ul-arz—Inheritance--Custom opposed to law.—In a suit by the daughter's son of a deceased Mahomedan for his share of inheritance against the son and others it was contended by the defendants that daughters could not inherit by the custom of the village as embodied in the wajib ul-arz, and in support of the custom a wajib ul arz of 1874 was set up. Held, that, although as a general rule a wajib-ul arz is some evidence of a custom of the village, a wajib-ul-arz of 1874 is not a satisfactory evidence of a custom prevailing in 1816 and that such a custom must be considered to be bad as opposed to Mahodmedan Law. RAMZAN ALI v. BECHAI, A.W.N. 1888, 118.

(24)—Wajib-ul-arz—Construction of—"Nazdiki hissadar" Zemindari village.—The expression "Nazdiki hissadar" occurring in the pre-emption clause of the wajib-ul-arz of a pure zemindari village must be taken to relate to nearness of blood or relationship. GURASARAN SINGH v. AKHANDANAND SINGH, A.W.N. 1890, 227. [R., 24 A. 119.]

(25)—Custom—Evidence — Wajib-ul-arz recorded at the instance of the sole proprietor of the mahal.—Held, that a document purporting to be a wajib-ul-arz which was drawn up at a time when the mahal to which it related was owned by one single proprietor could not be regarded as any evidence of a custom of pre-emption prevailing in that mahal. JAIMAN BIBI v. MIR ALI HUSEN, A.W.N. 1898, 89. (14 I.A. 127 R.) [R., 5 A.L.J. 79.]

(26)—Landlord and tenant — Rights of tenants in respect of houses built with the zamindar's permission in the abadi—Wajib-ul-arz—Construction of document.—The wajib-ul-arz of a village contained the following provision respecting the building by tenants of houses in the abadi:—"Paragraph 2 regarding construction of a new house. For the construction of a new house the tenant in every way depends upon the zamindar's consent. No particular fee is fixed. Only that which may be agreed on between the parties is given and taken. In case of a tenant's leaving his house the zamindar of the thok in which the house, is situate will be considered its owner, and the tenant on his return will not be entitled to get it back. If any tenant wishes to sell his house, the zamindar will be entitled to one-fourth of the sale price received. A tenant can with the zamindar's permission take earth from a new place: he is not competent to do so without his consent." Held, on a construction of this paragraph, that it did not imply that the tenant had the right to mortgage a house built in the abadi by permission of the zamindar. MUHAMMAD RAFI v. TELHU SINGH, A.W.N. 1902, 140. (20 A. 248, F.)

(27)—Wajib-ul-arz—Construction of.—A wajib-ul-arz provided that "a co-sharer wishing to sell his share must do so, for such price as any other person may offer, first to a near co-sharer in his own patti, next to co-sharers in the same patti, after that to near co-sharers in another patti, then to co-sharers in the mahal: and then to strangers. Held, that it conferred a right of pre-emption upon the class of persons who have under it a right of purchase superior to that of persons belonging to another class, even if the co-sharers belonging to the class last mentioned be the purchasers. SHEOBARAN RAI v. MAHIPAT RAI, 1 A.L.J. 274, Note=A.W.N. 1904, 105. [F., 26 A. 544=1 A.L.J. 272; R., 27 A. 457=2 A.L.J. 689=A.WN. 1905, 45.]

(28)—Interpretation — Pre-emptors claiming as sons of vendors—No preference—Re-sale to a co-sharer before suit.—The wajib-ul-arz of a pattidari village provided as follows: "The pattidars of all the three parties in this village are own brothers and relations. Hence, should any sharer of any patti be willing to sell his share, he shall, in the first instance, offer it to the co-shares of the patti, and, in case of their refusal, to any person." The plaintiffs sued for pre-emption, claiming preference on the ground that they were the sons of the vendor. Held that the mere fact that it is stated in the preamble of the Wajib-ul-arz that the pattidars of all the three parties in this village are own brothers and relations, cannot give preference to the plaintiffs. If property which is subject to pre-emption, having been sold to a stranger, is subsequently re-sold by the stranger-vendee, before suit, to a co-sharer having equal rights with those seeking pre-emption, no suit for pre-emption will lie. (29)—Wajib-ul-arz—Interpretation of document—Inconsistent clause to be rejected—Pre-emption.—Where in the case of sale or mortgage the wajib-ul-arz of a village conferred a right of pre-emption in the following order:—(1) a co-sharer in the village (sharik dehi), (2) hissadar patti degree by degree, and (3) hissadar in the village degree by degree, held, that the first clause was inconsistent with the two next clauses and should be rejected, the intention being to give a right of pre-emption to persons coming under the second and third clauses in the order mentioned. KUAR LALL SINGH v. KUAR KARAN SINGH, 6 A.L.J. 652 = 3 Ind. Cas. 496.

(30)—Landlord and tenant—Grove planted by tenants on the understanding that they will be at liberty to sell it—Custom not proved—Effect of.—The wajib-ul-arz of a village prepared in 1862 recorded that in future a tenant shall plant a bogh with the consent of the zamindars, but as regards sale he shall have the power. On the sale of a grove by a tenant who had planted it, to the defendants, the zamindars sued for recovery of possession, on the ground that the wajib-ul-arz did not record a custom authorising the tenants to sell. Held, that, when permission to plant a grove had been granted on the express condition that the tenants would be at liberty to sell, it was immaterial whether the record was one of a custom or a contract. IX of the wajib-ul-arz. They obtained a decree in the first Court, but the claim was dismissed in appeal by the District Judge, who held that the wajib ul-arz does not prohibit transfer of the right to occupy a site in the abadi. The wajib ul-arz contains the following clause. Every person is at liberty to sell or mortgage the materials of his house on leaving the village or any other occasion, but he cannot so dispose of his house-site, which belongs to the proprietors. Held, that the wajib-ul-arz relied on by the District Judge did not support his conclusion that the right to occupy may be transferred by sale. In case of two or more villages having common grazing grounds, and in cases of one village having a right of grazing its cattle over the lands of another, if a record of such matter is not to be found in the wajib-ul-arz of each village concerned, nothing short of the very fullest and clearest evidence would suffice to establish such right. (68)—Pre-emption — Wajib-ul-arz, construction of—Partition, effect of.—In a suit for pre-emption, the plaintiff relied on a wajib-ul-arz which provided:—"A co-sharer wishing to sell his share must sell it, first to brothers who are also co-sharers, second to hissadars in the patti, third to the lambardar of the patti, fourth to the lambardar of the village, fifth to a co-sharer in the village." When the wajib-ul-arz was prepared, the village was an imperfect pattidari village. It consisted of no mahal, and the whole of the co-parcenary body were jointly responsible for the payment of the revenue. Subsequently the village was divided into two Mahals, and the plaintiff held a share in the mahal other than that in which the property was situate: Held, that the effect of partition was that the plaintiff ceased to be a co-sharer of the vendor, and he had no right to pre-empt. GOPAL SINGH v. GANGA PRASHAD PANDE, 3 Ind. Cas. 827. (22 A. 1, F; 28 A. 286, 2 A. L J. 833, A.W.N. 1906, 2, D.)

(69)—Pre-emption—Wajib-ul-arz — Hissadar —Actual co-sharer—Mere record of name in the Khewat — Right to pre-empt. — Where a wajib-ul-arz gives a right of pre-emption to a hissadar, the right extends to the actual co-sharer in the village. The mere record of a person's name in the khewat does not give him a right to pre-empt. A daughter-in-law, whose name is recorded in the khewat in respect of a zamindari, which formed the joint property of her father-in law and his brother, is not a co-sharer within the meaning of the wajib-ul-arz. MUSSAMMAT PARBATI v. BHAWANI SINGH, 4 Ind. Cas. 419.

(70)—Pre-emption—Wajib-ul-arz—Variation —Custom or contract.—Where there is a variation in the pre-emption clauses of the two successive wajib-ul-arzes, the documents evidence a contract of pre-emption and not custom. MUSSAMMAT BALDEI TEWRANI v. WAZIR KHAN, 5 Ind. Cas. 424.

(71)—Pre-emption—Wajib-ul-arz—Variation —Custom or contract—Ikrarnama—Entry not clear—Presumption as to custom.—Where an entry in a wajib-ul-arz indicates neither custom nor contract, the presumption is that it records a custom. (A.W.N. 1897, 3, R.) The mere use of the word "Ikrarnama" does not point to the conclusion that the parties intended that all the entries in the wajib-ul-arz should be mere evidence of a contract. A slight variation in the terms of the pre-emptive clauses of the two successive wajib-ul-arzes does not render the entries in the documents evidence of a contract. BANDHU AHIR v. BISHESHAR RAI, 6 Ind. Cas. 704. (6 Ind. Cas. 151, 7 A.L.J. 519, F.)

(72)—Pre-emption— Wajib-ul-arz—Construction—Karabat karib haquiut men, meaning of —Blood relation.—The wajib-ul-arz of a village contained the following provisions :—"Lihaza jo koi sharik hissa a na bazarye bai ya rehn ya thika ya istighrak intekal karna chahe, to awal shurkai zaili patti mustahak lene intekal milikiat ke honge, jo woh na len, to digar shurkai patti majah lene intikal ke honge, aur bahalat inkar hissadaran patti mazkur, aur hissadaran dusro patti ko jo karabat karib haqiat men rakhte hon, mustahaq lene intikal ke honge :" Held that the words "Karabat karib hakiut men" referred to relationship in blood and not to nearness in space. BALDEO PERSHAD v. BHAGWANT SINGH, 7 Ind. Cas. 758.

(73)—Pre-emption—Wajib-ul-arz —Presumption—Custom or contract.—A record in the wajib-ul-arz must be deemed to be the record of a custom, unless the document itself indicates or it is otherwise proved that the clause relating to pre-emption is the embodiment of a new contract. NATHU v. DILAWAR ALI, 8 Ind. Cas. 526. (A.W.N. 1897, 3, 7 A. L. J. 902, 7 Ind. Cas. 181, F.)

(74)—Pre-emption — Wajib-ul-arz—Partition —Old wajib ul-arz copied — Hissadaran deh, meaning of.—The pre emptive clause of a wajib-ul-arz gave right of pre-emption, first to co-sharers, who were relatives, secondly to, hissadaran ek jaddi, and thirdly to hissadaran deh. The village was partitioned into several mahals. After partition the same pre-emptive clause was retained in each of the mahals : Held, that the words hissadaran deh meant co-sharers in the village, and not in the mahal. KALLU v. AJUDHYA PERSHAD, 8 Ind. Cas. 527.

(75)—Pre-emption— Wajib-ul-arz—Construction—Hissadar Karibi—Nearness in blood or space.—A wajib-ul arz contained three classes of pre-emptors : (1) hissadar karibi, (2) other hissadaran of the thoke, and (3) hissadars in other thokes The village was divided into thokes and the thokes were sub-divided into khewats : Held, that the words hissadar karibi meant nearness in space and not in blood. SURANJBALI v. NAKCHED TEWARI, 9 Ind. Cas. 276. (1 A.L.J. 272, A.W.N. 1904, 104, 26 A. 544, 1 A.L.J. 705, A.W.N. 1903, 239, A.W.N. 1883, 206, A.W.N. 1895, 78, 2 A.L.J. 707, A.W.N. 1905, 192, R.)

(76)—Escheat, right of—Residence, change in, effect of—Mafrur, meaning of- Abandonment of residence, how far evidence of escheat.—A landlord claimed possession of a grove on the ground that the grove-holder having taken up his residence in another village, the grove escheated to the landlord. The landlord claimed the right of escheat on the basis of an entry in the wajib-ul-arz, where it was provided that, if the tenant became mafrur or farar ho jana, the grove will become the property of the landlord : Held, that, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, the provision of the wajib-ul-arz did not apply to the case of a person who had transferred his place of residence from one village to another, but had still retained and asserted his rights as a grove-holder. He can only be considered mafrur if his abandonment of the village is attended by circumstances which suggest an intention of complete abandonment of his residence and his rights in the grove. (2 O.C. 280, F.) It would be open to the persons interested in any particular case to prove by oral evidence that, although the custom set forth in the wajib-ul arz is limited by the use of such words as "mafrur" or "farar ho jana," yet, as a matter of fact, these words were used loosely and inaccurately, and that the custom actually prevailing recognizes the right of escheat against a grove-holder, whenever the latter has finally and completely transferred his residence outside the boundaries of the village in which the grove is situate. M. and several other prisoners in the custody of the Sheriff of Calcutta, for debt, without having been brought up to have an order for their allowance made, on being produced for that purpose by the Sheriff, applied for their discharge under s. 273 of Act VIII of 1859. Preliminary objections were taken to the validity of the warrants on which the Sheriff arrested them, on the grounds that the time for execution was not specified in them; and that, even had they been originally valid, their authority had expired, owing to the delay in bringing up the prisoners. Both objections were overruled. Held that a mere informality in a warrant, such as the omission of the time for execution, only renders it irregular, and does not invalidate it; that advantage having been taken of such irregularity to prejudice the prisoner, affords grounds for an application to the Court to set the warrant aside; and that a mere delay in bringing the prisoner before the Court after his arrest, if not for a considerable period, does not render his detention illegal. In re BHOLANAUTH MULLICK, Bourke O.C. 96.

(8 A. 293, R.) Form No. 154, sch. IV, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, as the provision for variation in s. 644, Civ. Pro. Where a warrant for arrest is signed by a sheristadar duly authorised to sign warrants, the judgment-debtor by resisting its execution commits an offence under s 225-B, Penal Code. From the mere fact that the warrant for the arrest of a judgment-debtor bore the signature of the sheristadar, it cannot be presumed, under s. 114, cl. The horse subsequently died of a disease in the lungs. Held that in these circumstances the doctrine of caveat emptor does not apply as para 8 of s. 13 of the Punjab Civil Code lays down that freedom from concealed defects is implied in every contract of sale. There may be cases in which the Court would be justified in drawing an inference as to the quality of the bulk from the quality of a sample, as for example, in a case in which the plaintiff had no opportunity for examining and testing the bulk. But the Court would not condemn the bulk of a large consignment of goods as of inferior quality on proof of inferiority of the sample, when the buyer had an opportunity for examining the bulk but adduces, no evidence to prove its quality. During the examination of a certain number of bales of goods taken as a sample, the whole quantity in each bale should be examined, the examination of only a portion of the same not being proper. Such wasika allowance does not vest in the Receiver under sub-s. (2) (a) of s. 16 of Act III of 1907. The after-acquired property of the insolvent, which vests in the Receiver under sub section (4) of section 16 of Act III of 1907 is subject to the same exceptions and is of the same class as property covered by sub-s. (2) of that section. Once the money due on account of a pension is paid to the pensioner and allowed to blend with his other property, it no longer retains its character as pension and it is subject to all incidents to which the property with which it is blended is subject. But the money paid on account of such pension does not vest forthwith in the Court of Receiver under sub-s. (4) of s. 16. The pensioner must be allowed to receive the money and also allowed an opportunity, at his choice (1) of mixing it up and blending it with his other property or (2) of spending it for the purposes for which it was granted to him, viz., to maintain and support himself in a manner suitable to his position in life. Held, that therefore an order directing the insolvent every month to deliver to the Receiver a portion of the money received by him on account of the pension is bad in law and cannot be sustained. Held, further, that the pensioner cannot be called upon to account for the money received by him as pension, though the Receiver can claim to take possession of any money or other property actually in the hands or possession of the insolvent. To carry out effectually the object of a statute it must be so construed as to defeat all attempts to do or avoid in an indirect or circuitous manner that which it has prohibited or enjoined. trying the point of limitation, the Sudder ameen found that the land in dispute had been lying waste for 40 or 50 years and had not been in the possession of the plaintiff, and his suit was therefore barred. The High Court was of opinion that the above conclusion was not warranted upon the finding, because though the land may be a jungle it may still have been in the possession of some one. As a fact, however, the jungle in this case was not in the possession of either the plaintiff or defendant as ascertained and reported by the local amin. Plaintiff was thus not barred by any adverse possession; and inasmuch as, until there was adverse possession, there was no cause of action, the suit would not be barred unless it was instituted beyond twelve years from the date when adverse possession was taken, and, since it was clear that no acts of ownership were exercised by either party in respect to the land, the subject of this litigation, until a very recent period preceding the institution of this suit, there was no ground for holding that the plaintiff's remedy was lost by his failure to sue within twelve years from the date of his cause of action. (6)—Judgment in former suit to which defendant was no party, not admissible in evidence in subsequent suit—Land lying waste, no inference possible from, regarding possession.—In this suit to recover lands, the Court of first instance found that the plea of limitation raised by the defendant was made out by the facts of the case. The lower appellate Court reversed this finding basing its conclusion on a judgment passed in some suit brought against the present plaintiff in 1865, to which the present defendant was in no way a party, but mainly supporting it by the argument that the land was lying waste up to 1221, and, therefore, could not be in the possession of any one. The High Court observed that the previous judgment could be no evidence as between the present parties, and even if otherwise, its terms were not such as to justify the inference which the lower appellate Court drew from it. The fact that the land was lying waste, did not of itself show that no one was in possession. MAHOMED ALI v. SHURUM ALI, 8 W.R. 422. [R., 12 A. 1, F.B.]

It was argued on behalf of the plaintiff that the laws under which the chucks had been resumed, Regs. II of 1819 and III of 1828, contemplated assessment and not ejectment; and that the latter, and not the former process, had been followed, and the High Court was of opinion that the plaintiff should have applied for the settlement of the chucks in dispute and met with a refusal; but there was nothing to show that the plaintiff had done so. The grant of puttah was not disputed and there was no allegation that any boundaries had been inserted therein or changed. Although it might be possible that the Collector did not know the actual extent of the area which he was giving away, since land within specified boundaries had been granted on pottah, the Court would be bound to award the grantee all the lands situated within such boundaries so far as they can be fixed and identified. The objector or claimant coming in due time, as provided by s. 1 may stay a sale, but if he did not come within such time, and allowed the land to be sold, then he could only lay claim to compensation under the Act, making the Collector a defendant, and he would then recover, not the land, but compensation from Government through the Collector or other officer. (11)—Waste common land—Appropriation to separate use of one co-sharer — Consent of sharers.—Waste common land in which all the co-sharers have a joint ownership cannot, without the consent of all, be withdrawn from the common stock and be permanently appropriated to the separate use of one. DIROPAUL RAI v. BHONDO RAI, 2 Agra 341.

(12)—Waste lands—Exclusive right claimed by some of the Khewatdars.—The parties to the suit were Khewatdars of a mehal. The plaintiffs claimed the waste lands of the mehal as exclusively belonging to them. The defendants contended that they were common. At the settlement, these lands were recorded as being enjoyed in common. Plaintiffs were the descendants of the original founder of the chief village and were the owners of the village site of the principal village. Held, that this circumstance alone could not support the plaintiffs' claim to the whole of the waste lands to the exclusion of the defendants. (13)—Use of, as a grazing-ground, title to—Incompetency of a Civil Court to make allotment of land as a grazing ground—Grazing-ground.—Mere use of a piece of waste land as a grazing-ground for a few years does not confer on the person who uses it a right to do so or to eject therefrom another person who has taken possession. A Civil Court cannot make an allotment of land as a grazing-ground under Rule 76 of the rules under the Land and Revenue Act. NGA PAN BU v. NGA SHWE THE, L.B.R. 1872—1892, 603.

(14)—Title to adjoining as opposed to a grant thereof—Land and Revenue Act and Rules.—It may be usual to allot waste land to the adjoining owner, but there is no section of the Land and Revenue Act, or of the rules made thereunder, giving him a right of allotment. A cultivator has no legal claim which can be recognized by a Civil Court to be allotted land adjoining his holding If a circle thugyi acts improperly and in defiance of prevailing usage in allotting such land to another person, it is only by petitioning the superior revenue authorities that the occupant of the adjoining holding can obtain a grant. This view is not opposed to the policy of British Government in India, and is in accordance with such policy as appears from the express language of the preamble of Reg. III of 1828. (2)—Custom—Customary right to use a tank for bathing, washing and taking water, whether involves a general right of access.—The existence of a customary right to use a tank, for the purpose of bathing and washing and taking water therefrom, does not necessarily involve a general right of access to the tank. The customary right may be limited to access by a particular side. MUHAMAD HUSAIN ROWTHER v. MUHAMDD ABUBAKAR ROWTHER, 2 Ind. Cas. 427=20 M.L.J. 699=8 M.L.T. 399.

(3)—Water in Government channels—Right to distribute water.—Government has a right to distribute water in Government channels, without prejudice to the rights of ryotwari holders which they have acquired for the necessary cultivation of their lands. KRISTNA ROW v. KUPPIER, 8 M.L.T. 268.

(4)—Water, Right of—Government, duty of, to maintain irrigation works in repair—Deficiency of water supply owing to non-repair—Loss to ryot in consequence—Whether suit lies against Government therefor—Position of Zemindar and Government.—The Government is not under an obligation, with regard to each individual ryot, to repair irrigation works whenever they require repair. A ryot is entitled to prevent Government from doing any act resulting in a material diminution of the usual supply of water for irrigation to his land, but no action will lie for mere failure to repair, when repair is required to enable the ryot to receive the usual supply. Obiter.—It may well be that the Government, when handing over large tracts of the country to Zemindars at the permanent Settlement, laid upon them an obligation to preserve and repair the irrigation works handed over to them; consequently there may lie on the Zemindar an obligation more onerous than any that is upon Government, and what is discretionary upon Government has been made by the Government obligatory in the case of the Zemindar. The Zemindar's position is like that of a person or corporation on whom statutory powers are conferred and statutory duties are imposed. It has never been held that a person, bound by reason of his tenure to keep away in repair, is liable to an action by individuals injured by his failure to do so while as regards persons and corporations on whom statutory powers have been conferred and statutory duties imposed, the rule derivable seems to be that in the absence of a law liability as regards individuals, no such liability arises in cases of non-feasance merely because the statute imposes a duty; the statute must impose the liability as well expressly or by clear implication. The extent of the public duty which lies on the Zemindar is to be ascertained on the analogy of public duties cast upon persons or corporations by reason of tenure or by statute. The rights and obligations of Government in the matter of irrigation works in this country have to be ascertained from unrecorded custom and practice (28 M. 72, F. & Expl.), and there is no custom or practice recorded or unrecorded, in this Presidency, under which a ryot receives compensation from the State or a Zemindar, measured by the value of the crop lost, owing to defects in the irrigation works which command his land. Much inconvenience would be caused, if every person injured by non-feasance on the part of a body or a person entrusted with a public duty, were entitled to come into Court with a demand for compensation for his own particular grievance. Nor can the Government be held liable on the basis of a contract, as the Government is not bound by a contract with the plaintiff to maintain a supply of water for the irrigation of his land. (5)— Water-supply — Tanks adjoining — Surplus water—Uninterrupted flow—Diversion —Replacing dam of turfs by Masonry weir—Diminution of water—Injunction.—A and B were tanks in adjoining villages. The surplus water of tank A used to flow through a channel taking off from its southern bund to tank B, whose chief source of supply was this channel. The proprietor of tank A replaced an old turf bund across the channel by a masonry weir built so high as to intercept the water-supply to B and made two cuts in the bund of A so as to diminish the said supply of water. It was contended on behalf of the proprietor of A that she has not exceeded her right in putting up the masonry weir. Held, that the onus lay on the proprietor to show that she has not exceeded her right by such construction. A person who has the right to put up a dam of turf and loose stones is not necessarily entitled to substitute a tighter and stronger dam. BAKTHAVATHSLAMMAL v. Water Rights.

See RIGHT TO USE OF WATER.

(1)—Water rights — Respective rights of riparian proprietors above and below—Quantity of water which can be abstracted by riparian owner—Reparian owner's right to contruct dam and take water for irrigation—A riparian owner, where a stream flows in a channel down from a property higher up, is entitled to the flow of water without interruption and without substantial diminution caused by the upper riparian proprietor, who may, for legitimate purposes, withdraw so much only of the water as will not materially lessen the downward flow on to his neighbour's land. What quantity of water can be abstracted and consumed, without infringing the rights of the lower riparian proprietors must, in all cases, be a question of circumstances depending mainly upon the size of the river or stream, and the proportion which the water abstracted bears to its entire volume. The plaintiffs, upper riparian owners, claimed the unrestricted right of constructing a dam and of taking, for irrigation purposes, as much water as they liked, without any proof that they had ever done so before, or that they had enjoyed the right by prescription or custom. Held that in the absence of acquisition of such right by contract with lower riparian proprietors, or by prescriptive use, the law conceded no such right. Among the conditions essential for establishing a custom are that it is of remote antiquity, that it has been continued and acquiesced in, that it is reasonable, and is certain and not indefinite in its character. (1)—Will—Testator calling document irrevocable—First page of Will signed by testator — Presumption — Evidence — Declaration of testator to make disposition in conformity with those on the other sheets — Admissibility.—If an instrument is on the face of it of a testamentary character, the mere circumstance that the testator calls it irrevocable, does not alter its quality. The principal test to be applied is, whether the disposition made takes effect during the life-time of the executant of the deed, or whether it takes effect after his death. If it is really of the latter nature, it is ambulatory and revocable during his life. Where a testator says, in a paragraph of his will, that he will not be at liberty to settle properties absolutely: Held, that such a restraint upon his own power of alienation is absolutely void and that does not indicate any intention to make the deed irrevocable. (12 C.W.N. 942, R., 8 C.W.N. 614, 9 C.W.N. 1021, 32 C. 182, D.) One signature made with the intention of authenticating the whole instrument is sufficient, though the will be contained in several sheets of paper, for the presumption is that they were all in the room and formed part of the will at the time of execution. But the presumption is, of course, rebuttable, and if there are suspicious circumstances, the Court must act with great caution. But ordinarily the legal presumption would be applied. In considering whether or not several sheets of paper constitute the will, declarations made by the testator both before and after execution are admissible to show that it was his intention to make dispositions in conformity with those found upon the several sheets of paper. SAGAR CHANDRA MANDAL v. DWARKA NATH MANDAL, 3 Ind. Cas. 380=10 C.L.J. 644=14 C.W.N. 174.

(2)—Will—Presumption — Proof of validly executed will not revoked and not forthcoming, by certified copy—S. 24, Act V of 1881.—If a will, traced to the possession of the deceased, and last seen there, is not forthcoming at the time of his death, it is presumed to have been destroyed by himself; that presumption must have effect, unless there is sufficient evidence to repel it. (1 Moo. P.C. 299, R.). The presumption, that a will, in the testator's possession and not forthcoming after his death, has been revoked, does not arise, unless there is evidence to satisfy the Court that it was not in existence at the time of his death. There is another presumption, which, having regard to the habits of the people of this country and especially to those of a wandering fakir, may well arise, viz., that, when a document is not forthcoming after the testator's death, it has been mislaid. A will found to have been duly and validly executed and not to have been revoked if not forthcoming, may be proved by means of a certified copy. Such a case falls under s. 24, Act V of 1881. Letters of Administration, under that section, on the strength of the copy of the will, limited until the original will is produced, may be granted. ANWAR HOSSEIN v. Codicil. It is always difficult for Judges, who have not seen and heard the witnesses, to refuse to adopt the conclusions of fact of those who have; but that difficulty is greatly aggravated, where the Judge who heard them has formed the opinion, not only that their inferences are unsound on the balance of the probability against their story, but that they are not witnesses of truth. SHANMUGARAYA MUDALIAR v. MANIKA MUDALIAR, 11 Bom. L.R. 1206, P.C.=10 C.L.J. 276=6 M.L.T. 304=32 M. 400 =3 Ind. Cas. 799=19 M.L.J. 640=36 I.A. 185.

(4)—Disposing mind of testator—Onus of proving—Right of widow to succeed among Ansari Pathans of Basties in Jullundhar—Art. 91, Limitation Act (IX of 1908).—Held, that:—1. The onus of establishing the testamentary capacity of a testator lies on those by whom the will is propounded. So where a testator died a few hours after executing the will, and one of the attesting witnesses deposed that at the time of signing it the testator's breath was irregular and difficult, that he was so weak that he could only sit up with assistance, that he was in the last agonies of death, that he was held up by another person and that water was given to him 2 or 3 times, while a mass of oral reliable evidence for the person opposing the will goes to show that the testator was for several hours before his death in hopeless condition, and had high fever, it cannot be said that the testator had sound disposing mind at the time of executing the will. (1 P.W.R. 1911, P.C.F.) 2. A widow among Ansari Pathans of the Basties of Jullundhar City succeeds for her life to the whole of the estate left by her husband in the presence of his brother and other near agnates. 3. Article 91, Limitation Act (1877, now Act IX of 1908) has no application to a suit for possession of the property of a testator by a person impugning the genuineness or validity of his will, brought three years after its alleged execution. MURAD BIBI v. KHADIM HUSSAIN, 114 P.W.R. 1911.

(5)—Capacity to make a Will—Undue influence—Burden of proof—Evidence, nature of—Pleadings—Particulars of undue influence—Evidence in rebuttal—Costs.—The onus of proving that the Will propounded is the last will of the deceased and that the deceased, at the time of making the Will, was of sound and disposing mind, memory and understanding, always lies on the party propounding the Will. Where, however, undue influence is alleged, ordinarily the onus of proving that the Will was obtained by the undue influence of other parties lies on those who make the allegation. But, where the testator was an unmarried lady, not of much education or very high order of intelligence, and in very close touch with the plaintiffs, the onus of establishing that she was possessed of testamentary capacity and that the Will was made by her without being unduly influenced by any one, lies wholly on the plaintiffs. The mere fact that a lady afflicted with pain and physical weakness should have indulged in a few pleasant self-deceptions is not sufficient for holding that she should be stamped as an imbecile or an idiot incapable of intelligent appreciation of the ordinary affairs of this world. In order to uphold a Will, it is not necessary to prove that the testator was gifted with a very high order of intelligence. All that is required is that the testator was able to understand his position, to appreciate his property and to form a judgment with respect to the parties whom he wished to benefit by it. If he can do that, it is enough, though he may be very feeble and debilitated in understanding. In order to invalidate a Will on the score of undue influence, it is not sufficient that the Court should think that the testator has been persuaded into making a Will of a particular kind, or that he has been persuaded to benefit this or that person to a certain extent. It must be such an influence as induces the Court to think that the Will as executed is not the Will that the testator desired to make, that it does not benefit the parties whom he would wish to benefit, but that he is doing that which is not his desire and, therefore, not his Will. The undue influence required to set aside a Will is the control of another's will over the testator whose faculties have been so impaired as to submit to the control of such other person, so that the party making the Will has ceased to be a free agent and has adopted the Will of the controlling party. A Will made merely from motives of gratitude or esteem or affection is not a Will made under undue influence. Where the defendant pleads undue influence in an action for probate of a Will, he cannot, be ordered to give in his statement particulars of acts of undue influence or of the time and places where and when they took place. But in such a case, the plaintiff may be allowed to give evidence, at the end of the case, in rebuttal of the defendant's case as regards undue influence. Where the defendant in a probate case adopts a most inimical and offensive attitude towards the plaintiff and makes grave and unfounded charges against the plaintiff, he should be ordered to pay all the costs of the plaintiff. BAPUJI v. SORABJI, 7 Ind. Cas. 301.

(6)—Probate—Court of first instance—Evidence of witnesses—Findings of that Court—Based on prepossessions and preconceived theories—Appellate Court's duty—Onus of proof of will and testamentary capacity—Duty of person propounding will to discharge such onus. Where, in a particular case, the questions at issue depend entirely on the proper appreciation of evidence of the witnesses examined in the case, it is an obvious duty of the appellate tribunal not to disturb the conclusion of the Court of trial, unless it is satisfied that the Judge of first instance, who had the witnesses before him, has, in dealing with the evidence, adopted an erroneous procedure and has decided against clear weight of evidence. But where the Court of first instance approached the evidence in support of a will with strong prepossessions against its authenticity based on what he considers to be suspicious circumstances connected with its appearance and the tenor of its contents, and rejected that evidence mainly on certain preconceived theories of his own as regards the credibility of witnesses belonging to a certain class, and had also shown himself too prone to listen to reckless charges and insinuations of corruption. Held, that the procedure of the Judge at the trial was wrong and that, in the circumstances, the appellate Court should not attach much weight to his opinion of the evidence in the case. The onus is on the person propounding the will to satisfy the Court as to its authenticity and validity. The evidence must be sufficient and reliable to prove that the document is the last will and testament of the deceased, and that, at the time he made it, he was possessed of testamentary capacity, or in other words, was of sound disposing mind. S. R. M RAMASAMI CHETTI alias CHINNIAH CHETTI v. KARUTHALACHI, 11 M L T. 38.

(7)—Genuineness of, method of procedure followed in ascertaining—Judgment of positive evidence from standpoint of opinion formed about, contents of—Legality of procedure.—The only question for decision in this case, before their Lordships of the Privy Council, was as to the genuineness or otherwise of a will. The Subordinate Judge, from a consideration of the contents of the will, which he considered so extraordinary as to over-balance altogether the evidence of the witnesses, who spoke to having been present and seen the testator sign the will and to having themselves signed the will as witnesses, came to the conclusion that the will was not genuine. Held, that the High Court was correct in holding that the will was genuine. The Subordinate Judge's method of procedure in discussing the question before him was erroneous. The Subordinate Judge was wrong in having first made up his mind about the contents of the will and then looked at the positive evidence in favour of its execution from that standpoint. (8)—Will by widow with consent of reversioner—Validity—Act VIII of 1827, certificate of heirship under—Effect.—Where a will is made by a Hindu widow with the consent of her next reversioner—the only relation interested in disputing the same—such a will is valid and binding. Where the provisions of the Indian Succession Act are not applicable to a will, the Courts need not concern itself with the question whether the written will is duly signed by the testatrix and attested, but with the question whether the document contains the formal expression of the wishes of the testatrix as to the disposal of her property after her death; and whether it was made at a time when she was in her senses. A certificate of heirship under Act VIII of 1827 confers no further rights on the grantee of the same, than to permit debtors to pay their debts, and others who have the possession of the estate to give up the possession to the grantee, to relieve themselves of further liabilities. It does not enable the grantee to give a good title to a stranger in respect of property over which he is not given any power of disposition by the Will. JIWANMAL v. Found that among Awal Khatris of village Chak Awal of Tahsil Ajnala, a childless proprietor can alienate his land by Will; that the Will can be held good under Hindu law in the absence of proof of custom that Wills are prohibited in the costs of the parties, and that the onus of proof of a custom invalidating Wills altogether is on the party asserting it. After his death, his concubine applied, on behalf of the minor son, for probate and administration under s. 64, Probate Act, on the basis of an oral will alleged to have been made by the deceased. The District Judge held the will was valid by custom so far as the moveable properties of the deceased were concerned and granted letters of administration to the woman in respect of such property, but refused the application in regard to the deceased's immoveable property: The Chief Court on appeal held that the will had not been proved and that, though the minor's legitimacy might be assumed, the woman was unfit to be appointed guardian of the minor and directed the grant of letters to the defendants. and was never executed by their father. The lower Court having found, upon the evidence, that the testator was practically illiterate, though he could just sign his name, that the signatures upon the will are genuine but that he executed it without a full knowledge of all its contents, dismissed the application for probate. Held, that, in the case of a will of an illiterate person, the ordinary rule—that it is essential to the validity of a will that, at the time of its execution, the testator should know and approve of its contents—must be strictly followed, and the Court must be satisfied, beyond any doubt, that the whole of the will was read over to the testator before its execution, or that the testator had, at such time, knowledge of every provision of the will, or, in other words, that the particular devise expresses his mind and will. Held, also, that, where certain portions of a will are inserted in it without the testator's knowledge, such portions may be omitted and probate may be granted of the remainder. The document also purported to provide for the succession to the mohuntship after his death and named A as his successor, and there was a proviso that certain other persons, called superintendents, would be competent to dismiss him for misconduct and appoint a fit person in his place: Held, that the document is not a will as it does not contain the legal declaration of the intention of the testator with respect to his property, but purports merely to indicate the person who on his death should be elected to undertake the duties of the mohunt; and that the power given to the Superintendents is not such a power of appointment as to give any title to them for obtaining probate. The defendants in answer set up the will in their favour and also a custom by virtue of which the daughters would be excluded from inheritance of their father's property. The Court below held that the will was a forgery, but he dismissed the suit on the ground that the custom was proved. Held, that, as members of their father's family, the daughters who, but for the will, on the death of their mother, would take the property of their father, had a cause of action which entitled them to bring the suit, and the issue whether or not a custom existed excluding them from inheritance was not a fit and proper issue to be determined in the present suit. A caveat was put in by one of the next-of-kin, alleging in effect that the testator had bequeathed the estate to the petitioner, subject to certain instructions as to how the property should be disposed of; and that the petitioner had fraudulently suppressed the private instructions left by the testator in order to claim the estate for himself. It was found that the will did not really express the intentions of the testator, as the plaintiff undertook to dispose of the property in other ways, explained to him by the testator, and that the petitioner was aware, from the first, of the testator's intention that the property should be disposed of according to the testator's instructions. Held, that, if an individual on his death-bed, or at any other time, is persuaded by his heir-at-law, or his next-of-kin, to abstain from making a will, or if the same individual, having made a will, communicates the disposition to the person on the face of the will benefited by that disposition, but at the same time, says to that individual that he has a purpose to answer which he has not expressed in the will, but which he relies on the disponee to carry into effect and the disponee assents to it either expressly or by any mode of action which the disponee knows must give the testator the impression and belief that he fully assents to the request, then undoubtedly, the heir at law in the one case, and the disponee in the other, will be converted into trustees simply on the ground that an individual shall not be benefited by his own personal fraud. The proviso to s. 5 of the Indian Trusts Act which embodies the English equitable rule makes the English Law applicable to India. authority in the Act for applying the principles laid down in the English cases. Per Curiam. —When a legatee or trustee claims as universal legatee, and suppresses the secret instructions given by the testator without stating what they are, with the evident intention of retaining the estate himself, it is clear that the Letters of Administration would enable him to commit fraud, and, therefore, ought not to be granted. Per Sankaran Nair, J.—S 81 of the Trusts Act applies even if the testator intending to dispose of the beneficial interest to others leaves his estate to the devisee. The words "intended to dispose of the beneficial interest therein" in s. 81 have reference to the disposal of the beneficial interest by the transfer or will. In England, evidence appears to be admissible only to prove a trust, but not to prove that the legal estate alone passed. In India, once the evidence is admitted and it is proved that the devisee is only a trustee, he takes no beneficial interest in the property, but holds it only for the benefit of the testator's legal representative, but, under the English Law, he holds it absolutely except where knowledge of the testator's wishes and a fraudulent intention on the part of the devisee, or except where an admission by him that he holds merely as trustee, is shown. Obiter.—Under the Indian Trusts Act, the beneficiary has no estate or interest in the subject-matter of the trust; he has only a right to proceed against the trustee. Per Sankaran Nair, J. (Wallis, J., dissenting), s. 187 of the Indian Succession Act is no bar to a claim by a beneficiary against a legatee, entitled as universal legatee to Letters of Administration to enforce the trust, which a testator has created by giving secret instructions not embodied in the will. Per Sankaran Nair, J. —Though the title of an administrator does not come into existence until the grant of administration, when granted, it relates back to the time of the death of the testator, and where the act is done by a party who afterwards becomes administrator for the benefit of the estate or to fulfil the wishes of the testator, the relation back subsists and the act is valid. Where a person is both an executor de son tort and the universal legatee, he has all the liabilities that belong to the character of executor and universal legatee and cannot plead his omission to obtain Letters of Administration against a beneficiary seeking to enforce the trusts that the legatee is bound to discharge. Per Wallis, J.—A legacy cannot be recovered without administration of the testator's estate, and, where there has been no grant of probate or Letters of Administration, a suit by a beneficiary to enforce the trusts fails. A copy of the Probate granted in Australia is admissible in evidence in India. Such a copy is the copy of the Will and of the endorsement made thereon by the Registrar of Probate showing that the Will has been filed and proved in Court granting the Probate. The will when so recorded and endorsed is a public document under s. 74 (1) (iii) of the Evidence Act which may be proved by secondary evidence under s. 65 (e). A succession certificate was granted in respect of the assets of a deceased person. No objection was taken in the certificate proceedings that the deceased had left any Will. Subsequently, a Will made by the deceased was produced and admitted to Probate in Australia. The executor then applied for the revocation of the certificate. The person who held the certificate contended that the matter was res judicata, as any objection to the grant of the certificate ought to have been made in certificate proceedings: Held, that the matter would not be res judicata unless the executor was aware of the existence of the Will at the time of the certificate proceedings. In the absence of any such evidence, the question was not res judicata. The Court may of its own motion revoke a certificate if it appears that the application contained an untrue allegation of fact essential in point of law to justify the grant thereof. The existence of a Will is an impediment to the grant of a certificate under s. 1 (4) of the Succession Certificate Act. In the matter of ADIJA, 11 Ind. Cas. 261.

(3)—Will speaks from the date of death—Hindu wills, loss of the original—Admission of testator—Presumption as to destruction and revocation of wills in India and under English law.—A will must be construed as speaking and taking effect with reference to the state of things in existence immediately before the testator's death. This principle applies to Hindu wills also. Where the original will is not to be found, there is a presumption in English law that it has been destroyed. But the presumption is not so strong in India, as in other countries, where wills are taken greater care of. Where there was no evidence of the destruction of the will by the testator, but the plaintiffs relied on the non-production of the will and the deposition of certain witnesses, who said that the testator had admitted having destroyed the will, held that these facts were not sufficient to establish the presumption of revocation. But there were at Calcutta two charitable institutions which provided for the relief and enjoyment of the poor families, widows, orphans and schools of the Armenian nation, namely, the Armenian Church called "St. Nazareth's Church" and the Armenian Philanthropic Academy. The will also directed that on

B, finding himself incapable of fulfilling the above duties, he should appoint in his place C, the present appellant, as Mohunt. Held, on the true construction of the will, that it did not give the appellant an absolute, positive and unqualified right at any time to the Mohuntship even on the incapacity of B to perform the duties of Mohunt. Until B became incapable, no trust or duty was even suggested, and even when he should actually become incapable, it cannot be put higher than as a gift in the nature of a precatory trust—that is, one requesting B to perform the wishes of the testator and to appoint the appellant as his successor. It was unnecessary for their Lordships to consider whether, in point of law, a grant of Mohuntship can be made by any holder of the office with the superadded obligation imposing on the grantee the necessity of following the wishes of the grantor, as to the person whom he is to appoint to be his successor in that office. Their Lordships observed that the only law as to the Mohunts and their offices, functions and duties, was to be found in custom and practice, which was to be proved by testimony; and no evidence had been adduced before their Lordships to show that any such appointment had ever been made in reversion on any former occasion. It had only to be considered whether, upon the case as it stood, the appellant had made out his title. It was not necessary to consider whether he had shown any infirmity whatever in the title of the respondent, but whether he had made out a satisfactory case to entitle him to recover the office and the lands and property belonging to it. Their Lordships therefore decided, both on the consideration of the will and on the evidence brought before them, that the appellant had completely failed in his attempt to set up his own title, and that, consequently, the decision of the Court below, to the effect that he had failed to establish any title of his own, ought to be affirmed. (37)—Construction — Bequest, when void for uncertainty—Expression of general charitable intention—Effect —" Sadavarat "—Direction in a will "to start a sadavarat for the needy"—Effect—Practice—Application of principles of English Law in construction of.—A bequest not expressive of any definite intention is void for uncertainty; but no part of a will is to be rejected as destitute of meaning, if it is possible to put a reasonable construction on it. So, if a testator has expressed an absolute general intention to give a legacy to a charitable purpose, but has left uncertain the particular mode by which his intention is to be carried into effect, the Court will supply the defect and enforce the charity. (1 C. 303, 17 B. 351, 31 C. 895, R.) And if, therefore, the general intentions of the testator are so expressed that the trustees or, failing them, the Court under s. 92, Civ. Pro. Code), can draw up a scheme giving effect to such general intentions, there can be no necessity for holding the bequest bad for uncertainty. "Sadavarat" (as admitted by the parties) is charity which takes the form of a periodical distribution, at regular intervals, of money or goods. In directing his trustees "to start a sadavarat for the needy," the testator is expressing a general intention to give a bequest to public charity. Since a practical scheme can easily be settled to carry out the testator's intentions, the bequest is not void for uncertainty. (17 B. 351, N.F.) It has been the universal practice of all Courts in India to consult and follow English decisions when construing wills. Although the English law is not obligatory upon the Courts in the Mofussil, they ought, in proceeding according to "justice, equity and good conscience," to be governed by the principles of English law applicable to a similar state of circumstances. (39)—Charitable devise—Hospital—Provision that property should not be sold.—A testator, an Englishman by birth and domicile, left his personal property to trustees in trust to pay certain annuities to his son and his daughter, and after bequeathing some pecuniary legacies, devised certain immoveable property to the trustees in perpetuity in trust for the support of hospitals in the North West-Provinces, with directions that the surplus income (if any) from his personalty during the lives of his children, and on the death of either of them, his or her annuity, and on the death of both of them, the whole income of the personalty, should be applied in support of the hospitals. There was also a provision in the will that the property should never be sold. A suit was brought for the construction of the above Will and for declaration of the trusts specified therein. It appeared that the income of the personalty was not more than sufficient, after payment of the legacies, to pay the annuities to the testator's children, and that the immoveable property was greatly in need of repairs and did not produce enough for the support of the hospitals, or to enable the trusts of the Will relating thereto to be carried out. Held, that the particular charitable purpose to which the property had been devised in this case, being a hospital, and it having been decided that a hospital had come within the scope of 43 Eliz. c. 4 (Attorney General v. Kell, 2 Beav. 575 and University of London v. Yarrow, 3 Jur. But the prohibition of the testator against selling was held to be void as being repugnant to the gift. It was an

If there be a repugnancy, the first words in a deed and the last in a will shall prevail. This rule has no application where the supposed inconsistencies are in one and the same provision. assets of the testator on failure of the source from which they had been directed to be paid by the testator : Held, though in the case of demonstrative legacies, the legatee is ordinarily entitled to resort to the general assets on failure of the source intended, the rule is subject to any directions to the contrary by the testator. Another contention in the case on behalf of the defendant, was that the interest on the capital, the dividends on the shares, and the income of the immoveable property of the testator should be excluded from the profits out of which the legacies were to be paid to the plaintiff and it was held that the contention was clearly opposed to the ordinary meaning of the vernacular term 'labham' used by the testator. Judging from the use of the said word 'labham,' a very generic expression covering different kinds of profits and gains, and from the context in view of other directions in the will, it must be taken to have been the intention of the testator to use the term in its comprehensive sense of profit, gain or income as opposed to the corpus yielding the same. A testator provided in his will to this effect:— "After my death my wife will be malik like myself, having right to give away, sell, etc., and, after the death of my wife, all that property will come under the control of my son if he is reformed, otherwise, if the son's character is not reformed up to the death of my wife, that property will come after my wife's death on behalf of the grandsons—" Held, that the effect of the will was to vest the property absolutely in the testator's wife. Held, further, that the obvious intention of the testator was to keep the property out of the hands of the son so long as he did not reform himself, and that the testator provided that, if any portion of the estate was left intact at the time of his widow's death, it was not to find its way into the hands of his son, except in the event of a complete reformation of his habits in the meanwhile. (55)—Will—Construction—Malik, meaning of—Direction for establishment of pious institution for commemoration of testator's same—Uncertainty—Reversioner not to get property—Void provision — Improvements—Right to claim value, when arises — Improvements by life-tenant or purchaser from him.—No importance should be attached to isolated expressions in a will, but the Court must look to all its clauses and give effect to them, ignoring none as redundant or contradictory. (8 C.L.J. 20, F.) Although a donee might be declared as the malik, by which term ordinarily a heritable and alienable estate is created, the effect of the word may be modified by the context, and the full proprietary rights imported by the word may be materially restricted by the other provisions of the will. (8 C.L.J. 20, 10 C. 342, 30 A. 84, 5 A.L.J. 67, 18 M.L.J. 7, 12 C.W.N. 231, P.C., 10 Bom. L.R. 59, 7 C.L.J. 131, 3 M.L.T. 144, 5 Ind. Cas. 73, 14 C.W.N. 458, F.) Therefore, where it is stated in the preamble of a will that the testator's widow should own and possess like himself his ancestral properties, but in the body it is provided that she should be able to sell the properties for the performance of pious acts: Held, that the testator had no intention to create an absolute interest in favour of his widow. A will provided for the establishment of a pious institution of a permanent character for commemoration of the testator's name, held void for uncertainty. No effect can be given to a clause in a will, which provides that the reversionary heirs of the testator should not obtain his property. As a general rule, in order to entitle an occupant of land to compensation for improvements, three things must concur; first, he must have held possession under colour of title; secondly, his possession must have been adverse to the title of the true owner, that is, it must not have been possession by mere permission of another whose title he recognises; and, thirdly, he must have acted in good faith, that is, under the honest belief that he has secured good title to property in question and is the rightful owner thereof; and for this belief there must be some reasonable grounds such as would lead a man of ordinary prudence to entertain it. As a general rule, improvements made on property by a life-tenant thereof attach to the estate and pass to the reversioner or remainderman, at the expiration of the life estate, without any liability on his part to make compensation therefor; and the same is true of improvements made by a purchaser from one who holds a limited interest, for it is presumed that such purchaser knows the title which he acquires. The defendants purchased certain property from the widow of a Hindu testator and effected certain improvements on it. The reversioners sued to set aside the alienation. There was a substantial question in controversy as to the true effect of the will which was of an ambiguous character; Held that the plaintiffs would not be liable for the cost of any improvement effected during the lifetime of the widow but the defendants are entitled to claim the value of improvements effected by them subsequent to the death of the widow and up to the date of the judgment. (56)—Malik—Meaning of—Absolute interest—Hindu widows.—Unless there is something in the context qualifying it, the word malik used in a will, bears its technical meaning. When a testator bequeathed his property to his issue if he happened to have any, and if he had no issue then to his mother and wife who were to be "malik and qubiz jaidad," held, that the ladies obtained an absolute interest. (57)—Construction of document—"Money"—General personal estate.—Where a testator after clearly indicating an intention to exclude entirely certain of his relations from succession to his property, proceeded to bequeath his "money" to two legatees, with directions as to its disposal, it was held that the intention of the testator being apparently, from a perusal of the whole will, to bequeath all his personal property to the legatees, it was not necessary to construe the term used in its strict limited signification, but the whole of the testator's personal estate passed. (59)—Bengali will, construction of—Practice—Vesting of bequest, words necessary for—Parjyapta Haibek, meaning and effect of—Appointment of Guardian with direction to make over gift on legatee attaining majority—Effect.—In construing Bengali wills, it must be remembered that there is no line of precedents attaching to Bengali terms meanings which make them understood as terms of art by Bengali lawyers. The only safe course is to give to the words their plain ordinary meaning. There are no particular words necessary to the vesting of a bequest or a legacy. The "Parjyapta haibek," whether they mean "descend to" or "devolve or go" or "shall become vested" have the effect of vesting the legacy at once. A bequest in favour of a person simply confers a vested interest, and the appointment of an executor and guardian to that person while he is a minor, with a direction to make over the property to him on his attaining majority, does not postpone the vesting of the bequest. HARRIS v. BROWN, 28 C. 621=28 I.A. 159=5 C.W.N. 729=3 Bom. L.R. 808=8 Sar. 92.

(60)—Construction of will—"Purchase" does not include acquisition by inheritance—Intention of testator not to be presumed.—One of the rules of construction in case of wills is that words in general are to be taken in their ordinary and grammatical sense, unless a clear intention to use them in another can be collected. When the language of the will is perfectly unambiguous and definitely precise, the Courts are not justified in straining it for the purpose of giving effect to some supposed intention of the testator which is neither expressed nor implied by the terms of the will. Under a clause of his will, a person gave proprietary possession for life of all houses then in his possession, and also of those which he might afterwards purchase (khureed keren). Five years after the execution of the will, he acquired a house by inheritance on the death of his brother. After his death, his widow claimed the house under the will. Held that the word "purchase" was used only in its ordinary sense, and so it could not include the notion of acquisition by purchase, and that the house did not pass by the will to the testator's widow. MRS. FRANCES GEORGE v. MRS. HELENA GEORGE, 6 N.W.P. 219.

(61)—Will—Gift with clear words of inheritance—Clause forbidding alienation — Nature of estate granted.—A testator gave all his properties to his daughters "so as to be enjoyed by them for all time to come and with all rights of ownership." He however introduced into the will a clause forbidding alienation. The brother's son of the testator sued to set aside an alienation made by the daughters, on the ground that the will conferred on them only a limited estate and the alienation was in consequence invalid. Held that, as the gift to the daughters contained clear words of inheritance, the clause forbidding alienation could not neutralize the effect of those words. The plaintiff's claim was therefore not sustainable. KANNU PILLAI v. CHELLATHAMMAL, 10 M. L.J. 203.

(62)—"Such"—Interpretation.—One of the clauses of a will ran "as regards the remaining one equal fourth share of the said residue, I direct that if at the time the said residue is divisible, my son Ardeshir shall have no debts due by him or any liabilities likely to result in a debt or debts or more than Rs. 5,000 the said shall be made over to him absolutely but if otherwise then I direct that the said share shall be held or settled by my executors upon trust until the said Ardeshir shall be free from such debts and liabilities or until he shall die to apply the income of the same in or towards the maintenance and support of him, his wife and children or such or one or more of them the said Ardeshir his wife and childern as the trustees may at their absolute discretion determine and the education and other benefit of such children including their marriage but when and so soon as he, the said Ardeshir, shall be free from such debts and liabilities as aforesaid upon trust to pay the same and all unapplied income if any to him the said Ardeshir absolutely." On a construction of this clause: Held, that the debts and liabilities of Ardeshir contemplated by the above clause are "debts due by him or any liabilities likely to result in a debt or debts of more than Rs. 5,000"; and it is with debts of that description that a comparison is implied by the use of the word 'such.' Time is no part of their description; it is extraneous to it and the reference to time is made only to indicate the event on which certain consequences are to follow according as debts and liabilities of the description indicated do or do not exist. (63)—Meaning of words "in trust"—For her maintenance and support—During her life.—A will contained the following clauses :—Cl. 1:—I will and bequeath to my dear wife Anne in trust and for her maintenance and support during her life all the money, property, goods and chattels of which I may die possessed whatever and wheresoever situated, and I appoint my dear wife Anne sole administratrix of this, my last will and testament. Cl. 10:—I further will that my dear wife Anne, as sole executrix of this my last will and testament shall draw from current deposit accounts, whether here or in Great Britain, such sum or sums of money as she may require for her maintenance and for the working and maintenance of my property; and that she shall receive and dispose of all processes, rents and profits from the said property as to her may seem best in the interests of the property; and I empower her to sell all or any part of the property at any time when it may appear to her that a favourable opportunity occurs. Held, that the will conferred a life estate on the wife and that the testator did not intend to use words "in trust" in cl. 1 in their technical sense. Even if the words "in trust" were given their legal effect, he intended the trust for the benefit of his wife only. Held, further, that the words "for her maintenance and support" were words of description or motive, and would in no way cut down the estate "during her life" which the testator in terms gave to his wife. R died in 1895 leaving plaintiff as his heir. R was never in possession of the house, nor did he participate in the profits thereof; but V and C lived in the house till their respective deaths. In a suit by plaintiff for R's one-third share of the house; held, on a construction of the will as a whole, that the intention of the testator was not to pass any estate of inheritance to the three devisees and their respective heirs as tenants-in-common, but to provide that the estate should be enjoyed by the three devisees and their descendants as long as any of them existed, and that it is in effect to establish a line of descent unknown to law. Held, also, where R, V and C be taken as tenants-in common or joint tenants, the entry of one would be entry on behalf of the rest, unless there were clear evidence of an intention to hold adversely. As V or C never intended to hold adversely

(68)—Will, construction of—Legacy, Vesting of—Divesting clause—"Division"—Gift over—Indian Succession Act, ss. 76, 91, 106.—A testator directed his trustees and executors, after conversion of all his estate into money, to divide it among the various persons named in the will, and to pay it over to them in the shares and proportions therein mentioned,—in the case of males, when they should attain the age of 21, and in the case of females, when they should attain that age or marry. There was also a provision in the will, that, in the event of any of such persons dying in the testator's life-time or at any time thereafter, prior to "division," leaving lawful issue, such issue should take the share of their deceased parent. One of the legatees who had attained the age of 21 at the testator's death, died some months after leaving issue. Held, on the construction of the will—(a) that at the testator's death, the legacy vested in the legatee, but became divested by the legatee's death prior to division. He also added that, on Y attaining 30 years of age, the net residue of the property remaining at the time should be given to C (if the trustees consider him fit to carry on business transactions), and that, in case of Y's death, the same should be given to X. On a construction of the will, it was held (1) that the property vested in Y on the death of the testator, but only for a life-estate, and (2) that the income arising from the property (after deducting Rs. 500 to be given to X) should be paid to Y, the property remaining with the Official Trustee as directed by the will until Y attained the age of 30. will of a testator provided for three events. The event, which did happen, was the first, i.e., his wife remained his widow until her death, though her children pre-deceased her without being married. Held, on the construction of the will, that it was the testator's intention, by the first devise, to give the estate to his wife and children jointly and that what followed was merely intended to restrict the mode in which they should enjoy it. HALIBURTON v. THE ADMINISTRATOR-ENERAL OF BENGAL, 21 C. 488.

(73)—Right of devisee to entire interest of testator—Burden of proving devise only of restricted interest.—In this case, the plaintiff, the adopted son of the testator, sued for a refund of certain payments made by him and for a declaration by the High Court of his non-liability under the will of his father to make any further payment in future to the defendant. The first Court was of opinion that the bequest contained in the will executed by plaintiff's father, conferred on the husband of the defendant and his brothers an absolute interest in the property bequeathed to them, and, on that ground, among others, it dismissed the suit of the plaintiff. The lower appellate Court, however, considered that, as the deed of adoption in which the devise was made, contained the names of the devisees without any mention of heirs, it was, a mere personal devise to them. But, on second appeal, the High Court applied the rule for the construction of wills recognised in s. 82 of Act X of 1865, that, where property is bequeathed to any person, he is entitled to the interests of the testator therein, unless it appears from the will that only a restricted interest was intended for him. And plaintiff who was the party that contended for the restricted construction, and upon whom lay the onus of supporting that contention, had failed to establish that such was the intention of the testator. (74)—Suit for getting will construed—Provision for maintenance of testator's children—Specification of period of distribution—Vesting of share of dividends in each legatee—Estate once vested, express words necessary to divesting of.—This was a suit filed for the purpose of having certain clauses in a will construed and the shares of the beneficiaries under the will paid to them. The Court had to determine the correct grammatical construction of the will and to ascertain the legal rights of the beneficiaries under it. Under such construction it was held that the will (1) directed the executors to collect the moneys of the testator and invest them in public funds. It then (2) provided for the maintenance of the testator's children out of the dividends upon the invested moneys which were to be applied at the discretion of the executors towards the maintenance and education of the children until each son attained the age of twenty-one years, when his share of the dividends was to be paid to him. After providing then for a dowry to each of the daughters, the will, by its second clause, provided for the ultimate distribution of the residue, directing that, after the testator's daughters shall be married and after all his sons shall have attained the age of twenty-one, it shall be distributed between the sons and daughters that may be surviving at the time. This construction of cls. (1) and (2) of the will, which was that contended for on behalf of the plaintiff, was held to be the fair grammatical construction under which the several provisions as to the testator's money would follow one another in just and logical order. The other construction proposed, according to which the directions for distribution contained in cl. 2 of the will were to be deemed to apply only to the economies out of the dividends, or the accumulations of them which the executors might be able to effect or make, was held to be a strained or forced construction, though not an ungrammatical one, and to be open to several objections such as that of excluding the daughters from sharing in the bulk of the moneys and limiting them to a share only in the probable accumulations of the dividends. The further question had to be considered as to whether the son and daughter who died before the period of distribution, having lived beyond their 21st year were, through their representatives, entitled to share in the distribution; in other words, whether the sons and daughters, on attaining their 21st year, took a vested interest in their share of the collected moneys. Held that, by the testator's direction that each son shall be paid his share on attaining the age of 21, withdrew him from the general clause and allocated to him a particular interest in the fund. Though grammatically, the share allocated to him under the will was a share of the dividends, the allocation or gift to a legatee of the dividends of a fund should be regarded in law as a gift to him of the fund itself. The direction to the trustees to pay his share of the dividends to each son of the testator as he came of age was a gift, and a vested gift of such share to him, and a legacy once vested could not be divested except under express words to the contrary in the will itself. receive equal shares, and the will stated, "if any of these four persons happen to die, the survivor of them will receive this estate in equal shares; but, if there be a son or grandson, surviving as the heir and representative of the party dying, such survivor shall succeed to his share; if there be a daughter or granddaughter in the female line surviving, such survivor shall receive a share of the property; so long as my infant grandson shall not have attained his majority, the whole of my estate shall remain undivided," it was held that the date of the testator's death was the period of survivorship intended by the will, that all the four legatees, having survived the testator, took absolute interests in the shares named, and that the estate became divisible on the infant grandson attaining majority. ELLOKASEE DOSSEE v. DURPONARAIN BYSACK, 5 C. 59. (9 M.I.A. 123, Disc.)

(76)—Gift to a class in a will—Postponement of period of distribution—After-born child—S. 98, Succession Act (X of 1865)—Lapsed bequest—Division among surviving legatees—Original and accruing shares.—Where, under a will, the children of the testator's brother took vested interests in his residuary estate at his death, the period of distribution alone being postponed, it was held that the class would open to admit an object born after the testator's death, but before the period of distribution. [R., 9 C.L.R. 28.] Where, under the same will, the nephew and nieces of the testator took in unequal proportions, "with benefit of survivorship between and among all of them," it was held that the division in unequal proportions applied only to the original shares, and not to accruing ones, and that, therefore, the share of a nephew, who died after the testator's death, but before the period of distribution, was divisible equally among his surviving brothers and sisters. When the subject of a gift is disposed of among the original objects in unequal shares, there is no necessary inference, in the absence of any declared intimation of intention to assimilate the accruing to the original share, that the survivors are to take accruing shares in the same relative proportions. (77)—Gift to class—Some of the members not having been in existence at testator's death—Secondary intention to give to members who should be so in existence.—The main question on which the construction of the will in this case turned was whether the terms "sons of sons," "daughters of sons" and "widows of sons," which occurred throughout the will, denoted a class, so that the gift would be wholly void, as only a very few members of the class were in existence at the time of the testator's death, or whether the gift to any members of the class who were in existence at such time took effect; in other words, whether, under the will, the gift should be taken to be good in favour of such members of the said three classes as were in existence at the time of the testator's death to the exclusion of all the others. It was held that in construing a will it was the primary duty of the Court to carry out, as far as possible, the intentions of the testator, and if the Court comes to the conclusion that the testator had the primary intention of benefiting all the members of a class, and if such intention fails by reason of its being void, yet, if the Court can deduce a secondary intention that at least such members of the class should take as were in existence at the time of the testator's death, then effect should be given to such secondary intention. In the present case, the Court concluded that the testator intended to benefit all the members of the three classes as a whole and that he had no intention of benefiting any particular member or members of any of the classes in the event of the gift to the classes as a whole failing by reason of the non-existence of some of the members at the testator's death. Reading the will as a whole, the conclusion was arrived at that the testator intended to benefit no members of any of the classes unless he could equally benefit all of the members of each class whether born before or after his death. He left eight sons, four by his first wife (hereinafter called the elder sons) and four (hereinafter called the younger sons) by his second wife L, who also survived him. By his will, he left all his property to his elder sons, subject to a charge of Rs. 30,000 in favour of his widow L and his younger sons. After their father's death, the elder sons carried on large business transactions, under the style of Somji Parpia & Co., and in the course of their business became indebted to the Bank of Bombay in respect of advances on bills drawn by the firm in Bombay upon a branch of the firm at Indore. To secure these advances, the elder sons, on September 1, 1890, deposited certain title-deeds relating to the property in suit, by way of equitable mortgage, with the Bank ; and on January 12, 1899, the Bank obtained from them a formal mortgage on the same property, to secure the repayment of Rs. 52,000 in respect of bills then due or to become due drawn by the firm on their Indore Branch. It was not disputed that, that debt was a debt of the four elder sons in respect of their own business, and that the legacy to the widow and the younger sons was at that time and still unsatisfied. The property consisted of a house and a piece of land, to both of which the mortgagors declared themselves to be entitled, but both of which had been specified by their father S in his will, as subject to the charge of Rs. 30,000 in favour of his widow and younger sons. That will was not among the documents of title deposited with the Bank, but the root of the title to the house, the more valuable of the two properties, was indicated in the will of Meenabai, widow of S's brother D, which was deposited. From that it appeared that the house had been the joint property of the two brothers. The Bank's legal advisers made no investigation of the title of the mortgagors, and appeared to have assumed that the mortgagors were the absolute owners of the property mortgaged. It was not suggested that the mortgagors practised any concealment of the real facts of the case. Nor was it suggested that the younger sons had any knowledge of the dealings of their elders with the Bank. But when the Bank advertised the properties for sale, they filed the present suit in order to establish the priority of their charge over the mortgage to the Bank. The only question in the appeal was whether they were entitled to such priority. Held, that, if the Bank's legal advisers had made any investigation of title, they must have inquired how S's share had come to the mortgagors and in that way obtained cognizance of his will, and of the charge on that portion of his estate; that if the mortgagors had been asked about their father's will, it was to be presumed that they would have given an honest answer that the mortgagee had constructive notice and that the claim of the younger sons of S must prevail over the mortgage to the Bank and the title of its transferee. It was contended that by the terms of the will the legacy was to be made up and paid within six years after the testator's decease; that this period would have expired in 1891, eight years before the date of the mortgage; and that assuming notice of the will on the part of the Bank, the Bank was entitled to assume that the executors were acting with the consent of the legatees: Held, that, lapse of time was, no doubt, a circumstance that might be taken into consideration in cases of that kind; but having regard to the fact that, in the present case, two of the younger sons were still minors when the title-deeds were deposited with the Bank, and that continued possession by the elder sons was not inconsistent with the purposes of the will, the rights of the parties remained unaffected by that circumstance. (89)—Proviso for cesser—Conditional limitation—Breach of condition.—Prosono Coomar Tagore, a Hindu, died on 30—8—1868, having made a Will in the English language, whereby, after declaring that he had already made such provision for his son Ganendro (the plaintiff who had become a Christian in his father's lifetime) as he, the testator, considered sufficient, and that Ganendro would take nothing whatever under the Will, he gave all his property to four trustees, upon trust, as to the moveable property (in the Will called personal estate) "to collect and get in the same" (with certain specified exceptions), and thereout "to pay his funeral expenses and debts and such legacies as were not by the Will postponed in payment:" and to invest the residue, and out of the annual proceeds of such investments, so far as the same would extend, to pay the annuities and postponed legacies as they became payable; and to pay such surplus income as might, from time to time, exist to the person entitled to the beneficial enjoyment of the real property, or the surplus rents and profits thereof; with an ultimate trust, after all the legacies and annuities to the beneficial or absolute enjoyment of the real property. And as to the immoveable property (in the Will called real property), upon trust, until all the debts and legacies had been paid, and all the annuities had fallen in to receive the rents, and thereout in the first instance to pay the unsatisfied legacies and annuities and to pay the surplus rents to the person or persons for the time being to whom the real estate (subject to the devise to the trustees) was given by the Will. And, as a first charge on the net income of the real property after satisfying the expenses of establishments the testator directed to pay Rs. 30,000 per annum to the person for the time being entitled to the beneficial enjoyment of the real property or the surplus income thereof. He further directed them, after all the annuities and legacies had fallen in and been satisfied, to convey the real estate so far as the then condition of circumstances would permit, unto and to the use of the person entitled, under the limitation contained in the Will, to the beneficial interest therein. The first limitation was to Jattendro's life. At the end of the limitation of the real estate, the Will contained the following proviso (on which the plaintiff based the present suit):—"Provided always, and I hereby declare that, if any devisee, or tenant-for-life or entail, or otherwise, or any person entitled to take as heir by descent, or adoption, or otherwise, or in any manner under the limitation hereinbefore contained shall permit or suffer the said property so decreed and limited as aforesaid or any portion thereof, to be sold for arrears of Government revenue, or shall, after attaining his majority ceases to keep up in a due state of repair, and to use as his residence in Calcutta the said baithakhana house and premises where I now reside, and make use of and enjoy my library, horses, carriages, farmyard, furniture in the said house, and jewels, gold and silver plates, etc., in my use or possession, then, and immediately thereupon the devise and limitations in this my Will contained and declared shall wholly cease and determine as to him, and the person next in succession to him, under the limitation aforesaid, shall at once succeed as if the said person so permitting or suffering the said property, or any portion thereof, to be sold for arrears of Government Revenue, or so ceasing to keep up in a due state of repair, and to use as his residence my said baithakhana house, had then died." The testator died in August 1868. On 17-12-1868 his son, the plaintiff, instituted a suit for avoiding and setting aside the trusts and limitation in the Will, except so far as they were for the payment of debts, legacies and annuities. On 1—4—1869, a decree was made dismissing the suit, but giving the plaintiff costs out of the estate. Against that decree, the plaintiff appealed, and on 1—9—1869 the appellate Court by its decree declared that, subject to the trusts for the payment of debts, legacies and annuities, the plaintiff was absolutely entitled to the personalty or moveable property and in effect that he was entitled as the testator's heir-at-law, after the death of Juttindro to the immoveable property. Against this decree Juttindro and others claiming under the limitation in the will appealed to the Privy Council. At first the plaintiff did not appeal against the decree of 1—9—1869, but he subsequently obtained from the Judicial Committee special leave to appeal and in his cross-appeal he claimed that the gift by the Will of the life-estate to Juttindro ought to be declared void and inoperative. By the order of Her Majesty in Council dated 9—8—1872, it was declared that the defendant Juttindro was beneficially entitled to a life interest under the Will in the immoveable property, and also in the moveable property directed to be conveyed or converted into a fund respectively subject to the payments in the Will directed to be made, and to the provision of the Will not thereby declared to be void; and also, until the legacies and annuities fall in and are satisfied, to receive Rs. 2,500 per month out of the net rents of the immoveable property, and also the surplus rents of the same and the surplus interest of the moveable property, and that upon the failure or determination of the life-interest of Juttindro, the plaintiff was entitled as heir-at-law to the real and personal property. The proviso for cesses was not among the provisions which were declared void. Juttindro was one of the trustees under the Will. After the testator's death, the business of the estate continued, as theretofore, to be carried on in a portion of the baithakhana house; and Juttindro who had a family dwelling house of his own, used, up to November 1869, to attend at the baithakhana daily for the transaction of business. In November 1869, Juttendro quarrelled with his co-trustees, and ceased to go to the baithakhana. In April 1870, he demanded from the other trustees that possession of the baithakhana should be given to him, and upon their insisting on the rights to occupy the portion of the baithakhana used for the purpose of the estate business, sued them for possession. In July 1870, a decree for possession was made in his favour; the trustees appealed, and ultimately in July 1871, the appellate Court made a declaration that it was consistent with the truth of the Will that Juttendro should enter into possession, and the trustees were ordered to deliver to him possession of the baithakhana, except the portion of the ground floor occupied for the business of the estate. After obtaining this decree, Juttindro found that the baithakhana was in a very bad state of repair, and called upon the trustees to have proper repairs effected. On their refusal to do so, except under the direction of the Court, Juttendro in December, 1871, sued to compel them to effect necessary repairs. The trustees contested the suit; but in March 1872, a decree was passed directing them to make the repairs. Thereupon the repairs were completed in October 1872. Ganendro filed a suit against

Juttendro alleging that the latter had committed a breach of one or more of the conditions contained in the proviso for cesses, by not residing in the baithakhana house and by neglecting to keep it in repair and had thereby incurred a forfeiture of which the plaintiff was entitled to take advantage. Held that the clause containing the provisions for cesser and shifting of the estate was intended to come into operation as a whole, and not piecemeal and that, under the circumstances, the time had not arrived when the testator had intended the clause to operate. Held also, that assuming that the time had arrived when the proviso for cesser would, under ordinary circumstances, take effect, the action of the plaintiff in contesting the right of Juttendro, under the Will, to occupy the baithakhana house and premises, debarred him from claiming that effect should be given to the clause of forfeiture for non-residence. Even apart from any action by the plaintiff, there were circumstances arising out of the conduct of the trustees which were sufficient to execuse non-residence by Juttendro, and which would suspend the operation of the forfeiture clause until October 1872 (inasmuch as Juttendro had, by no default of his own, been prevented until then from obtaining such a possession as was contemplated by the forfeiture clause). The forfeiture clause was not brought into operation by the judgment and order of the Judicial Committee of 9-8-1872. Held, further, on the evidence, that Juttindro had complied with the conditions as to residence. (92)—Bequest to wife imposing obligation to maintain and educate children — Nature of interest taken by legatee—Construction of Will —Decree against wife and son—Execution—Interest of wife and son under Will attached—Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, ss. 268, 274, 275—Assignment of interest—Conveyance to defraud creditors—Transfer of Property Act, IV of 1882, s. 53.—In 1891, A died leaving him surviving his widow W and two sons S and T (defendants). Prior to his death, he had executed a Will, under which he bequeathed the residue of his property to trustees (one of them being W) in trust to pay the rents and income thereof to W for life. The Will also directed that she should, during her lifetime, maintain, educate and bring up his children in a manner suitable to their degree in life, and that, after her death, all his properties should be divided equally between his two sons on T attaining the age of 25 years. The present suit was brought by the plaintiff, the holder of a decree against W and S, praying that the testator's Will may be construed and the rights of W and S therein may be ascertained and declared. On behalf of the defendants it was contended that W was a bare trustee of the rents for the benefit of her sons. Held that the interest taken by W under the Will was one for life in the rents, but subject to the obligation of maintaining, educating and bringing up her children S and T. Held, further, that, the testator's children having attained majority and also obtained a considerable fortune under the Will of their uncle, and consequently being no longer in need of being maintained by W, that obligation had been discharged with the result that W was entitled to a life-interest free from all further obligations to maintain the testator's children. In the above case, in execution of the decree which the plaintiff had obtained against W and S, the immoveable properties which had belonged to A's estate were attached under s. 274, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, by an order dated 2nd July, 1895. On the part of the defendants it was contended that W had no attachable interest, because she was a bare trustee for her sons under the Will. They further pleaded that, even if she had any attachable interest, the attachment should not have been made under s. 274, but only under s. 268, because she must be held to have an interest in moveable property only. Held that the interest taken by W must be regarded as immoveable property as defined in s. 2, cl. 5, of the General Clauses Act (I of 1868), and that the same had been validly attached under s. 274, Civ Pro. Code, 1882. In the above case, the defendants also contended that the plaintiff had no remedy against either of them, because W had surrendered her life-interest to her son T under an assignment deed, dated 20—2—1896, and also because the interest of S under the Will had been settled for the benefit of himself and his family under a deed of settlement, dated 9—2 1895. Held (1) that, under s. 276, Civ. Pro. Code (1882), the assignment by W was invalid as against the plaintiff, the assignment having been made subsequent to the attachment (of 2—7—1895); (2) that, even independently of the attachment, W's assignment to her son T must be held to be invalid as against the plaintiff under s. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), the express object of the assignment being to take away the property from the reach of creditors; and (3) that the settlement deed by S was also invalid under s. 53 of Act IV of 1882, as against the plaintiff. (93)—Repugnant gift over—Bequest to wife—Validity.—Where there is gift which upon the face of it appears to be absolute, but subsequent provisions, either of the same will or by a codicil, show an intention to cut down the interest to a life interest, the Court reading the whole will or will and codicil together will allow the intention to prevail; but where there is an absolute gift in the first place and no subsequent words purporting to cut it down but provisions in favour of other objects purporting to limit or restrain the complete power of alienation or testamentary disposition of the first donee, or to compel the devolution of property on the intestacy of the first donee otherwise than the law would prescribe, then such provisions are void as being inconsistent with and repugnant to the absolute gift to the first donee. Where a testator leaves all his property to his "wife" and there is no other description of the legatee, even though she might have been previously married, and therefore her marriage with the testator invalid, the bequest will nevertheless hold good in the absence of any suggestion that there was any fraud upon the testator in the matter of her former marriage. appellate Court held that the legacy was a conditional legacy, and that the condition about "good works" was not valid for reasons of uncertainty, and that the appellant could only recover the interest of the money, and not the principal; but, the High Court held that the construction put upon the Will by the lower Court was erroneous and unsupportable. The case fell within the analogy of the bequests referred to in s. 125 of Act X of 1865, and not in s. 127. There was no condition precedent in this case such as is contemplated in s. 121 or 123. The mention of "good works" was not intended to limit the absolute right of appellant to the money. It was only a direction, and not a condition precedent. The bequest under consideration came within the class of bequest with directions as to application or enjoyments, and the principal intention of the testator was to bequeath absolutely Rs. 2,000 for the benefit of the appellant, who was his wife, and this gift was meant by him as a provision for her. The bequest was not in favour of "good works" but one in favour of the plaintiff-appellant. There was, however, a direction relating to "good works," and that direction being void for uncertainty plaintiff became absolutely entitled to the money. BAI BAPI v. of a Hindu testator as would give to his widow unqualified control over his property. By the use of such words as "my wife is the owner after me" or words of similar description, it is usually understood that the testator is providing for the succession during the life-time of the widow and not altering the line of inheritance after her death. So, in the present case, notwithstanding that the testator had emphatically declared that his wife was to be the owner after his death, in one passage stating that just as he was the owner, so she was to be the owner, the widow was held to have obtained only a life-interest in the property. (98)—Gift over to sons of income from house—Life-estate—Residue of undisposed ulterior interest, gift of life-estate in.—In this appeal the Court had to determine whether the construction put by the Division Court upon the eighth clause of the Will in question and upon the thirteenth and eighteenth clauses read together was correct. By the eighth clause, the testator provided that his wife should have a life-interest in two of his dwelling houses therein specified with absolute powers of disposition over their rents and profits. He then proceeded to deal with the houses after her death as follows:—"In the event of the decease of my wife Navivahu, my sons Damodar and Dayabhai may take in equal shares half and half the income that may be received and the heirs also of both of these my sons may always take the income from time to time, and may divide and take it up. To the same no one has any claim or title." With regard to this clause, the appellate Court held that the Division Court (Mr. Justice Candy) was correct in holding that under the clause, the two sons of the testator took only a life-interest in the houses as tenants-in-common, and that the ulterior interests therein, not being disposed of, fell unto the residue. Gift of the income of property in general terms carries with it a gift of the property itself only where the will affords no indication of an intention that the enjoyment of the bequest should be of limited duration. In the result, the High Court construed the clause to the effect that the testator, when he gave the income of the houses to his sons equally, did not intend to give to them the houses themselves, but desired that their enjoyment of the houses should be in point of time co-extensive with their respective lives. As to the bequest of the residue, it was urged that the sons took absolute estates in the residue as tenants-in-common, and that the defeasance did not operate, but (varying the decree of Candy, J.) the appellate Court held that the construction that the testator's sons took only life-estates in the property which they were to divide and take under cl. 13, and which he of his free will gave them by cl. 18, and which under the same clause, they were to divide and take, would give better effect to the intention of the testator than to hold that the sons took absolute estates so as to enable them to will away the whole property to strangers or to favour their daughters at the expense of the sons. The Court therefore declared that the two sons of the testator, the appellant and the first respondent, took only a life-estate in a moiety or half share of the residuary estate, that, if the appellant Damodardas die without leaving a son, his moiety in the residuary estate will devolve upon his brother Dayabhai if then alive, or, if the latter be then dead, upon his son, Karsandas (if then alive), and that if Dayabhai should die without leaving a son, his moiety will then devolve upon his brother the said appellant Damodardas (if then alive). At P's death. M had a daughter C living. Subsequently M had a son who died shortly after. On M's death, P's heir claimed the property in preference to C on the ground that the bequest to M's children was invalid as being a gift to a class. Held that C was entitled, and not the plaintiff, because the primary intention of the testator was that all the members of the class specified (i e., the children of M) should take and his secondary intention was that if all could not take, those who could should do so. Here, there was one member of the class who could take the property, and it must, therefore, be inferred that the testator meant that she should take it rather than that his intention should be defeated altogether. (100)—Construction of Will—Clause giving over income from house to testator's sons—Residuary estate, whether life estate only or absolute estate conferred on sons.—This suit had been brought by the respondent, one of the sons of a Hindu testator of Bombay, for the construction of a Will made by his father. The suit was filed in the High Court on its original side against the plaintiff's brother with whom a son of the plaintiff was also impleaded as co-defendant. The decree of the original Court was varied on an appeal to an appellate Divisional Bench of the High Court whose judgment has been reported in I.L.R. 21 B. 1. On this appeal to the Privy Council from the said judgment, the main question related to the interest taken by the sons in the residuary estate, i.e., whether their interests therein were absolute or only amounted to a life-estate. The original Court and the appellate had both held that the sons took a life-interest, in certain houses under the Will, as tenants-in-common, and that the alterior interests therein not being validly disposed of fell into the residue. This construction of cl. 8 of the Will was not disputed before their Lordships and the contention before them related to cls. 13 and 18 of the Will. Cl. 13 was held to be inapplicable under the circumstances. The appellate High Court had held that the construction that the testator's sons took only life-interests in the property which they were to divide and take under cl. 13, and which, the testator of his freewill had given them under cl. 18 would give better effect to the intention of the testator than to hold that the sons took absolute estates therein. Their Lordships, however, doubted whether the words in cl. 13 following the direction therein that the sons may divide and take the whole of the residue in equal shares, clearly showed at all that only a restricted interest was intended to be given to them. They were of opinion that cl. 18 was the one applicable to the residue and that clause distinctly gave the residue to the sons in equal shares absolutely, except in the case of the subsequent birth of a son or a daughter. Reversing the decree of the High Court that had held that the sons of the testator took only a life-interest, their Lordships declared that each of the sons took an absolute interest in a half-share of the residuary estate of the testator. (101)—Gift over.—Under a will the residue after the payment of certain legacies, was divided into three shares, with respect to one of which trusts were declared in favour of the wife (plaintiff) and children of the testator's son Husseinbhai. The testator directed a trust-deed to be made in respect of this share. He also directed that out of the share a sum of Rs. 60,000 should be specifically dealt with as therein mentioned, and provided that "out of the said income (a sum) to the extent of Rs. 300, namely, three hundred, shall be paid every month to Husseinbhai's wife for (her) household expenses and for the education of (her) children." The will further provided: "If Husseinalli should not have any son or after having a son should he die without leaving any son, then . . I give the whole of the remaining property to my son Mahomedbhai and his younger brothers and in the same manner after the decease of Husseinalli and his wife I give the said sum of Rs. 60,000 also to him and them." Husseinbhai had no son at the date of the testator's death. He died leaving him surviving his wife (the plaintiff), a daughter and a son. The son died an infant a few months after Husseinbhai's death. Under these circumstances, the plaintiff claimed that she was entitled to a one-third share of Rs. 60,000 and to Rs. 300 a month during her life; Held, (1) that the plaintiff, as the heir of her son on whom Husseinbhai's interest devolved, was entitled to the one-third claimed by her in the balance of Rs. 60,000 ; (2) that from the time when the above-mentioned one-third was handed over to her, there should be a proportional abatement in the amount of Rs. 300 which was payable to her every month during her life. MAHOMEDBHAI v. FATMABAI, 8 Bom. L. R. 613.

If, on the other hand, she is delivered of a female child, all the expenses of the marriage and maintenance till that period should be defrayed from my estate. .....In case my son dies before attaining proper age, all my estate and property should be taken possession of by my brother. My wife..... is to be maintained from my estate if she continues to live in our family dwelling house under my brother's protection." Held, on the birth of a daughter to the widow of the testator, (a) the clause in italics purported to give the property itself to the brother, the power of management having been already given him in appointing him executor ; (b) the provision for the maintenance of the widow and marriage expenses of the daughter tend to show that they were not to take the larger estate which they would take successively as heiresses ; (c) the gift over to the brother takes effect on failure of the gift to the son, in whatever mode that failure takes place, even if it be not in the precise manner expressed in the terms of the gift. (Jones v. Westcomb, 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 245). [F, 3 C.L.J. 502=10 C.W.N. 695=33 C. 947.] Courts ought not to construe the clauses of a will in such a way as to reduce some of its provisions to a dead letter, if they can construe them in such a way as to make them operative. The Courts in this country should not be more strict in construing wills than are the Courts in England. On the contrary Courts should endeavour in the case of every will to find out what the real intention of the testator was which he intended to express in his will, and to look to that rather than to the precise language he has used. (103-4) —Wills—Gift for indefinite time carried absolute estate—Charge on testator's estate for payment of annuities—Vesting of contingent interest—Infringement of rule against perpetuity—Effect not to be given to such intention of testator.—A Will contained the following :— " That a monthly stipend of Rs. 15 be paid to my daughter Mrs. Eliza Stent, for her own benefit, Rs. 20 for the benefit of her two children during their minority. In like manner, my daughter Mrs. Maria D'Monte to be allowed by my executors monthly the sum of Rs. 20 for her own benefit, and Rs. 50 for the benefit of her five children, and in the event of the demise of any of the abovenamed children occurring, the sum of Rs. 10 to cease rateably as being the allowance for each child. That on each of the children attaining their age of majority of one and twenty years, I request that my executors pay to each of them, severally and proportionately, the full amount of interest accruing from my estate, the existing provision for my two daughters to continue during their natural life, and after their demise the said interest in like manner to revert to their heir or heirs in succession." Held that where there is in terms a gift of the interest or dividends or produce of the estate, and that gift is indefinite in point of time, such a bequest will generally carry the corpus absolutely ; but where, on the other hand, the gift is in terms simply a gift of so much a year, its effect is to give an annuity for life only. The daughters of the testator were, therefore, entitled to Rs. 15 and 20 a month respectively, and the testator's estate was charged with the payment of the said sums. The daughters were further entitled to receive during the life-time and minority of their children the sum of Rs. 10 for each child ; but on the death of each child, or upon its attaining majority, the payment in respect of such child ceased. There could be no intestacy except in the event of all the children dying under twenty one. Held also that the interest of each child vested only on that child's attaining the age of twenty-one years and not before. There was no prior gift. The time mentioned in the clause "each child attaining that age, I request my executors to pay" was annexed to the legacy itself and not to the mere payment. What was given to each child was the proportionate share of that child in the full amount of interest accruing from the testator's estate. The amount of the share which would vest in each child at twenty-one depended on the number of children then living. Each child further took a contingent interest in the shares of each of the other children, which might become vested on the death of each one dying under twenty-one. Held further that the testator probably intended that the corpus of his estate was to remain for ever in the hands of his executors or their representatives and that the descendants of his daughters' children were in perpetual succession, to enjoy only the interest arising therefrom. But, if such was his intention, that intention could not be carried into effect. Consequently, the children took absolutely the estate given to them. Semble, the rule in Wild's case did not apply to personalty. AGNEW v. MATTHEWS, 1 M.H.C. 17. [D., 15 M. 448.]

and then to next of kin—Codicil—Validity of bequest.—Under his Will, A (a Parsi) bequeathed a certain house (1) to his executors on trust to pay the income to his two daughters B and C in equal portions, and after their death (2) "to the use of such of the issues only of the said B and C as they should respectively appoint, such appointment to affect their own respective moieties only and not that of the other of them" and, (3) in default of appointment, on trust to dispose of the house and divide the proceeds according to the directions mentioned in the Will. Held that B and C were each of them entitled to one-half of the house for her life and that, under the power of appointment given to them, each can appoint to one moiety of the house among her respective children in such way as she may think fit, and that, even if the power of appointment had been invalid, the gift over, on failure of the exercise of the power was valid. X (a Parsi) bequeathed the residue of his moveable property to his executors in trust to apply a certain sum for the maintenance of his son R until he should attain the age of 21, and, upon his attaining that age, to pay over the income of the property to him, and, after the death of R, in trust to divide the corpus of the property among the next-of kin of R. A codicil subsequently executed by the testator directed the executors to divide the income of the property to his two sons R and N, instead of the same being given exclusively to R. Held (1) that, reading the Will and codicil together, what the testator meant was that his two sons R and N were each to have a moiety of the income for their respective lives, and that, on their respective deaths, one moiety of the corpus was to go to their next-of-kin under the Parsi Succession Act (XXI of 1865). N B.—No declaration was made to that effect, because it would not be binding on any children who might be born to R, who, at date of suit, was unmarried. (106)—Construction—Nature of estate created—Gift to adopted son if valid—Person not in being.—The terms of a Will were that the testator's widow may adopt a son who has to take a life-interest in the estate till he begot a son when his estate was to become absolute, that until adoption the estate during the widow's life should be held by the executors in trust for the person or persons who will become entitled thereto under the conditions of the Will, and that, if the widow died without adopting or if the other dispositions of the Will were to be held invalid, the estate as to which there was intestacy should go to N and R. The testator died in 1888 and the widow adopted a son in 1900. Held, in construing the Will as to the estate taken under it by N and R, that the clause creating the trust referred to two periods, one till adoption and other the lifetime of the widow, and the estate of N and R could not be held to be absolute in any event during the lifetime of the widow. It was, therefore, not necessary to consider whether an absolute estate once created can be divested by the happening of an uncertain event such as adoption. (8 I.A. 46, 10 M.I.A. 279, 12 I A. 198, R.) Though the adopted son was not actually in existence at the death of the testator, the gift to him is valid since his title relates back to the death of the testator in the eye of the law. (Tagore Case, 9 B.L.R. 377, R.) The effect of the possible death of the adopted son during the life of the widow it was not necessary to consider, but it was observed that there would be no abeyance pending a second adoption as contemplated by the Will but, the estate would vest in the ultimate devisee according to the terms of the Will or in the heirs of the intestate owner. (107)—Will—Construction—Gift to person to be adopted—No adoption—Effect—Gift by implication—English and Indian Law—Difference.—The material portion of a Will of a Hindu testator who died leaving a widow, was as follows:—"My wife is supposed to be pregnant with child, if a daughter be born, she will, in that case, adopt the twin mentioned below (the plaintiff and S) and whatever property there shall exist, consisting of moveable and immoveable, etc., my executors shall divide into three equal shares, and give the same to the daughter and adopted sons on their attaining the age of majority." The widow bore no child. After the death of S, plaintiff who had attained majority, brought a suit for declaration of his title [R., 9 C.W.N. 309] on the allegation that he was adopted by the testator's widow and his executrix and contended that he, whether adopted or not, was entitled to the testator's property, or to a moiety of it under the terms of the Will. It was found that plaintiff was not validly adopted. Held, that the testator simply provided for the anticipated contingency of the named persons being his legal heirs by adoption and omitted to say anything of the alternative and that there was not any indication that he intended them to take his property in all events, i e., whether they became his adopted sons or not and that there was no gift by implication to the plaintiff. When an Englishman in his Will acknowledges one to be his heir, or speaks of him as taking in the capacity of heir, there can be no other meaning in the testator's words than an unqualified intention that person should have his property. On the other hand, when a Hindu directs that that one should be adopted as his son, and assumes that this person, when so adopted, will take his property as heir, this is something more than an indirect way of pointing out the person to whom he intends his property to go. It implies the intention that the person named should take upon his attaining the character of adopted son, not that he should have the property irrespective of his capacity to render the peculiar consideration for it, which the lawful adoption alone would enable him to give. The defendant resisted the suit on the grounds that the deed operated as a will, and that the plaintiff not having sued to have it set aside for more than three years after he became aware of its existence, his suit was barred by art. 91, sch. (109)—Estate vested in trustees— Devisee given the income—Nature of estate of devisee—Construction of Will.—Some of the executors and trustees under a Will instituted this suit praying that certain clauses of the Will may be construed, that the testator's estate may be administered and the trusts under his Will carried out. The main question turned on the construction of certain clauses with a view to determine the interest taken by the testator's sons. The Judge of the Division Court held that the sons took an absolute estate, subject to the charges created by the Will. He proceeded on the ground that, as the rest of the gift to the son's heirs in the testator's family, and, in default of male heirs, to charitable purposes, was void, it had to be struck out, and in that case the gift to the sons would be in terms an estate of inheritance. The High Court, however, was of opinion, that even assuming the devise to be void to the above extent, that could not, by itself, render the estate given to the sons one of inheritance. The circumstance that by the Will the estate was vested in the trustees, and that the income alone was expressed to be given to the sons as maintenance, precluded the estate given to them from being regarded as an absolute estate. testatrix, after appointing certain persons to be executors of her will in respect of the whole of her property, directed that they should "take possession of the whole of her property, and keep the same under their protection ;" that they should pay out of her estate the charges of interment, etc.; that they should repair four houses annually out of the income thereof, having let them out to hire, and after paying taxes and ground-rent divide the proceeds every three months between the testatrix's two sons; that the executors should not give the rents to the creditor, because the bequest of the income to the sons was "not an entire gift to them but a mere provision for their support." The will proceeded as follows : "Should my son M happen to die before the decease of his wife, then I give the share of M to his widow H. M, etc., and after the death of H.M, should my son M not have left any legitimate male child, then I give the above share to my son, J, etc. After the death of M (and his wife) should he have left legitimate male children, such male children shall in the same manner receive the income once in every three months till they attain the age of 21 years, and then the amount of their share shall be divided into equal portions, and each of them having become the owner of his portion shall receive the same from my executors, but if H. M. die before M and M die without having had legitimate male children, then I give and bequeath the shares of my son M to my son J as a provision for his support, etc. If my sons M and J die without having male issue, and if their wives, that is to say, H. M. and C. J. die without having male issue begotten by my sons, then I give my garden, etc., actually and entirely to the sons and daughter of my daughter G, begotten by her first husband G. A. that is to A, M, B and N, or in case of their death, to their sons and daughters lawfully begotten, or to such of them as shall survive at the time. My said garden shall be divided into equal shares, and each of them having received his share in equal proportion as a legacy from me, shall enjoy the same." M and H. M, his wife, died without having left any children ; J died in the lifetime of M.A. and one of the sons of G died without leaving children in the lifetime of H M. Held, firstly, that the direction to the executors to lease the property indefinitely and out of the income to make repairs, pay taxes and ground-rent, and apply the rent to the maintenance of the sons, was sufficient to vest the legal estate in the trustees, secondly, that such estate was an estate in fee ; thirdly, that the children of G took equitable estates in remainder in fee, defeasible in case of their death in the lifetime of the first taker for life, in which event there was substituted a devise to their children in fee ; fourthly, that the children of G took as tenants-in-common, and not as joint tenants, and therefore that, as there was nothing from which cross-remainders between the children of G property was vested in them, and that the defendant had only a life interest in the property. Held that the defendant T took only a life interest in the property. The words "in trust for T and his heirs" which, standing alone, would create a fee in T must be read with the words immediately following, "to allow him to occupy and use same and enjoy the income thereof and after his death to allow his widow to enjoy the income during her life," which words show a clear intention that T should only take life interest to be followed by the same interest in his widow after whom the heirs of T would take as purchasers. Held, also, that the trustees were intended to take the legal estate and to have the control of the property, allowing T to enjoy the income of it. The Court should always favour a construction, which will give the share of a child, on his death, to his children, and a slight indication of such an intention should be sufficient, for the purpose of giving a fund to the issue of the deceased child, who in his life-time enjoyed it. (115) —Devise in favour of defendant to take effect if female and not male child be born to the testator—Birth of male child that died the same day—Devisee not entitled to succeed.—The will in this case provided that, in the event of a son being born to the testator, such son would succeed as heir, but if a daughter be born, that the defendant would then succeed to the testator's occupancy rights and other property. It appeared that the testator's wife who was pregnant at the time of the execution of the Will gave birth to a male child which died the very day on which it was born. The defendant contended that he was entitled to succeed to the property because the clear intention of the testator was that the defendant was only to be excluded if his widow gave birth to a male child capable of living and of inheriting, and that as the child happened to die on the same day that he was born, the case should be determined as if the event contemplated by the testator as causing the defendant's exclusion had not happened. Held that the defendant was not entitled to succeed under the will, as the devise to him was only to take effect if no male heir was 'born' to the testator. Such an heir was born alive, and although he may have died immediately afterwards, the very fact of a completed birth was sufficient to vest the estate in him and to constitute him the propositus from whom descent should thereafter be reckoned. (119)—Creation of trust fund—Rule against perpetuities—Case of construction of a will.—A testator directed by his will the creation of a trust fund in a certain Bank, and that such trust fund shall never be removed from deposit in the said Bank so long as it shall exist. The fund was to be a continuing fund for all time, and the interest from it was to be enjoyed by certain legatees and the same was to be inherited by their children from one generation to another in accordance with all legal right. There is nothing illegal about the creation of such a fund, except the direction that the securities should never be received from deposit, which, as an attempt to create a fund in perpetuity, was invalid, but this does not prevent the intention of the testator from being carried out, and the legatees take an absolute estate. shall attain full age, and shall thereupon be paid to such son or sons, if more than one, in equal shares; and in case no son be born of my said eldest son or no son shall attain full age, then, such one-sixth share shall, on the death of the said H, be divided equally among such of my five other sons as shall then be living, and the male issue of such of them as shall then be dead such male issue taking the share of their respective fathers." Then, after reciting that he was desirous of making, out of his immoveable property, permanent provision for the benefit of his five younger sons and their male descendants, and that he was desirous of having the due forms of worship carried out after his death, he further directed that certain lands should be held by his executors on trust to apply the rents and profits (1) in the celebration of certain poojahs and in the performances of periodical turns of worship of the family Thakoors and other religious festivals, at the same expense and on the style same as the testator himself had done, or at such expense and in such style as the executors should think fit, and (2) in the maintenance, out of the surplus, of the five younger sons, their wives, sons, and male descendants, and female descendants until their marriage. Held that the bequests to the children of the daughter and to the children of H were void. profits of the real property and employ the residue and accumulations as well as the produce and accumulations of the personal property "in such a manner as may procure the daily worship of the household idols" mentioned in the deed, and pay what they considered a fair and proper sum to the wives and family of S. living at his death and residing in the family dwelling-house. By his will, dated the same day as the deed, S. declared that he ratified and confirmed the deed, subject to such provisions as were contained in his will, which were that the trustees should not charge the fund for the maintenance of those who should not live in the family dwelling-house and for the appointment of new trustees Held, first, upon the authority of Wilson v. Pigott, 2 Ves. Jun., that the powers of the trustees (under the deed) did not cease on the death of S. and that the directions in the will, although, not strictly within the words, amounted to a good appointment in equity, so that instead of the trustees of the deed conveying the property on the death of S. to his son, they should contrive to hold subject to the trusts of the deed as modified by the will. Secondly, that the words "in such a manner as may procure the daily worship," etc., meant in such manner as shall be sufficient to procure the daily worship, etc., and that the trustees were not authorized to apply such portion of the trust funds as they in their discretion might think fit, but only such portion as was reasonably sufficient for those purposes. (126)—Bequest to wife for her sole and separate use—Re-marriage—Husband, whether trustee for wife — Construction—Property given to unmarried woman for her sole use and benefit.—A Will contained a bequest in the following terms:—"I give, devise and bequeath to my dearly beloved wife all the stock in-trade, furniture, mourning coaches, horses belonging thereto, stones, marbles, tools, implements and materials connected with my trade and business and all my right and interest therein, and after payment of my debts and other expenses, I give devise and bequeath the rest and residue of my outstandings and collections for her sole use and benefit, with liberty to continue and carry on such trade and business." The testator's widow continued with the assistance of the defendant to carry on the business until, in October 1860, she married the defendant; they lived together until June 1867, when, in consequence of alleged ill-usage, the plaintiff separated from the defendant. Then, she brought a suit against her husband for a declaration of her rights under the Will, for possession of the stock-in-trade and other property connected with the business and for an account from the defendant of the said business commencing from October 1860 to the time of the suit. Held, that according to the true construction of the Will, the stock-in-trade and the liberty to carry on the business were not bequeathed to the wife for her sole and separate use independent of any husband that she might afterwards marry, and consequently that the husband did not become a trustee for the wife in respect of the business and stock-in-trade and that he should not be called upon to render an account to his wife of that business from the time of her marriage. Quære:—Whether if stock-in-trade were given to an unmarried woman for her sole and separate use any profits realized by carrying on the business would be vested in her for her separate use, so that, in the event of her marriage without settlements, the property would not pass to the husband? To this it was objected that the testatrix could not have intended that the trustees were at liberty to spend the income of the trust properties without any limit; and that, therefore, the Courts should fix some limit to the annual expenditure on this head: Held, that the testatrix had reposed in the trustees a discretion in the matter; and so long as that discretion was properly and honestly exercised the Court could not fetter it by fixing a limit to their expenditure, but must leave it to the trustees to determine how much should be spent on the feast every year. bequest was not made in favour of Government but in favour of the "Collector of Lucknow," meaning the person who for the time being held the Office of the Deputy Commissioner of the Lucknow District; (3) that, although the interest of the Deputy Commissioner under the Will was not a beneficial interest but merely that of a trustee, the administration of the whole or of any portion of the property could, notwithstanding s. 21 of the Probate and Administration Act, under s. 41 of the same Act, be granted to the Deputy Commissioner, in view of the safety of the estate and of the probability that it will be properly administered; (4) that a testator's declarations, alleged to have been made by him at various times prior to his death, that he had revoked and destroyed his Will, are not legally admissible in evidence to prove the actual fact of the destruction of the will, (5) that, although the general presumption of law is that if a will is traced to the testator's possession and is not forthcoming at the time of his death, it has been destroyed by him, this presumption does not arise, unless there is evidence to satisfy the Court that it was not in existence at his death. In all such cases, the question to be determined before the raising of the presumption is, whether the Will was or was not in existence at the time of the testator's death, and where it is found on evidence that, after the testator's death, no bona fide search for the Will was made by an independent person, and the depositories of the deceased were shortly prior to and after his death accessible to the only person who was interested in destroying the Will, no such presumption arose. assistance, I leave it to the discretion of my executors either to make over to my said son J for his absolute use the whole of the amount which he may be entitled to under (c) of paragraph sixth above, or such part or parts thereof as to my executors may appear proper." S died in 1885, unmarried and intestate, leaving his two brothers, M and J, and his two sisters, R and C, him surviving. M died in 1889, leaving a widow and children. In 1891, the third defendant J executed a mortgage for Rs. 6,100, mortgaging all his interest under the said Will to the plaintiffs. In 1893, R died, and in 1894, C died. Subsequently, the executors were proceeding to sell the property mentioned in the Will when the plaintiffs filed this suit praying for a declaration that they had a valid charge upon J's interest therein, and that his interest should be ascertained and declared, and he himself ordered to pay the amount of their claim; that the property should be sold and their claim paid out of the funds; that the executors should be restrained from selling, save subject to their (plaintiffs), rights, etc. The plaintiffs and J contended that he (J) in the events that had happened was entitled to the whole of the proceeds of the property absolutely and that the gift in the sixth clause of the Will could not be cut down by the provisions of the seventh clause. Held:—(1) That the defendant J had no interest in the house mentioned in the Will. He was only entitled to a share of the proceeds after it had been sold. (2) That he was entitled to a life interest in the said share, with power to appoint to his widow or issue, and that he was not entitled to be paid the corpus of such share; but that the executors might, under certain circumstances and at their discretion, hand over to him the said corpus. (3) That neither the plaintiffs nor J could interfere in the sale of the said property. (4) That the plaintiffs had a valid charge upon the interest of J, the third defendant, in the sale-proceeds of the properties in question to the extent of their mortgage. (5) That J's interest was (after deducting the legacies given by the sixth clause) an absolute interest in one-fourth share of Silveira's moiety to which he was absolutely entitled and a life interest in Joaquim's moiety of the sale-proceeds, subject to the contingency of the executors, in the exercise of their discretion under certain circumstances, handing over to J the corpus, or part thereof, of the said share for his absolute use, in which event the plaintiffs would have the right to the same to such extent as their debt was unsatisfied. (6) As to costs, the plaintiffs and third defendant J should pay their own costs; that the executors and defendants Nos. 4 to 12 should have their costs paid out of J's interest in S's moiety of the sale proceeds, and, if that fund were not sufficient to pay such costs, the plaintiffs and the third defendant J to pay the deficiency. (130)—Absolute gift—Life interest—Gift over to widow or issue of donee.—A Portuguese resident of Bombay, died in April, 1884, leaving three sons, M. S. and J. By her will she directed that her daughter R should enjoy the rents and profits of certain immoveable property for her life, and that, after her death, the said property should be sold, and the sale proceeds (after payment of two legacies thereout) be divided equally between her two sons S and J (defendant No. 3). The seventh clause of the will was to the following effect :—That the amount which may fall to the share of J under cl. (c) of paragraph 6 of the will should be held in trust by the executors of the will and converted by them into Government securities ; the interest accruing therefrom should be paid for the maintenance of J. Should he die leaving a widow or issue, his share shall be given to such widow or issue according as he may devise and bequeath. Should he reform himself and shake off all his evil tendencies and lead a steady, quiet and orderly life, or should he, on account of illness or other reasonable cause, be in urgent need of pecuniary assistance, executors were in their discretion either to make over to J for his absolute use the whole of the amount which he may be entitled to under cl. (c) of paragraph 6 above, or such part or parts thereof, as the executors may think proper. Held, on appeal, confirming the decree of the lower Court, that under the above clause of the Will, there was a clear gift over to the widow or issue of J, but that J was to have the power of designating how they were to take. To that extent, the absolute gift to J was qualified. Should the gift over fail, the absolute gift to J would remain unimpaired. BECHAR AKHA v. P. In the event of my eldest son, Thomas Brown Skinner, dying without lawful male children, the above mentioned private zemindari, et cetera, shall descend to my next male heir, and, should all my sons die without lawful male children, the zemindari, et cetera, shall descend to my female children, or in the event of their death, to the female children born in wedlock of my sons in succession." Held, that the construction of such a Will was not governed by English Law or by the Indian Succession Act, 1865, which was not retrospective ; but the Will was to be construed as was laid down by the Privy Council in the case of 13 M.I.A. 277, according to principles of justice, equity, and good conscience. So construing the Will, and having regard to the circumstances of the family at the time of its execution, the testator must not be taken to have intended to confer an absolute estate on his eldest son, but, that his sons who should acquire the property should have a life estate only, and that the absolute estate should devolve upon the eldest son of testator who should be entitled to the property for life and should leave a son surviving him. After the death of my daughter, her two sons are the owners of whatever property and estate there may be belonging to me. They are considered as my children. The High Court held, on the construction of the Will, that the daughters each took an absolute interest in a half share of the estate, but left open as premature the question whether the gift to the daughter was defeasible in the event of either daughter dying without male issue and gave the parties, amongst whom were the sons of P., liberty to apply. The Privy Council on appeal modified the decree of the High Court, holding that the daughters were entitled to the estate of the testator in equal shares for life and with benefit of survivorship between themselves. Subsequently, on the death of P., one of her sons who was born in the testator's lifetime applied under the liberty reserved in the decree. Held—That the application was properly made and it was not necessary to institute a separate suit for the purpose. That the Privy Council, in making their order as above, could not have had in contemplation the event which has now happened, viz., the death of P. leaving sons, and they were merely indicating the utmost interest that they did and could take in the events which up to that time had happened as between themselves, and apart from any subsequent disturbing event. That the three sons of P., who were born in the testator's life-time would, according to the true construction of the will, take the half of the estate in which P. had got a life-interest under the decree of the Privy Council. That the sons of P. who were born subsequently did not take by reason of s. 3 of the Hindu Wills Act (as interpreted in 8 C. 637) modifying the operation of s. 98 of the Succession Act incorporated therein. S. 3 of the Hindu Wills Act, according to that decision, controls not merely the nature of the interest sought to be created by a will, but also the capacity of the person in whose favour the interest is expressed to be created. (135) — Attachment of legatee's interest, validity of—Parties—Administrator-General—Succession Act, ss. 91, 106 and 107.—In execution of a decree obtained against D, certain properties were attached on the supposition that D was solely entitled to them. At the date of the attachment, these and other properties were in the hands of the Administrator General who had obtained probate of the will of the deceased father of D, and D had only a partial interest in the properties attached. The Administrator-General had not been made a party to the execution proceedings. Held that the attachment was nevertheless legal and could form the basis of a sale. The attachment of a judgment-debtor's property is not illegal because property which did not in fact belong to the judgment debtor had also been included in the attachment. The Administrator-General is a necessary party to the execution petition, but the omission to make him a party is not a ground for holding the attachment invalid. (23 M. 428, D.) A bequest, unless the testator intended otherwise as in the case of a contingent bequest, becomes vested in interest in the devisee or legatee from the date of the testator's death, although he may not be entitled to receive what has been bequeathed to him except in due course of administration, such an interest is attachable and saleable before an administrator has distributed the estate in due course of administration. to maintain attachment without suit.— The testator in this case had made a devise of his property to go among his several heirs and kinsfolk, and, in the meantime, to be kept under management with a view to the gradual payment of his debts. The several parties entitled to take the estate were enabled by decree of Court to take possession of them, and the parties becoming so entitled to take their several shares were held to be liable to answer any suit of the creditors, according to their liabilities respectively, to pay the debts still owing from the estates of the testator. In the absence of such a suit, however, it is not competent to a Civil Court to maintain attachment on the payment of such debts. When any party brought his suit against the heirs of the deceased testator, it would then be time for the High Court to act as circumstances require and the law may allow. PETUM KOLREE v. If she shall be dead at the time, then my junior wife shall adopt such boy. But I direct that Maniklal Ghatak, son of Chuni Lal Ghatak, will have preference if his parents agree to give him in adoption, and I further direct that, if the boy so adopted to me as aforesaid be honest and faithful to my said wives and prosecute his studies up to the M. A. Standard of any Indian University, then my executor or executors shall hand over my properties to my such adopted son on his attaining majority, and such adopted son shall carry out the direction as herein before contained. The senior widow of the testator adopted Maniklal Ghatak on 15th February, 1909, and the latter attained majority on 19th April 1909. After coming of age he, on 12th August, 1909, applied to the Allahabad High Court for probate of the will, and Rajendra Chandra Mitra entered a caveat on 25th November, 1909. In September, 1909, Rajendra Chandra Mitra applied to the Calcutta High Court for probate of said will and caveat was entered on behalf of Maniklal Ghatak. That Court granted probate to Rajendra Chandra Mitra on 20th December, 1907, and the probate issued on 17th March, 1919. In July, 1909, Rajendra mortgaged certain houses which were situated in Calcutta and covered by the will. Manick remained in possession of the properties bequathed all along. On 23rd December, 1909, he brought a suit in the Court of Subordinate Judge of Allahabad for declaration of his title and for an injunction restraining Rajendra from intermeddling with the estate. Held, (1) that the executor was bound to hand over the properties covered by the will to the plaintiff, who was lawfully adopted by the senior widow of the testator, on his attaining majority; (2) the conditions that the plaintiff was to be "honest and faithful" to the widows of the testator and was "to prosecute studies up to the M. A. Standard of any Indian University" were only conditions subsequent, and the vesting of the property in the plaintiff did not depend on those acts on the part of the plaintiff; (3) that the adoption was not invalid by reason of the selection not having been made by the executor, inasmuch as the clause in the will naming the plaintiff as the preferential person to be adopted completely took away the power of selection given to the defendant in the adoption of the plaintiff; (4) that the frame of the suit was right inasmuch as the mortgage of the houses and the entering of caveat by the defendant afforded a good cause of action to the plaintiff; and (5) that the decree of a competent Civil Court superseded the grant of probate, the only result of a probate being that it was conclusive, when granted, as to the representative title of the grantee in certain respects, and the construction of a will or the determination of the rights of certain persons under the will were outside the scope of a probate. Failing these, the widow was to take the estate absolutely, subject only to a condition that she should not alienate it to any member of her father's family. The will expressly prohibited the interference of the testator's brother in his affairs. After the death of the testator leaving an only daughter, the widow gave out that she had given birth to a posthumous child. The brother of the testator thereupon sued for declaration that the posthumous child was not the son of the testator. Held, that the plaintiff had no status to maintain the suit, as he was neither an immediate nor a remote reversioner. The procedure adopted by the lower Courts, of inquiring into the private affairs of the defendant's family, in considering an issue regarding the alleged legitimacy of the posthumous child, which was not wholly relevant to the suit, was severely criticised. (4)—Wills—Genuineness—Onus of proof—Evidence as to matters that transpired from its inception up to drafting—Value. The onus of proving the genuineness of a will rests upon the party relying upon the will. Evidence on such matters as to when the terms of the will were first thought of, when the writing of the will was also first thought of, and what happened between the first inception of the idea and the drafting of the will, is of great importance in enabling the Court to arrive at a conclusion as regards the genuineness of a document put forward as a will. (5)—Will—Evidence—Testamentary capacity—Illness and intemperance of the testator—Undue influence—Persons propounding the will benefiting by it.—The onus of proving the testamentary capacity of a testator lies on those by whom the will is propounded, and the evidence held to discharge that obligation is not displaced by the mere proof of serious illness and general intemperance of the testator. Evidence of circumstances of the character that there was motive and opportunity for the exercise of undue influence by the persons propounding a will, and that some of them in fact benefited by the will to the exclusion of other relatives of equal or nearer degree, may suggest suspicion and would certainly lead the Court to scrutinise with special care the evidence of those who propound the will, but is not by itself sufficient to set the will aside on the ground of undue influence. In order to set aside a will on the ground of undue influence, there must be clear evidence that such influence was in fact exercised, or that the illness of the testator so affected his mental faculties as to make them unequal to the task of disposing of his property. In order to constitute an insane delusion affecting question of testamentary capacity, it must be shown, not only that belief in it was unfounded but that it was so destitute of foundation that no one except an insane person, would have entertained it. In questions relating to the testamentary capacity of a person, it is always dangerous to base the judgment on the speculative theory derived from medical books, and judicial dicta, instead of depending upon the facts established by the evidence in the case. (8)—Evidence conflicting—Appellate Court's duty—"Due execution"—Mental capacity of testator in dispute—Execution of will, proof of—Presumption—Rules for deciding such cases.—In all cases in which the evidence is conflicting, it is the duty of a Court of Appeal to have great regard to the opinion formed by the Judge in whose presence the witnesses gave their evidence, as to the degree of credit to be given to it; and, probably, the advantage of hearing the witnesses give their evidence is of special value, where there is conflict between them as to the mental capacity of a person, whose conduct they have observed and whose state of mind they depose to: for the original Court, has not merely the better opportunity of judging of the truthfulness of the evidence, from the manner in which it is given, but also of judging how far the witnesses possess those qualities on which depend much of the value of evidence given in good faith, power of observation, of judgment, accuracy of expression, general intelligence, which are of special importance in case wherein the execution of the will is questioned on the ground that the mental capacity of the testator when the will was made by him, was such that it was doubtful whether the will could have been duly executed. The term "duly executed" does not mean merely the fact of execution by the testator, but means proof of execution which carries with it a conviction that the testator knew, and approved of, the contents of the instrument. This, of course, involves, in the proposition that the testator knew and approved of the contents of the instrument, the proposition that he was a free and capable testator, since knowledge implies his possession of the capacity without which he could not know the contents of the will, and approval cannot be real and complete without a free exercise of the will. [R., 31 C. 11.] In ordinary cases, execution of a will by a competent testator raises the presumption (sufficient if nothing appears to the contrary to establish), that he knew and approved the contents of the will. Also, under ordinary circumstances, the competency of a testator will be presumed, if nothing appears to rebut the ordinary presumption. As the result of these two presumptions in ordinary cases, at least in many cases, proof of execution of the will is enough. But, where the mental capacity of the testator is challenged by evidence, showing that it is very doubtful whether the state of mind of the testator was such that he could have duly executed the will as he is alleged to have done, the Court ought to find whether, upon the evidence, the testator was of sound disposing mind and did not know and approve of the contents of the will. The onus probandi lies in every case upon the party propounding a will; and he must satisfy the conscience of the Court that the instrument so propounded is the last will of a free and capable testator. The onus is, in general, discharged by proof of capacity and the fact of execution from which the knowledge of and assent to the contents of the instrument are assumed. WOOMESH CHUNDER BISWAS v. (9)—Will of illiterate person—Proof of knowledge of contents of will purporting to bear the mark of illiterate testator.—Those who propounded the will of a person who can neither read nor write must prove affirmatively that the testator knew and approved of the contents of the will. In the case of an illiterate person something more is required than proof that the executant made his mark on the document. Knowledge of the contents of the document cannot be inferred from the fact that he marked the document. RAM PRASAD v. JOKHU, 11 O.C. 20. (1 C.L.J. 109, R.)

(10)—Validity of will—Testator's death shortly after will not sufficient ground for invalidating—Nature of proof required for valid disposition.—In determining whether the testator was in such a mental condition as to be capable of making a valid disposition of his property by a testamentary instrument, the circumstance that he was on the verge of death is no doubt a circumstance to be considered, but the mere fact that the testator died shortly after making his will is not of itself a sufficient ground for invalidating a will otherwise valid. According to the judgment in the case in 10 W. R. P. C. 3, proof that the testator knew what he was about and intended to make the disposition of property contained in the will is quite essential. (11)—Muhammadan Law—Intention to bequeath essential to establish Will—Oral Will—Proof of d finite intention.—The question in this case was whether, on the evidence, a deceased Muhammadan had made a valid oral bequest of his property to his daughter's son, that is, whether the fact found, that on various occasions, he said that the legatee was his son and was malik and waris of his property both during his life and after his death, was sufficient to constitute a nuncupative Will by Muhammadan Law. The above point was one of fact, as to the intention of the deceased in using the words he uttered. On none of the occasions on which the expressions were used, was it understood that the deceased was, by using the words making a disposition of his property by way of bequest. Also, the repetition, on several occasions, of the expressions ascribe to the deceased militated against the view that he did intend to make a bequest. If the same words had been written in a formal document, they would certainly amount to a bequest, because, in that case, there would have been proof of a definite act intended to operate as a bequest. Under the Muhammadan Law, an oral Will is as valid as a written Will, but, in both cases, there must be an intention to bequeath. No such intention was found in the present case and it was therefore held that there was no bequest made in favour of the nephew which could be considered a Will by the deceased under the Muhammadan Law. which also similarly is a religion outside the pale of Hinduism and opposed to it (c) he ate beef and food cooked by Muhammadans, Christians and others and in their company, contrary to the tenets of Hindu religion and the social usages of those who profess it, and thereby lost his caste; (ii) that the will was not duly executed, and that it was invalid on the grounds of undue influence, importunity and mental weakness; (iii) that the majority of the trusts were void under law; (iv) that the whole of the property bequeathed was ancestral property of the deceased and could not be disposed of by a will under Customary and Hindu Laws; (v) that considering the value of the estate, the provision for the maintenance of the widow was not suitable to her rank and position in life. The objectors also prayed that suitable security according to the value of the estate which was very large be taken from the executors. Found (a) that the Sardar was born a Sikh of the sect of the tenth guru and although he cut his hair and smoked, practices heterodox according to Sikhism, he never formally abandoned the Sikh religion; (b) that the deceased joined the Brahmo Samaj as a regular subscriber and remained a non-anusthanic Brahmo throughout his life. Anusthanic Brahmos are those who live strictly according to Brahmoic principles and who discard the idolatrous portion of the Hindu ritual on birth, marriage, death, &c.; (c) that it was proved that the deceased lived in the European style and ate at a table with Muhammadans, Christians, Parsees and others with whom Hindus and Sikhs are prohibited from eating by their social customs, and that he kept Muhammadan and Christian cooks, but it was not proved that he ate beef. Held, that the deceased was a Hindu within the meaning of s. 2 of the Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881). The Court remarked that Sikhs are at all events at the present time, regarded only as a sect of Hindus and, though the term Hindu in the Indian Succession and Probate and Administration Acts, must be understood in a theologica sense, it does not mean that the Court is to take upon itself to enquire what doctrines do or do not properly belong to Hinduism and thereupon to find whether a particular person was or was not a Hindu. Such an enquiry is obviously impossible for a British Indian Civil Court to institute and such a decision equally impracticable. The Court must, therefore, proceed upon what is generally understood to be the meaning of the expression. On the question whether Brahmos can be included within the term Hindu, the Court observed that Brahmoism is a faith of Indian origin, and, considering the extreme tolerance of Hinduism in matters of mere belief, we are disposed to think that mere profession of Brahmoism does not necessarily make a man cease to be a Hindu unless he also abjures the social rules of Hindus and declares himself not to be a Hindu, and before a man can be declared to have ceased to be a Hindu by adopting another faith, the fact of his conversion ought to be proved. The Court also remarked that, as far as this Province is concerned, the fact that Hindu has become a Brahmo does not ordinarily make any difference in his position among his brother Hindus and that he is treated as a Hindu as before. The deceased was a Sikh and he did not cease to be a Hindu by becoming a non anusthanic Brahmo. On the question whether the deceased by reason of his heterodox practices ceased to be a Hindu or Sikh before he died, the Court observed that he did not cease to be a Sikh as the followers of Guru Gobind Singh only are forbidden from smoking and cutting hair. These acts involve the social ban, but do not amount to renunciation of religion. As regards the Sirdar's eating food cooked by Muhammadans, Christians and low caste cooks and at the same table with people belonging to other religions, these were held to be branches of Hindu and Sikh social rules and of the Hindu and Sikh religious ordinances; they involved social excommunication and required religious expiations, for purification but the deceased could not be said to have ceased to be a Hindu or Sikh on this account. Held, also, that the will was duly executed, the deceased understood perfectly well what he was doing, he was in possession of all his mental faculties and a sound disposing mind when the will was executed, and his circumstances, interests, tastes, and disposition were such as would lead to the disposition of his property effected by the will; and that undue influence was not exercised on the deceased. The provision made for the Rani during his lifetime was continued or rather increased and what the Sardar appears to have considered his ancestral estate was bequeathed to his collateral heir, Sardar Gajindra Singh. Held, further, that the question of the validity of the dispositions should not be considered in these proceedings. The Court did not consider it necessary to demand security from the executors and ordered the objectors to pay their own costs. BABU JOGENDRO CHANDRA BOSE v. But there is no rule of law as to the particular kind or description of evidence by which the Court must be satisfied. The degree of suspicion excited and the weight of the burden of removing it must depend largely on the nature and amount of the benefit taken and all the circumstances of the case. The question is a pure question of fact and one to be decided on a consideration of the whole of the evidence and the circumstances of the case. A clause in the will in this case permitted the solicitor, who prepared and attested the will, and was also appointed one of the executors, to charge for professional services done by him or his firm. It also allowed him a further remuneration of one per cent. on the profits of the testator's business, for services in connection with the management of the business. The Judicial Committee was satisfied that there were circumstances, which showed that the testator understood and approved of the clause, although it appeared that the testator had no independent advice in this matter and no independent evidence was adduced that this clause in particular was called to the testator's attention. Where a deed-poll previously executed by the testator was referred to in the will but not for the purpose of making its contents a part of the will: Held, that it was not a testamentary document requiring probate, although the will, in terms, purported to confirm the deed. (2) Where a will is not searched for immediately after, and it is not shown that it did not exist at the time of the testator's death, the mere fact of its not forthcoming afterwards and of the testator's acting in some explainable instances against it, does not raise the presumption that it has been destroyed by the testator with intention of revoking it. (3) Where a defendant in the first Court only pleaded that the testator's conduct subsequent to the execution of the will showed that he had no intention to abide by its provisions and that the testator's conduct and that of the plaintiff operated to cancel the will, he cannot be allowed to set up in appeal a new case to the effect that the testator had destroyed the will with the intention of revoking it. (5)—Joint Wills—Death of one party, revocation by the other.—A joint Will is irrevocable, where the survivor has taken a benefit on the death of the co-testator. Where the surviving co-testator succeeds to the bequeathed property under the ordinary law of inheritance, he cannot be said to have received a benefit under the provisions of the Will. Persons may agree to make mutual Wills which remain revocable during the joint lives, by either with notice to the other. Subsequent to the first will, the testator adopted, and the second will provided that, in case of the adopted son's death, without issue, during the life-time of the widow, the property should be divided among the daughter's issue. Held, that the provision in the later will as to division among the daughter's issue was deliberately inserted in substitution of the authority to adopt in the earlier, and that, supposing the disposition in the second will to be operative, there would be a clear revocation. Held, also, that, as the second will was void and inoperative according to the Hindu law, as the properties dealt with were the joint family properties of himself and his adopted son, the authority to adopt in the earlier will was not effectually revoked by the later will. The effect of s. 59 of the Probate and Administration Act is that the estate of the deceased has to be applied by the executor with exclusive reference to the will of which probate has been granted, and without reference to anything contained in any other will not admitted to probate. That does not in any way affect the joint family property of the deceased, and his adopted son, and the earlier will is therefore admissible. S. 187 of the Indian Succession Act does not apply, as the defendants are not seeking to establish any rights as executors or legatees, and the objection to the admissibility of the first will therefore fails. S. 187 of the Indian Succession Act applies both to plaintiffs and defendants. (14 M. 454, R.) Even if s. 59 of the Probate and Administration Act, or s.187 of the Indian Succession Act applied, they would not preclude the Court from admitting the earlier will in evidence and taking it into consideration in a suit for declaration, which is a discretionary relief. The will was fully accepted by the sons and the family and was acted upon. It was found to be neither fictitious nor fraudulent. Held, that the will having been accepted by the persons concerned, could not be declared invalid on the motion of a third person, merely because he had a claim against property affected, when it was found to be neither fictitious nor fraudulent. (17)—Succession—Hindus — Mahomedans—East Indian Christians—Will—Domicile—Construction of will—"Children"—Will—Accretion to property from rents.—The succession of a Hindu is, as a general rule, regulated by Hindu law, of a Mahomedan by the Mahomedan law, and of an East Indian Christian by the English law ; but in every case, for the purpose of determining the status personalis, regard must be had to the mode of life and habits of the testator and to the usages of the class or party to which he belonged. If no specific rule can be ascertained to be applicable to a case, it should be determined according to equity, justice and good conscience. Where a testator has an ascertained domicile, the construction of his will must depend on the law of that domicile ; but if no particular law is applicable, the Will is to be interpreted by the principles of natural justice. Construing a Will, according to the principles of natural justice, and applying to the word "children" the signification in which the testator used it as gathered from the Will itself, the word "children" was held to include illegitimate children, the offspring of sons, when acknowledged or treated as his children by their putative father. (19)—Bequests under Will of Parsi—Perpetual trusts for performance of religious ceremonies—Clause restraining alienation, invalidity of.—A Parsi by his Will declared a trust with reference to certain immoveable property of his, setting it apart for the performance of certain religious ceremonies with a direction in the Will that the said property should not be alienated at all. It appeared from the evidence in the case that the benefits which, according to the belief of the Parsis, were deemed to result from the ceremonies specified in the Will, were merely consolation to the spirits of certain dead persons and comfort to certain living persons, believed to be afforded by certain of the frohars (the guardian spirits or prototypes of the dead). Trusts of immoveable property, in perpetuity would be legally valid only when they are for public charitable and beneficial objects, and the trusts under the Will in this case, having been declared merely for the advantage and benefit of private individuals only, were not legal and valid trusts. Also, the direction in the Will that the property should not be sold or mortgaged was held to be neither valid nor binding. Exception obtains from the rule of perpetuities, only in favour of gifts for purposes useful and beneficial to the public, which are alone "charitable uses" in the wide sense of the term, and neither of the objects of the trust in this case was for any general public use. (23)—Proof of execution and registration—Enquiry into suspicious circumstances, if any.—It was objected in this case that the lower appellate Court had erred in law in having dealt with the case in the manner that it did and that the Judge for deciding the main issue, whether the document pleaded as the Will of the deceased testator was really his Will or not, should not have stopped with merely finding that the document was, as a matter of fact, executed and registered by him. The High Court held that the Judge was wrong in having thus treated the case thinking that it was beyond the province of the Court to inquire into circumstances connected with the execution of the document. Prima facie, the Will was an inofficious one and there were suspicious circumstances in the case of the plaintiff. The Judge should have satisfied himself that the testator had voluntarily, and, without any undue influence exercised on him, executed the Will fully understanding its real effect. (25)—Effect of pleadings—Causes of action—Civ. Pro. Code (Act VIII of 1859), s. 2—Issues really decided, though not in form—Res judicata.—Plaintiff, as the adopted son of one C, brought this suit to recover certain immoveable and moveable properties belonging to the estate of C. The defendant was the widow of the devisee of C under a Will left by the latter. The plaintiff's contention was that the real property in dispute was either ancestral property or property acquired by C from the income of such property and, as such ancestral, and that C, had no right to dispose of any of them by Will. The defence was that the deceased C had, according to the Mitakshara law, power to dispose by Will of property acquired by him out of the income of ancestral property and that such property was self-acquired. In a former suit between the same parties instituted by the present plaintiff for the cancellation of several alienations made by C, the present defendant was a defendant. The effect of the pleadings in that suit was to put in issue the question, among others, whether C had power to dispose of the real properties by the will in dispute; but the question actually dealt with in the case was as to whether or not the testamentary disposition was assented to by the present plaintiff; and it was decided that he had assented to the will. Held, that the effect of the pleadings in the previous suit being that the plaintiff sought therein to cancel the Will on the ground of the want of legal capacity in C to make a testamentary disposition of the real property by reason of its being ancestral property (i.e.) partly inherited and partly acquired out of the income of such property, the decision barred the present suit, though an issue in the form in which it was now raised had not been distinctly raised therein. The expression "cause of action" in s. 2 of Act VIII of 1859 (Civ. Pro. Code) is to be construed with reference rather to the substance than to the form of action. Viewed in this light, the former suit was, in substance, taking the pleadings and the grounds of appeal into consideration, one to declare the Will invalid on the ground of the want of legal capacity in C to devise the property dealt with in the Will. (28)—General legacy—Suit to recover legacy before assets and liabilities were ascertained—Suit premature—Liability of plaintiff to execute indemnity bond.—A Hindu died in the mofussil leaving a Will. The executors not having consented to pay a general legacy, the legatee sued to recover the amount of the legacy. The executors contended that, as the assets and liabilities of the deceased had not yet been ascertained, the suit was premature. Though no amount had been realized by the executors at the date of the suit, it was found that money far in excess of the liabilities had become realized subsequently. A suit instituted by the brother of the deceased testator to set aside the Will was then pending. Held that, though the suit was premature, it was desirable in order to avoid further litigation to pass a decree for the amount found due to the plaintiff. But the decree amount was not to be paid to the plaintiff unless she executed a bond undertaking to indemnify the executors for any loss which might arise in consequence of the payment of the legacy being declared void in the suit which was then pending. (29)—Suit for administration, obtaining probate of will constitutes part of the cause of action in a—Court granting probate, competency of, to determine the validity of the will—Executor estopped from impeaching will.—The taking out of probate from the High Court, undertaking thereby, to administer an estate, constitutes a material part of the cause of action for a suit for administration. It has often been held that an executor sued in that capacity is subject to the jurisdiction of the Court granting the probate. The contention that, the inclusion of the immoveable property of the testator situate in foreign territories, in the present suit for administration, would be to pronounce on the title to it, involving, as such inclusion would, the over-ruling of the defendants' objection as to the incapacity of the testator to will away that portion of the property was held untenable for the reason, that, where the Court has jurisdiction to make a grant of probate, it has also the power to decide whether and how far the will is a valid testamentary disposition and, in such cases, the Court has the same power with regard to any equities between persons within its jurisdiction respecting lands or assets in a foreign country as it has in the case of lands or assets locally situate. Held, further, that inasmuch as the defendant in the present case having, with full knowledge of circumstances bearing on his rights as the testator's son, accepted the office of executor, obtained probate and under its authority collected assets and otherwise so acted as to cause the plaintiffs to alter their position, the defendant was estopped from impeaching the will, repudiating his fiduciary position, or setting up in respect of the property dealt with by the will any rights inconsistent with the dispositions and conditions therein. (31)—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 42—Declaratory decree—Plea to maintainability of suit cannot be allowed for first time in appeal.—A Hindu widow made a Will of the property, which was the subject of a previous award, and in which, by the award, she was entitled only to a life estate, the plaintiff being entitled thereto after her death. The Will was in favour of the defendants who thus, it was contended, became, in the language of s 42 of the Specific Relief Act, "interested to deny" the plaintiff's title as reversioner. The plaintiff in this suit for a declaration as to the nullity of the said Will, had impleaded the testatrix also as defendant; but while the suit was pending she died, and ultimately a decree was passed in plaintiff's favour and the Will was declared invalid. The defendants, on appeal, contended for the first time that the allegations in the plaint did not constitute a case in which, in the exercise of a sound judicial discretion, a declaratory decree ought to be made. Held, that it would be unjust to allow the defendants to benefit by this technical ground which they had failed to take before the lower Court, especially after they had failed to resist the plaintiff's claim on the merits. Held, also that after the widow's death there was still the same cause of action against the defendants as existed at the time the plaint was filed, viz., that, they were "interested in denying the plaintiff's title" MANGANLAL PURUSHOTTAM v. (32)—Executor who once acts under a will cannot renounce the duties—Practice—Suit for accounts from executor—Application to take accounts on the footing of wilful default—Practice as to making the application—Heir suing the executor for accounts—Limitation—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), s. 10, sch II, art. 120.—In law a very small interference or intermeddling with the estate of his testator on the part of a party appointed executor under a will is sufficient to charge him with liability as executor. An executor once having acted unquestionably as an executor cannot renounce that character and all the liabilities which attach to it; having once acted, the subsequent renunciation is void, and he continues liable to be sued in the character of an executor. In an action against executor for accounts, it is not necessary, when making a reference to the Commissioner to take accounts, to give leave to the plaintiff to make an application to have accounts taken on the footing of wilful default pending the reference. Modern practice allows of an order charging wilful default being made at any time during the continuance of the action on a proper case being shown. In a suit brought by the plaintiff against the executors of the will of her grand-father, praying for a declaration that in the events that had happened, she was entitled absolutely and solely to the property left by her grand-father, and for account of the property in the hands of the executors, the plaintiff is only entitled to accounts from the defendants for six years preceding the suit, as she took no interest under the will and the executors were not trustees for her and the property did not vest in them for any specified purpose in her favour. Such a suit is not a suit for the purpose of following such property in the hands of the executors and trustees. AYSHABAI v. EBRAHIM HAJI JACOB, 10 Bom. L R. 117=32 B. 364.

(33)—Probate—Question to be decided by Court—Limitation—"Disposing mind"—Proof—Burden of proof—Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881)—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), sch. I, art. 181.—In proceedings under Act V of 1881 when Probate of a will is sought, the Court is bound to grant probate, unless it finds that the Will was not executed by the testator or that he was not in a state of mind competent to exercise his testamentary powers, or that the Will was not the testator's own voluntary act. The Court has no concern with the questions whether the Will, if proved, will be effectual or valid, or whether it can affect certain parts of the property with which it purports to deal. The mere fact that a Will, if proved, might, in view of a previous decree of a Civil Court, prove ineffectual, is no ground for refusing to grant probate; nor is the Court competent to consider the question whether the Will is a valid disposition of property by the testator (55 P.R. 1894, F.; 12 B. 164, 18 B. 749, R.) The provisions of art. 181 of the Limitation Act, 1908, have no application to petitions for probate. Consequently, an application for probate made four years after the death of the testator is not time-barred. (19 C. 48, F.) The mere execution of a Will raises a presumption that the maker of it knew and approved of its contents (21 C. 270, Rel.) But the mere fact that the testator understands that he is making a Will, and by it giving the whole of his property to one object of his regard is not sufficient proof that he had "a disposing mind" He must also have capacity to comprehend the extent of his property and the nature of the claims of others whom, by his Will, he is excluding from all participation in his property. He must be able to dispose of his property with understanding and reason. He must be able to understand his position, to appreciate his property and to form a judgment with respect to parties whom he chooses to benefit by it. In the case of an unofficious Will, made behind the back and to the detriment of, one of the legal heirs, and at a time when the testator was practically at death's door, the burden of proving that the testator had a "disposing mind" lies upon the propounder of the Will. A Hindu lady, who had been ill for about a year before her death, executed a Will within a few hours of her death. At that time she was practically unable to speak and had to communicate her wishes by signs. She left all her property to a child who had been adopted a few days before her death. The person who had a great deal to do with the drawing up of the Will was adverse to the legal heir. The testatrix had no reason to favour the child to the prejudice of the heir. An application for probate was not made till after the expiry of four years from the date of her death: Held, that, when the testatrix executed the Will, she had not sufficient understanding to comprehend the extent and consequences of her act that by the will she was depriving one of the heirs of all participation in the property. The petition for probate was consequently refused. PANDIT INDAR NARAIN SHIV PURI v. PANDIT ONKAR LAL, 141 P.L. R. 1911.

(34)—Burden of proof—Suit for declaration that a person died intestate—Plaintiff's omission to let in any evidence—Omission to cross-examine witnesses—Presumption.—In a suit for a declaration that a certain person died intestate, the burden of proof is upon the person who sets up a Will and not upon the plaintiff who impeaches it. The fact that the plaintiff asserted that he would prove "the spurious character of the Will and the circumstances attending its preparation and registration—if necessary" and that he omitted to adduce any evidence to show that the Will was a forgery, does not raise any presumption of the genuineness of the Will. That fact of the plaintiff's omission to cross-examine the witnesses called by the Court who spoke about the Will and whom he was not bound to examine and whom he could not have examined except with the permission of the Court, does not raise any presumption of the genuineness and validity of the Will. The plaintiff is perfectly justified in waiting until evidence in support of the Will is produced at the trial. SUKH DEI v. KEDAR NATH, 5 C W.N. 895, P.C.=28 I.A. 186=23 A. 405=3 Bom. M instituted a suit against the executors of her husband's Will, which was eventually settled for Rs. 10,000 and the major portion of this sum she placed with a firm of which N was one of the partners. It was to be invested for her in N's own name and he was to pay her such interest as the investment yielded him On the dissolution of this firm, the money deposited by M was made over to N alone and on N's death, the estate of N and with it the money deposited by M, came into the hands of the two sons of N, the defendants in this suit. The heirs of K at the time of the death of M were the plaintiff and the plaintiff's two cousins. Plaintiff sued the defendants as heirs and legal representatives of N for a third share of the balance of money deposited by M and interest on the plaintiff's share of the deposit. Held that this was not a case where the demand was for part of a distributive share under an intestacy or a legacy under a Will within the meaning of s. 32 of Act IX of 1850, and that the liability of the defendants arose from a contract made between him and M when the money was deposited and that the defendants had the right to have joined in the suit against them all persons claiming to be entitled to any interest in the sum deposited. What is intended by the words "distributive share under an intestacy or a legacy under a Will" in s. 32 of Act IX of 1850 is, where the person entitled to a share of property in the case of intestacy is bringing a suit against the person who has the administration of the property; in the case of a legacy where the suit is brought for legacy against the person who has the administration of the property, whether as executor, or in some other capacity, and is liable to pay the legacy. Withdrawal of Appeal.

(1)—Right to withdraw appeal—Permission of Court.—An appellant has no right to withdraw an appeal without the permission of the Court. Where the appellant had given notice of the withdrawal of the appeal before the day of hearing and notice of withdrawal had been given to the respondent who had previously incurred costs in the appeal, held that the appellant was not at liberty to withdraw the appeal and that the appeal should be set down for hearing. KAREEM BEE v. BEEGAM BEE, 3 M.H.C. 368.

(2)—Appeal to Privy Council — Practice.—An appeal to the Queen in Council was allowed by the High Court in a suit instituted by a Hindu widow as guardian of her husband's adopted son, a minor. After the allowance of the appeal and transmission of the record to England, the adopted son, having become of age, petitioned the High Court for the withdrawal of the appeal. The High Court referred the application to the Judicial Committee. On a petition by the respondents, founded on these proceedings, to dismiss the appeal, the appellant resisted the application on grounds, first, that, as a Hindu widow, she had preferable title to the estate to the adopted son; and secondly, with respect to the costs incurred by her as guardian in bringing the suit. Held, dismissing the appeal, simpliciter, (1) that, as the adopted son was of age and dominus litis, and had directed the withdrawal of the appeal, the appellant had no locus standi; (2) that any claim she had as widow must be the subject of an independent suit; and (3) that any costs incurred by her were to be recouped from the adopted son's estate. Withdrawal of Claim.

(1)—As to part of properties, effect of, on jurisdiction of Court.—Where the parties to a suit after the institution of the suit in the Court in which part of the property was situated, happened to compromise the claim so far as it related to the property within the jurisdiction of such Court, the subsequent withdrawal of the claim on the ground of the compromise entered into with the defendants who had it in their possession, could not, in the absence of a positive rule of law, operate to take away the jurisdiction which had once vested, unless the compromise was shown to have been otherwise than bona fide and a mere contrivance to defeat or a fraud upon the policy of the rule of procedure as to local jurisdiction. KHATIJA v. ISMAIL, 12 M. 380. [R., 16 A. 359, 4 M.L.T. 392 = A.W.N. 1908, 235 = 5 A.L.J. 647 = 30 A. 560.]

(2)—Withdrawal of portion of claim by plaintiff—Return of plaint for amendment—Supplementary petition for whole claim, effect of.—

Withdrawal of Claim—concluded.

Where a plaintiff who has originally withdrawn a portion of his claim, on his plaint being returned to him for amendment, has in effect by an added petition cancelled the proposed relinquishment of part of his claim, he may be held not to have voluntarily relinquished it. (1)—Practice—Permission to withdraw from suit—Duty of Court—Civ. Pro. Code (Act V of 1908), O. 23, r. 1.—Permission to withdraw from a suit with liberty to bring a fresh one should not be lightly granted. Before granting such permission, the Judge must satisfy himself that there are formal defects by reason of which the suit must fail. BESHASHER DAS v. ABDUL JALIL, 5 Ind. Cas. 546.

(2)—Act X of 1859—Suit—Withdrawal—Fresh suit.—Act X of 1859, did not contain any section corresponding to s. 97 of Act VIII of 1859. A plaintiff who withdraws a former suit without obtaining any express power from the Court to institute a fresh action is not precluded from bringing such fresh action under Act X of 1859. MODHOO SOODHUN MULLICK v. PANTH COWREE MULICK, 7 W.R. 302. (1 Marsh 148, 150, F.)

(3)—Suit—Omission of part of claim—Withdrawal of suit—Fresh suit—Addition of portion of claim omitted—Act VIII of 1859, ss. 7 and 97.—Where, in the first suit, a portion of the claim was omitted, and the suit withdrawn with permission to bring a fresh suit, which should include the portion omitted in the first suit, held that the additional portion of the claim included in the fresh suit brought, is not barred under s. 7, Act VIII of 1859. ILAHI BAKSH v. IMAM BAKSH, 1 A. 324. (Decision of All. H. C. in S. A. No. 180 of 1876, R.) [R., 17 A. 53, 14 C.P.L.R. 105.]

(4)—Act VIII of 1859, s. 97—Suit withdrawn—Fresh suit--Suit to declare documents spurious—Onus of proof.—Where a plaintiff has not been able to show, nor is there anything on the record to indicate, that he did obtain the Court's permission to withdraw the former suit, he would be precluded from bringing a fresh suit on the same matter under s. 97 of Act VIII of 1859. In a suit to have it declared that a document filed by the defendant in a former suit is spurious, the onus of proving such allegation is clearly on the plaintiff, and not on the defendant to prove the genuineness of the document. ABOO TALE— v. ABDOOL NUBEE, 20 W.R. 415.

(5)—Act VIII of 1859, s. 97, not applicable to rent suits.—S. 97 of Act VIII of 1859 does not apply to suits instituted under Act X of 1859, and does not preclude a person who has instituted and withdrawn a suit for arrears of rent from bringing subsequently a fresh suit for the same arrears. BEER CHUNDER JOOBRAJ v. TARINEE CHURN ROY, 11 W.R. 46. (Marshall Rep. 148, F.)

(6)—Act VI of 1862 (B.C.), s. 20—Scope of—Civ. Pro. Code, 1859, s. 256—Act X of 1859, s. 110.—S. 20 of Act VI of 1862 (B.C.) refers to a suit which is as yet untried. It does not apply to a suit already under trial, and the Collector is not therefore empowered under the section to withdraw a suit under trial before a Deputy Collector for the purpose of being tried elsewhere. S. 256 of Civ. Pro. Code, is not applicable in the case of a sale which has taken place in execution of a decree in the Collector's Court. S. 110 of Act X of 1859 is confined to provisions which have reference to procedure of sale and not to the procedure by which the parties obtained a remedy for an improper sale, and consequently, s. 256, Civ. Pro. Code, which provides a method by which the person aggrieved can come into Court after a sale to get that sale certified, is not one of the provisions referred to by s. 110. ANUND MOHUN SURMAH TALOOKDAR v. GRIJA KANT LAHOORY, 13 W. R. 222. [R., 38 C. 832.]

(7)—Withdrawal of suit—Act VIII of 1859, scope of.—The prohibitory clause of s. 97, Act VIII of 1859, does not apply to suits under Act X of 1859. RAMNATH DUTT v. JOY KISHAN MOOKERJEE, 11 W.R. 3. (Marshall's Rep. 148, F.)

(8)—Act X of 1859—Withdrawal of claim—Jurisdiction—Costs.—A plaintiff may withdraw his claim at any time between the institution of the suit and the decree. The Court should then confine itself to the question of costs. RAMACHARAN BYSACK v. MRS. R. HARVEY, 2 B.L.R.S.N. 11-b.=10 W.R. 373. (1 Marsh 148, F.)

(9)—Civ. Pro. Code, 1859, s. 97—Withdrawal of suit—Fresh suit on same cause of action—Jurisdiction of Court.—A Civil Court has no power to sanction the bringing of a fresh suit except under s. 97 of Act VIII of 1859. Under this section, the plaintiff is bound to satisfy the Court before final judgment, that there were sufficient grounds for permitting him to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit for the same matter. ARGOON SINGH v. HUREE HUR SINGH MONDAH, 14 W.R. 472.

(10)—Civ. Pro. Code, Act X of 1877, s. 373—Withdrawal by co-plaintiff from suit—Consent of co-plaintiffs.—Under the proviso in the third clause of s. 373, Civ. Pro. Code, one of several co-plaintiffs may withdraw unconditionally from a suit, even though his co-plaintiffs do not consent to his withdrawal. MOHAMAYA CHOWDHRAIN v. DURGA CHURN SHAHA, 9 C.L.R. 332. [Diss., 3 Ind. Cas. 61.]

(11)—Withdrawal of suit with leave to bring fresh suit on payment of costs of defendant—Suit by one of several members of a joint family—Order of withdrawal, if binding upon other members—Costs, deposit of, how and when may be made—Costs deposited not with, but sometime after, the presentation of plaint, if proper. An order made by a Court, in a suit brought by one of several members of a joint family for recovery of money due on a promissory note, permitting the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with leave to bring a fresh suit subject to limitation and on condition that he must pay or deposit the defendant's costs before bringing a fresh suit, is not binding upon the other members of the joint family who were not parties to the suit, and a subsequent and fresh suit brought by the previous plaintiff and the other members of the family cannot, so far as the latter are concerned, be dismissed on the failure of the former to deposit or pay into Court the costs as ordered, but must be tried out so far as they are concerned and in the presence of the other plaintiff, whom they are entitled to ask to be joined as a party-defendant to the suit. Where no question of limitation arises, the subsequent suit may be taken to have been duly instituted, as regards all the plaintiffs, on the day on which the costs were deposited. (32 C. 339, R.) The deposit of costs on a day subsequent to the presentation of the plaint may be treated as a sufficient compliance with the order made in the previous suit. GOPI LAL v. LALA NAGAN LAL, 14 C.L.J. 105. (31 C. 965, R.; 10 C.W.N. 8, Expl. & D.)

(12)—Withdrawal of suit—Withdrawal with consent of defendant—Civ. Pro. Code, 1859, s. 97—Right to bring fresh suit.—A plaintiff filed a plaint for an account to be taken. The plaintiff withdrew the plaint, without the permission of the Court to withdraw from the suit, with liberty to bring a fresh suit. This was done for the purpose of a submission to arbitration under a deed mutually executed between the plaintiff and defendant. The deed was not acted upon. Held, reversing the decision of Macpherson, J., that the plaintiff was not debarred by s. 97 of Act VIII of 1859 from bringing a fresh suit to establish the agreement for reference to arbitration, and also for the account, which was a relief to which he was entitled. The section only applied to cases where the plaintiff withdraws from the suit without the consent of the defendant. JUGGOBUNDO CHATTERJEE v. WATSON AND CO., Bourke A.O.C. 162 = Bourke O.C. 250.

(13)—Suit for partition by co-sharer—Alienees of other co-sharers made parties to the suit—Subsequent suit by an alienee—Maintainability of suit—Leave to withdraw suit with liberty to file a fresh suit.—One of several Mahomedan co-sharers brought a suit for a general partition of property, in which they impleaded the alienees of some of the other co-sharers as defendants. It was held, in that suit, that it was unnecessary to inquire into the rights of the alienees, and that they should be directed to a separate suit for their remedy. Afterwards, one of the alienees brought a suit for a share in the specific property sold to him, making the co-sharers parties to the suit, but not impleading the other alienees. It was held (1) that the suit was not maintainable in the form in which it was brought, and, (2) that the plaintiff may be allowed permission to withdraw the suit, with permission to file a fresh suit, for the same subject-matter of the litigation. PIR MIAN NURALH WD. PIR ARSHAD SHAH v. MUSSUMAT ARBAB KHATU, 1 Sind L.R. 187. (11 B. H. C. 72, 77, 23 B. 385, F.).

(14)—Withdrawal of suit with permission—Issues.—A plaintiff cannot be permitted to withdraw with liberty to bring a fresh suit, after issues have been joined, and he has failed to produce evidence to support his claim. MUDDUN RAMDOSS v. ISRAIL ALI CHOWDHRY, 21 W.R. 291. [R., 33 B. 722 = 11 Bom. L.R. 1109.]

(15)—Suit withdrawn with liberty to sue afresh — Appellate Court, competency of, to question order.—Where a suit instituted in a first Court is withdrawn with liberty to sue afresh, and a fresh suit is instituted which is decreed, and the defendant prefers an appeal, it is not competent to the Appellate Court to question the propriety of the order reserving to plaintiff permission to sue again. In the matter of OMESH CHUNDER MUNDAL v. THAKOOR DOSS MOOKERJEE, 23 W.R. 345.

(16)—Civ. Pro. Code (Act VIII of 1859), s. 97—Withdrawal from suit—Fresh suit—Discretion of first Court—Interference by Appellate Court.—Where a Court of first instance, in the exercise of its discretion under s. 97 of Act VIII of 1859, allows a plaintiff, at any time before final judgment, to withdraw from the suit with liberty to sue afresh, the Lower Appellate Court has no jurisdiction to interfere. RAN KANYE DUTT v. HAROO CHUNDER MOJOOMDAR, 17 W.R. 229.

(17)—Enlargement of period for delivery of award—Discretion of Court— Provisions in judgment affecting rights of parties under award—Deviation by Court without jurisdiction vitiating award—Permission to bring fresh suit, Court not competent by judgment to reserve.—Under s. 318 of Act VIII of 1859, the Court may, in its discretion, enlarge the period for the delivery of the award without the consent of the parties and even if they oppose the enlargement, there being no provision in the section that enlargements shall be granted only by consent. In this case, whereas the last enlargement of time for delivery of the award was to the 10th of December, it was not actually delivered till the 12th; though this was an irregularity, the arbitrator had given notice to the Court, on the 10th, that the award was ready on that day, giving good reasons for not delivering it and the award was in fact delivered on the 12th and received by the Court as of the 10th and the irregularity therefore was not such as to vitiate the proceedings so as to render the award a nullity. Where Court had introduced into its judgment certain provisions materially varying and affecting the rights of the parties as they had been declared in the award, the judgment was deemed to have been passed not in accordance with the award and to be consequently one without jurisdiction. The Court had also introduced into its judgment permission to the parties to sue again, and this was held not only as beyond the jurisdiction of the Court and contrary to the express provisionsof ss. 322 and 325 of the Code, but also as having been passed on an entire misconception of the circumstances under which the law empowers the Courts to permit a plaintiff to bring a second suit for the same matter. The permission in the present instance, the Court purported to give under s. 97 of Act VIII of 1859. But the High Court held that that section could have no possible application, since it applies only to the case of a plaintiff, who, at any time before final judgment, satisfies the Court that there are sufficient grounds for permitting him to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit for the same matter. ANUND MOHUN PAUL CHOWDHRY v. RAM KISHEN PAUL CHOWDHRY, 2 W.R. 297. [R.. 8 W.R. 171, 18 A. 422, F.B.=16 A.W.N. 137.]

(18)—Act VIII of 1859, s. 97—Permission to bring fresh suit.—No permission to bring a fresh suit can be given under s. 97, Act VIII of 1859, where final judgment has been pronounced. RAJAH SHEORAJ NUNDUN SINGH v. RAJCOOMAR BABOO DEO NUNDUN SINGH, 24 W.R. 23.

(19)—Application for permission to withdraw suit with liberty to bring fresh suit—Withdrawal allowed, but permission to bring fresh suit refused.—Where the appellants made an application to the appellate Court to be allowed to withdraw the suit and to be permitted to bring it afresh, held that the lower Court was not competent, while refusing permission to bring the suit afresh, to order that the appeal should be struck off the file according to the first part of the prayer. The application if it could not be granted in its entirety, should have been refused, and the appeal should have been disposed of in the usual manner. NAGPAL v. CHINTAMAN, A.W.N. 1882, 69.

(20)—Act VIII of 1859, s. 97—Withdrawal of suit—Permission—Power of Court.—On a day being fixed for the hearing of the case, the plaintiff petitioned the Court saying that it would be out of his power to adduce the evidence which he pointed out as existing in certain records, within the period fixed by the Court for hearing the case, and he, therefore, asked the Court for permission to withdraw his plaint. Held that the Court was competent under s. 97 of the Code to grant the permission asked for. KOOMAR PORESH NARAIN ROY v. RANEE SURUF SOONDUREE DEBEE, 16 W.R. 100.

(21)—Civ. Pro. Code, Act VIII of 1859, s. 97—Compromise on withdrawal of special appeal—Bar of suit found on such compromise.—A suit founded on a compromise which had been entered into when a special appeal was withdrawn, is not barred by s. 97, Act VIII of 1859, as it is not a suit for the same matter within the meaning of that section, but, if the compromise had been duly made by the parties thereto and its terms had been broken, a party to it would be entitled to maintain a suit to enforce it. GOLAB SINGH v. CHEDA SINGH, 3 Agra 135.

(22)—Withdrawal of suit—Right of plaintiff to withdraw from or abandon his suit without the consent of the Court — Compromise. — The plaintiff in a civil suit has an absolute right to withdraw from or abandon his suit either in whole or in part without the consent of the Court. Where both parties to a suit notified to the Court that they were agreed on the subject of litigation and did not wish to continue the suit but did not inform the Court of the nature of the compromise arrived at:—held that such notification was to be treated as a withdrawal or abandonment of the suit within the meaning of s. 373 of the Code of Civil Procedure. ALLAH BAKSH v. NIAMAT ALI, A.W.N. 1892, 53.

(23)—Unconditional withdrawal of claim—Private agreement—Defendant's failure to fulfil—Setting aside withdrawal—New right of action.—Where a plaintiff in person filed a petition purporting to request the withdrawal of his claim unconditionally, his suit should at once be struck off the file. If the defendant had privately entered into some agreement and refused to fulfil the agreement, the circumstance might give the plaintiff a new right of action for the enforcement of the agreement, but was no valid reason for setting aside the petition of withdrawal as null and void. RAJAH SHUMSHER BAHADOOR v. MIRZA MAHOMED ALI BEG, 2 Agra 158.

(24)—Subsequent suit for rent, withdrawal of, effect of, on prior decree.—The withdrawal of a subsequent suit by a landlord against his tenant for rent could not have the effect, in any way, of neutralising a previous decree for rent with respect to the same lands. Nor could it put an end to the relationship of landlord and tenant which was established by the earlier decree. RUNGO LALL MUNDUL v. ABDUL GUFFOOR, 4 C. 314=3 C.L.R. 119.

(25)—Suit for rent — Subsequent suit for possession—Res judicata—Act VIII of 1859, s. 97.—There is nothing in s. 97, Act VIII of 1859, to prevent a suit or from instituting a claim for possession, and afterwards bringing one for rent. RAM KISHORE MUNDLE v. MOORAD MUNDLE, W.R. Act X, Rul. 67.

(26)—Res judicata—Former suit dismissed for failure to produce evidence, with reservation to bring a new suit—Fresh suit—Act VIII of 1859, s. 2.—A suit brought in the year 1856, to set aside an auction sale of a Putnee Taluk for arrears of rent, under Ben. Reg. VIII of 1819, was dismissed for want of evidence on the part of the plaintiffs, with a reservation by the Court that the order made was not to be a bar to the plaintiffs, or any other persons who might substantiate their rights, from proceeding to recover. On a fresh suit by the same parties for the same matter, held that such reservation was of no effect as, under s. 2 of Act VIII of 1859, the former suit was a bar, and a plea of res judicata allowed. There is no power in the Courts in India, similar to that exercised by Courts of Equity or Common Law in England, to dismiss a suit with liberty for the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit for the same matter, or to enter a non-suit. Such power of the Indian Courts is limited to questions of form, as (1) in the case of misjoinder of parties or of the matters in suit, (2) where a material document has been rejected for not bearing a proper stamp, and (3) if there has been an improper valuation of the subject-matter of the suit; but not to a case where the issue has been joined and the plaintiff fails to produce the evidence he is bound to give to support the issue. WATSON v. THE COLLECTOR OF JILLA RAJSHAHYE, 3 B.L.R.P.C. 48 = 13 M.I.A. 160 = 12 W.R.P.C. 43 = 2 Suther 269 = 2 Sar. 500. [F., 21 W.R. 291, 12 M. 500, 35 C. 924 = 12 C.W.N. 921; R., 3 A. 528, 9 A. 155, 9 A. 690, 14 B. 31, 19 B. 571, 9 C.W.N. 679, 6 Bom. (27)—Withdrawal of suit by plaintiff with permission to sue afresh—Subsequent suit on same cause of action—Res judicata—Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, ss. 13, 373—Where a plaintiff withdraws from the suit under s. 373, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, with liberty to sue afresh, before nothing is decided in respect of the merits of the case, and institutes a fresh suit on the same cause of action, the second suit would not be barred by the rule of res judicata. ABDUL RAHMAN v. LAL BEHARI, A.W.N. 1885, 151.

(28)—Withdrawal of suit—Petition may be re-called before final order—Res judicata—Judgment between defendants—Res judicata between defendants—Evidence, admissibility of—Deposition—Opportunity of cross-examination—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 33—Hindu widow—Reversioner.—A plaintiff, who has filed an unconditional petition to withdraw the suit, is entitled to recall the petition and proceed with the suit at any time before the final order is passed. Where there was no judgment defining the real rights and obligations of the defendants inter se, the principle of res judicata, could have no application. (11 B. 216, 31 C. 95, 5 C.L.J. 611, 36 C. 193, 1 Ind. Cas. 913, 5 C.L.J. 653, Rel.)— A deposition is necessarily a partial representation of facts as to all persons who have no opportunity to bring out the whole truth by cross-examination. Such deposition ought not to be used against the party to his prejudice. Semble: The principle of the rule of the English Law of Evidence by which, when there are several remainders limited by one deed, a judgment for or against one of them is evidence for or against the next in succession, may justify the use, under s. 33 of the Indian Evidence Act, of a deposition in a suit brought against a Hindu widow, in a subsequent litigation against her reversioner. Code (1882), although no summons had been served on him previously and he was discharged by the Court. At the hearing of the case, plaintiff applied under s. 373 to withdraw the suit with liberty to sue afresh. The defendant objected. On behalf of the plaintiff it was argued that the defendant had no right to appear at the hearing of the case, by reason of the non-service of summons on him. The Court held (1) that the defendant had the right to appear in spite of the non-service of summons on him because the plaintiff had brought him before the Court by a legal process, and (2) that, under s. 373 of the Civ. Pro. Code (1882), the plaintiff might withdraw the suit with liberty to sue afresh. In the above case, the Court awarded compensation to the defendant under s. 491 for his illegal arrest under s. 477, Civ. Pro. Code (1882). H. H. SYED ALI v. A. ADIB, 15 B. 160.

The Court is not justified in interfering in appeal with an order that a plaintiff, who is permitted to withdraw from his suit under s. 97, Act VIII of 1859, should pay the defendant's costs. When a suit is by permission withdrawn under s. 29, the proper order to be recorded is not one of dismissal, but a simple order in the terms of that section, permitting the plaintiff "to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit for the same matter," on payment of costs or otherwise as the Court may deem proper. (1)—Burden of proof—Non-examination of parties in a suit, result of—English and Indian practice—Account books, non-production of.—The plaintiff brought a suit for the recovery of certain properties, alleging that he was adopted twenty years before the date of the suit. Held, the burden of proving that the alleged adoption took place twenty years before the trial rested upon the plaintiff. The presumption that would be drawn in England will be to the detriment of a plaintiff who fails to enter the witness-box and face the ordeal of cross-examination. But, in cases between natives tried in India, a species of advocacy is tolerated by the Courts of law here, in which the unworthy effort of the advocate on each side is to force his opponent to produce his own client, in order that he himself may have the opportunity of cross-examining that client. The result is that, should the opponent refuse to be led into this trap, the parties (the principal witnesses, who possibly could throw light on all these tangled transactions which so perplex those who have to decide these cases) are never examined at all, and the litigation goes forward through tortuous windings to its unsatisfactory and uncertain end. It is a vicious practice, unworthy of a high toned or reputable system of advocacy, tending to embarrass and perplex judicial investigation, and too often enabling fraud, falsehood or chicane to baffle justice. Having regard to the well-known and often proved habits of the Indian people with regard to the keeping of accounts, recording their most minute transactions, the non-production of any book, in which anything connected with the matter in question is entered, by the party in whose possession it is, covers the parties' case with suspicion. (2)—Suit to recover money on bond—Refusal of defendant to enter witness-box.—A sued to recover from B Rupees 10,000 on a bond which he alleged B had executed to him when he lent him the money. B denied having received the money or executed the bond, and contended that his alleged signature was a forgery. C, B's brother, also asserted that the endorsement which purported to have been written by him was forged. Held, that the evidence adduced by B was most unsatisfactory, while the refusal of B and C to enter the witness-box, to deny that they had acted as alleged by A, weighed strongly against the probability of their story. (6) — Defendant summoned as witness for plaintiff— Failure of defendant to appear—Court directing ex parte proceedings against defendant — Illegal procedure — Objectionable practice.—The plaintiff having required the defendant to appear as his witness, the Court directed him to appear accordingly. On the date fixed for his appearance, his pleader represented to the Court that he (defendant) was ill. The case was adjourned to another date for the defendant's appearance. On that date again, he failed to appear on the ground of illness, but his pleader was present. The Court ordered the case to proceed ex parte against him: Held, that there is no law which warranted the Court's order, merely on the ground of failure of the defendant to appear under the circumstances of the case. The defendant, being present by his pleader, was entitled to have his defence heard. The practice of the plaintiff summoning the defendant as his witness and vice versa is objectionable, and ought not to be countenanced by the Court on any account. BALDEV TRIBUVANDAS GUJARAT. v. Where, on the day of hearing, an application for an adjournment for attendance to witnesses, who though summoned yet failed to attend, was refused and the case was proceeded with, and the Court, recorded that the case was closed and that on the following day it would deliver judgment, held, that the refusal to examine the witnesses tendered on the following day was a substantial error in procedure and that the Court having exercised its discretion wrongfully, the order refusing to examine the witnesses was appealable. Per Ghose, J.—Quære.—Whether a Court on second appeal could interfere on a point of discretion. (10)—Arrest in execution of decree—Privilege of witness—Scope of privilege.—The privilege of a witness of freedom from being arrested in execution of a decree during his attendance at Court for the purpose of giving evidence in the case in which he had been subpœned is not given by the law for the personal benefit of the individual affected, but for the furtherance of the public interests and for the better administration of justice, and the legal definition of the circumstances under which it is claimable, viz., eundo, morando et redeundo, is in itself sufficient to show what really is the scope of the privilege. The High Court held that he should not have refused to consider the evidence, and remanded the case referring him to the provision in s. 20, Act II of 1855, that, in every civil proceeding, a husband or wife is competent to give evidence for or against each other. (2)—Non-appearance of witnesses after summons—Party's duty to move Court to secure their attendance—Witness—Premature application to compel attendance — Commission for examination of witnesses, Court whether bound to await return.—Where witnesses summoned at the instance of a party failed to attend on the day fixed, it is the duty of the party who requires their evidence and not of the Court, to move the Court for further measures to be taken to secure their attendance. It is premature to apply to the Court to compel the attendance of witnesses before the result of the service of summons is known. A Court is not bound to await the return of a Commission issued for the examination of witnesses, unless it is moved to wait therefor. NUND MOHAN CHOWDHRY v. GOLUCK NATH NEOGEE, 11 W.R. 99.

(3)—Absent witness when Court bound to issue proclamation against—Suit by purchaser of jote, compromise come to by zemindar not binding on lessee defendant.—A Court is not bound to issue proclamation against witnesses who have failed to attend in obedience to a summons, where it is not satisfied that the witnesses were material witnesses and that they have really absconded for the purpose of avoiding attendance. The appellant purchased certain rights of one G who held a tenure under the zemindar. The zemindar gave a lease of it to B, and the appellant sued all these three parties. After the remand of the case for trying whether the rights of G were transferable, the zemindar filed a compromise, but the lower appellate Court still tried the case of the appellant as against B who was in actual possession through the zemindar. The contentions on special appeal that the compromise by the zemindar entitled the appellant to obtain a decree and that B the other ryot was bound by the acts of his zemindar, the landlord, were held by the High Court to be untenable. The zemindar having given a lease to B cannot bind him by any act prejudicial to his rights. So, the mere fact that the zemindar had withdrawn from the contest could not by itself preclude B from contesting the special appellant's purchase. BHOOBUN MOYEE DOSSEE v. the Court has reason to believe that the defaulting witnesses had a lawful excuse for their failure to attend, in which case it is precluded from issuing an order for arrest. Under the explanation attached to s. 174 of the Code, non-payment or non-tender of a sum sufficient to defray the expenses mentioned in s. 160, viz., the travelling or other expenses of the person summoned in passing to and from the Court for one day's attendance, shall be deemed a lawful excuse for his non-attendance in obedience to the summons, and, in such a case, the Court has no option but to refuse the warrant of arrest applied for. (5)—Procedure—Witnesses—Service of summons — Warrant — Attachment of property.—After the issue of summonses on the witnesses without any effect, the appellant, with the permission of the Court, took out warrants for their arrest. But they were all returned with a report that the witnesses could not be found. The next day after the return, the appellant asked the Court that their property might be attached. The Court refused the request and decided the case on that very day against the appellant. Held that the proceedings refusing the request were illegal. Under the law, the Court should inquire whether the witnesses were material witnesses and, if they were material, should comply with the request. SHEIKH JAFUR v. (6)—Civ. Pro. Code, s 168—When warrant of arrest may be issued to a witness not appearing after summons.—S. 168, Civ. Pro. Code, requires that there should appear to the Court to be satisfactory ground for believing that the default on the part of witnesses summoned to give evidence is without lawful excuse, before issuing a warrant for the arrest of such witnesses. But it is necessary for this purpose to institute a formal investigation and come to a determination on the evidence adduced. PERIYANNA CHETTY v. GOVINDA GOUNDAN, 5 M.H.C. 104. [R., 5 Ind. Code 1859, was put in when the arguments were commenced and at a very late stage of the case, without proffer of any proof that the witness was absconding or keeping out of the way for the purpose of avoiding the service of summons, the lower appellate Court was justified in not postponing the case at that last stage, and was quite right in proceeding to trial, although that witness was very material. application being made to the Court under ss. 159 and 168 of the Civ. Pro. Code. (Act VIII of 1859), the Court is bound to satisfy itself that the witness has absconded or cannot be brought before it, and that his evidence on the document in question, as the case may be, is material to the case. On being so satisfied, it ought not to refuse the application, except where the applicant has disentitled himself to the assistance of the Court, either by reason of his having aided in or connived at the absconding of the witness, or of having otherwise placed himself in such a position that it would be inequitable to grant it. Pro. Code, s.* 480.—The provisions of s. 174 of the Civ. Pro. Code of 1882 apply only to the case of a witness who, not having attended on summons, has been arrested and brought before the Court. It does not apply to a case where the witness, having attended on summons to produce a document, refuses to produce the document or falsely states on oath that it is not in his possession. The case of a witness who, having a document, will not produce it, is provided for by s. 175 of the Penal Code, and a limited summary jurisdiction is given to the Court in such a case by s. 480 of the Civ. Pro. (10)—Civ. Pro. Code, s. 159—Recusant witnesses—Discretion of Court in issuing proclamation, to be exercised reasonably.—S. 159 of the Civ. Pro. Code, gives the Civil Court a discretion as to the issuing of proclamation and subsequent orders for attachment; but, such Court is bound to exercise a reasonable discretion. In the present case, there was no reasonable exercise of such discretion; on the contrary, it was opposed to facts, patent on the record; and the High Court, considering the reasonings of the Judge altogether invalid, remanded the case in order that the usual legal proceedings may first be taken to procure the attendance of the missing witnesses, and for a fresh decision by the first Court after recording their evidence. The High Court directed that, in case the witnesses be not found, the Judge should decide the case de novo on the evidence really before him and not an unjustifiable assumptions. A Judge has no jurisdiction under Act VIII of 1859 to inflict a fine for the purpose of punishing a witness who absconds or keeps out of the way, to avoid service of summons. The Legislature must have intended by the words of s. 365, Act VIII of 1859, to give the right of appeal to the High Court to a person aggrieved by an order of Civil Court imposing a fine on him as a punishment for keeping out of the way in order to avoid service of summons to attend as a witness, whether the order be strictly referable to s. 160 or not. If parties will not come forward and give their own evidence, in cases in which such evidence is most important and the best that can be obtained, they must not complain if their written statement verified by their mooktear and not by themselves, and supported by the evidence of menials and a class of witnesses of whom any number can be obtained to prove any fact that is wanted, is not believed. The Court will require the best evidence to be given and will not be satisfied with the evidence of inferior witnesses put forward by the parties themselves while they remain in the background and plead their prejudices as an excuse for their absence. (4)—Examination of witnesses — Duty of parties.—It is the duty of the plaintiff or the defendant, as the case may be, to tender such witnesses as he considers necessary to prove his case, and to see that they are examined, notwithstanding the report of the Nazir that such and such witnesses are in attendance. If he fails to do so the Court cannot postpone the case in order to have the witnesses named by the parties examined. DEEN DYAL SINGH v. DANEE ROY, 13 W.R. 185.

(5)—Witnesses, selection of, for examination—Duty of parties and not of Court.—It is not the business of the Court to determine what witnesses shall be examined; the parties must select their own witnesses and call upon the Court to examine such of them as they may offer for examination. If they do not take the necessary steps to have the witnesses examined or to compel them to be present for examination at the proper time, it is their own fault and not that of the Court. MORNO MOYEE DEBEE v. BHEEM COOMAR CHOWDHRY, 6 W.R. 231. [F., 4 N.L.R. 129.]

(6)—Application for attendance and examination of witness, duty of Court to look into purpose of—Consent to abide by testimony of particular witness, limited to direct evidence legally admissible.—In this case, the lower appellate Court summoned, at the instance of the plaintiff, one of the defendants in the suit and, having examined him, found that he supported in toto the defendants' evidence below and reversed the judgment of the first Court which had found in favour of the plaintiff. On second appeal, it was contended that the judgment of the Appellate Court was wrong, because all that the defendant deposed to as a witness was spoken from hearsay, whereas the appellant should be taken to have meant only to agree to abide by such testimony as would be legally admissible, or in other words, only the evidence given by the defendant relating to such facts as he was able to directly speak to. The High Court also observed that, as the law sufficiently provides for the compulsory attendance of the parties to the suit, as well as other persons, for the purpose of giving evidence, such an application to the Court, as that made by the plaintiff, was not necessary for the purpose of procuring the witness, and could have no meaning unless it impliedly gave up some of the strict rights of a litigant and amounted, in some sort, to a submission, to arbitration. Before granting such an application the Court should take care that its purpose is plainly that of compromise and submission; otherwise it runs the unnecessary risk of lending the process of the Court to the prosecution of a wager of law. LUCKEE MONEE DOSSEE v. SHUNKURREE DOSSEE, 2 W.R. 252.

(7)—Witness in attendance, duty of Court to examine.—In this case, the first Court had stopped the case after hearing some alone of the witnesses, saying that it was satisfied, but the lower appellate Court, not being satisfied by the evidence on the record, decided without hearing all the evidence. A review presented by the appellant to the Judge was rejected on the ground that it seldom happens that some witnesses are not sent away unexamined and that such a pretext would re-open almost every case. The High Court did not agree with the Judge, observing that it may well be that it often happens that many witnesses named do not appear, or, appearing, are not examined by the parties who named them; but it is not common and it certainly is not proper for the Court to eject any witnesses in attendance whom the parties wish to call. Where, in such a case, the first Court has rejected some of the witnesses actually in attendance, taking upon itself the responsibility of not having examined them, the appellant can claim to be heard out before any decision is passed against him by the appellate Court. MESSRS. R. WATSON AND CO. v. MUKEE MUNDUL, 6 W.R. Act X, Rul. 83.

(9)—Witnesses—Examination—Court's duty.—The Court is bound to examine all witnesses whom the parties wish to be examined, except where there is a clear intention to obstruct or delay justice. CHOWDHRY KHOORGO ROY v. SHIB TOHOL ROY, 17 W.R. 172.

(10)—Day fixed by Court for hearing, duty of Court to wait for—Court not competent to decide the case earlier without witnesses.—The Judicial Commissioner who tried this case was held to have acted illegally in having disposed of it before the day appointed for hearing the witnesses of the plaintiff, on the ground that he was not likely to believe them. The High Court remarked that it was very surprising that the Judicial Commissioner should have set forth the doctrine that it was right to decide without waiting for the witnesses, because no amount of witnesses would be believed. (11)—Issues—Evidence—Written statement—Admission.—Under the Civ. Pro. Code, 1859, it is the duty of the Court to examine the written statements in order to see on what points the parties are at issue, to lay down the issues, and to receive and consider the evidence adduced on the points in dispute, but the Court will not allow the parties to waste its time by producing evidence to establish that which has never been contradicted ; and therefore to lay down that, when a defendant admits any one fact contained in the written statement of the plaintiff, and thereby excludes independent evidence thereof, he is entitled to say that the plaintiff has relied on his statement as evidence, and that he (defendant) is in consequence in a position to claim that the whole of it may be read as evidence in his own favour, is a proposition which cannot be maintained. If a party wishes to give evidence in his own favour, of course it is in his power to come forward like any other witness, and subject himself to examination and cross-examination in open Court ; but until he has subjected himself to cross-exmination, no statement which he may volunteer can be used as any evidence in support of his own case, unless the right, so to use it, has accrued from the deliberate act of his adversary. A party cannot himself determine that his own statement shall be used as evidence in his favour. SHAIKH SHURFURAZ MOLLAH v. SHAIKH DHUNOO, 16 W.R. 257.

(12)—Deposition given by defendant in particular form proposed by plaintiff—Court not competent to re open case and examine further witnesses.—The plaintiff had rested her claim on the evidence of the defendant, and the defendant, having been examined, did not prove the claim of the plaintiff but swore to the falsity of it. The first Court therefore dismissed the suit. On appeal, the Judge was of opinion that, as the plaintiff had rested her case on the deposition of the defendant, which was to be taken by placing his hand on a particular text of the Koran, and he was not examined in that form, but under Act V of 1840, the plaintiff was entitled to have her remaining witnesses examined. Held that as it was clearly the plaintiff's intention to rest her case entirely on the evidence of the defendant, his examination being taken by administering the oath on the Koran or in any way the Court might deem proper, the first Court was right in having examined the defendant in the way and manner sanctioned by the Procedure Code and the defendant was equally bound to speak the truth whether examined under Act V or on the Koran. Plaintiff had repeatedly petitioned the Court to examine the defendant resting her case on his evidence alone and asking the Court not to examine the remaining witnesses. (13)—Jurisdiction—Transfer of case—Judge—Powers—Procedure.—A Judge has no power whatever to keep a case on his own file and refer the witnesses to be examined, some by the Munsif and some by the Subordinate Judge, and then to decide it himself. The Judge could have transferred the case either to the Munsif or the Subordinate Jugde with the sanction of the High Court, under the provisions of s. 27, Act VI of 1871. GUJENDRO CHUNDER SANDYAL v. WOOMA MOYEE DEBIA, 16 W.R. 176.

(14)—Examination of parties and witnesses—Powers of Munsif—Act VIII of 1859, ss. 166, 170.—A Munsif has power if necessary under s. 166, Act VIII of 1859, to examine any of the parties to a suit and to compel their attendance; or, in the event of their failure to comply with the order, to deal with the suit under s. 170. He also has power, if necessary, to examine any other person as a witness. The general duties of the lower Courts in connection with the examination of witnesses pointed out. RAMGATI v. SRIMATI INUTARI BANU, 1 B.L. R.S.N. 20 C.

(15)—Application on special grounds to take evidence of witness—Duty of Court.—A Court is not necessarily bound to take the deposition of a witness merely because he has been summoned and is present. It is clearly the duty and privilege of the parties to call such witnesses as they think necessary to support their cases respectively. When any material witness is not examined, it is the duty of the party who deems his testimony of importance to call upon the Court at the proper time to examine him. If the Court, when specially prayed to take the evidence of a witness, refuses without good reason to do so, then, no doubt, the party calling the witness would have ground for complaint. But the Court is in no degree bound to examine a person as a witness merely because he has been summoned and is in attendance. SREEMUTTY RANEE DOORGA SOONDAREE v. RANEE HUREE MONEE, 2 W.R. 166.

(18)—Evidence—Statement by defendant to rest his case on evidence of specified witnesses—Court not bound to act upon their evidence.—Where a defendant stated his readiness to rest his case on the evidence of two witnesses whom he named, and those witnesses, when called, gave testimony unfavourable to the defendant, the Court was not bound to adopt or act upon their evidence and treat that testimony as conclusive, although it was inconclusive and chiefly hearsay. MUNNOO SINGH v. AMRUT LAL, 5 W.R. 234.

(19)—Witnesses, omission to examine.— A Court of first instance, after examining some of the witnesses for the plaintiff, allowed the rest to depart, holding their examination to be unnecessary. Subsequently, during the examination of the witnesses for the defendant, the plaintiff after stating that all his witnesses had not been examined, objected to the examination of more of the defendant's witnesses, than the number examined on his own side, whereupon the Court allowed some of the witnesses for the defendant then present to leave the Court without examining them. Held that the lower Court's judgment was defective in not having examined all the witnesses tendered by the plaintiff. (24)—Act X of 1859, s. 13—Suit for enhancement of rent--Evidence of expert taken in appeal.—In a suit for arrears of rent for 1273 at an enhanced rate of Rs. 3 a beegah, it was found that rent had been paid at one rupee a beegah. The plaintiff relied upon an agreement alleged to have been executed by defendant in byesakh 1273. The Assistant Collector found that the agreement had not been executed by defendant. On appeal to the Judge, upon the ground that only two of the attesting witnesses had been cited and examined by the Assistant Collector, the Judge called an expert who proved that the signatures of the persons who were cited as attesting witnesses were, in fact, written by the attesting witness who has called, and he affirmed the decision of the Assistant Collector. Held that the Judge was wrong in calling for and acting upon the expert evidence. Held also that even if the agreement had been proved, the claim for enhancement could not be maintained. As the agreement was entered into after the month of Cheyt and as it did not mention the period for which the rent was to be enhanced, the Court could not infer that it was intended to apply to the rent of 1273. experience. It is a well-known rule that all witnesses examined in chief or sworn are subject to cross-examination. The essence of cross-examination is, that it is the interrogation by the advocate of one party of a witness called by his adversary with the object either to obtain from such witness admissions favourable to his cause or to discredit him. Cross-examination is the most effective of all means for extracting truth and exposing falsehood. Also, the test for determining whether the depositions of witnesses who were absent, or who have been examined in a former suit, can be received, is, whether the party against whom they are to be used had the opportunity to cross-examine. If he could not have cross-examined, the deposition ought not to be admitted against him. MEER SUJAD ALI KHAN v. LALLA KASHEE-NATH DOSS, 6 W.R. 181.

Two days after this, an application was made by the plaintiff in the fifth to re-examine these witnesses in the case instituted by him. Held that in the absence of new reasons assigned for their re-examination the Court was justified in refusing to call them again. A Court is justified in disallowing the costs of a party against whom the suit is dismissed, where, by his own admission and conduct, he induced the plaintiff to bring him into the category of defendants. The Judge of the lower appellate Court who was inclined to take a different view of the plaintiff's evidence, proceeded upon the evidence recorded by the first Court and reversed its decree. The decree of the lower appellate Court was reversed and the case remanded for a re-hearing of the appeal after giving the defendant an opportunity of having the witnesses, whom he proposed to examine, examined either in the Court of first instance or in the appellate Court itself as that Court might deem fit. particular matter is one upon which a witness may be contradicted by other witnesses. The reason of the rule which restricts the right to do so is, that it is an object of great importance to confine the attention of the Jury as much as possible to specific issues. Without some rule, many collateral questions of fact might be raised in the course of a long trial; and the specific question to be determined may be lost sight of. The rule is well stated in Greenleaf on Evidence, s. 52, as excluding all evidence of facts which are incapable of affording any reasonable presumption or inference as to the principal fact or matter in dispute. Code, does not give the lower Court an absolute power either to allow or to refuse the issue of a summons against a party to appear as a witness. When a Court exercises the power adversely to the petitioner and gives reasonable grounds for its decision, such order would be final. HARA CHAND PORAMANICK v. KRISHTO MOHUN GIREE, 1 W.R. 297.

(17)—Recusant witnesses—Judge refusing to compel attendance—The discretion of a Judge in refusing to compel the attendance of witnesses named by a party is a judicial one and must be exercised on reasonable grounds which should be themselves distinctly stated in the judgment. OZEER MAHOMED v. BYDNATH DOSS CHOWDHRY, 5 W.R. Act X, Rul. 6.

(18)—Summons to produce documents and for attendance of witnesses—Refusal, ground of—Civ. Pro. Code (Act X of 1877), s. 137.—The mere fact of the Court being of opinion that witnesses cannot be present or that document cannot be produced, before the close of the trial cannot be a ground for its refusing to grant an application for compelling their attendance or their production. KRISHNA CHURN BAISACK v. PROTAB CHUNDER SARMA, 7 C. 560 [Appr., 16 A. 218=14 A.W.N. 45; F., 13 C P. L.R. 152.]

(19)—Suit for arrears of Rent—Kabuliat denied—Petition to summon witnesses to prove kabuliat simply put with the record—Act X of 1859, s. 66—Appeal—Procedure Act VIII of 1859, ss. 356, 357.—In a suit for arrears of rent based upon a kabuliat alleged to have been executed by the defendant, the latter denied the kabuliat and put in a petition to summon certain witnesses to prove his payments and that he had been paying at a particular rate. The lower Court ordered the petition to be put with the record and tried the case without summoning the witnesses of the defendant. Held that the lower Court having ordered the petition to be put with the record was tantamount to making an order refusing to summon the witnesses, and that the lower Court was wrong in not summoning them according to the directions of s. 66, Act X of 1859. In such a case, on appeal by the defendant, the Judge ought, under s. 356, Act VIII of 1859, to have directed the lower Court either to send the witnesses to him for the purpose of being examined, or required the lower Court to take their evidence and to transmit it to him, and according to s. 357, Act VIII of 1859, he ought to have directed that the points to which the evidence was to be confined were, whether the defendant had been paying at the rates mentioned by him and whether he had made the payments alleged by him and whether the payments made had been specifically appropriated to any particular rent. MOHUN MUNDER v. BRIJ BHOOKUN SINGH, 9 W.R. 127.

(20)—Party undertaking himself to bring his witnesses, right of, to subsequently apply for subpœnas—Practice—The mere circumstance of a party having originally undertaken himself to brings his witnesses to Court for examination is no sufficient reason for depriving him of his right to subsequently apply for and get subpœnas issued, when he finds himself unable to bring them or to detain them till they are examined, although such circumstance may be a reason for the Court not waiting for such witnesses, where the case had been in other respects finished before they could appear. PANDURANG ANPAI v. KESHAVJI, 6 B. 742.

(21)—Witnesses—Proclamation—Attachment—Remand.—Where the plaintiff asked for the issue of proclamations against his witnesses under s. 159, Civ. Pro. Code, and did not ask for attachment of their property owing to their failure to attend on the day fixed in the proclamation, but went to trial upon the evidence which he had succeeded in getting, held that in special appeal, the plaintiff was not entitled to ask for a remand of the case, as he had not exhausted all the means that the law gave for the production of his evidence. LUCHMAN SINGH v. CHOKOWREE SINGH, 25 W.R. 154. [D., 8 A.L.J. 839=10 Ind. Cas. 903.]

(22)—Witness—Omission to summon witness—Appeal on ground of such omission—Appellant to show that witness not summoned could have given evidence in his favour.—Where an appellant pleads as a ground of appeal that the Court of first instance did not summon one of his witnesses it is incumbent on him to show that the witness whom he asked to have summoned could or would have given some evidence material to the appellant's case. MAKHI v. BHOLA NATH, A.W.N. 1896, 120.

(23)—Application for further summons to witness not made with due diligence—Court's refusal to issue summons at late stage—Second appeal.—Where an application for further process to witnesses is not made with due diligence, at the earliest date, the refusal of the Court in the exercise of its discretion, to issue such fresh process is not an error of law for which a second appellate Court will interfere. BANARSI PERSHAD v. MAKHAN ROY, 30 C. 947=7 C.W.N. 514.

(24)—Application to summon party to suit as a witness, Court refusing to grant, not bound to give reasons for.—The ground of special appeal urged by the appellant was that the Court of first instance refused to summon on his application, the plaintiff, for the purpose of giving evidence in the case, and that the lower appellate Court had affirmed that refusal. He contended that the first Court should have given legal reasons for its refusal Held that it was not incumbent on the Court to give legal reasons for its refusal to comply with an application to enforce the attendance of a party as a witness in the case. SIDDHESSURREE DEBIA v. DENOBUNDOO KOONDOO, 6 W.R. 65.

(25)—Application for postponement of case to obtain attendance of witnesses—Former applications on same ground granted—Court of first instance refusing the last application—Appeal.—Where the defendant applied (after several former applications on the same ground had been made and granted) for a further postponement of the case to enable him to produce his witnesses, both the lower Courts found that the application could not be entertained. Held, on appeal under the Letters Patent, that the Court of first instance, in refusing the postponement, had properly exercised its discretion. TAYLOR v. SARAT CHUNDER ROY CHOWDHRY, 20 C. 745, Note. [R., 20 C. 740, 13 C.W.N. 493=9 C.L.J. 367.]

(26)—Civil Court—Incompetency to bind witnesses by recognizance to give evidence—Warrant for apprehension of witness, when can be used.—A Civil Court has no power to bind witnesses by recognizances to attend to give evidence on a future day. A verbal order of the Court to the witnesses requiring them to attend on a future day would not justify the issuing of a warrant for the apprehension of such witnesses in case they fail to attend in obedience to such verbal order. S. VENKATAPPAH v. D. PAPAMMAH, 5 M.H.C. 132.

(27)—Act VIII of 1859, ss. 119, 146—Case adjourned—Rescission of order of adjournment—Validity—Onus— Review — Suit restored—Fresh summons—Where a Munsif made a regular order which he had power to make under s. 146 of Act VIII of 1859, granting time to the parties, and adjourned the hearing and fixing a day for the further hearing, but, on the same day after he had made that order, he rescinded it on the application of the defendant, held that it was incumbent on the defendant to show that the previous order was regularly and properly rescinded. If it was not, the order first made would stand good, and the Munsif had no power to decide the case on the next day when all the evidence which the plaintiff was entitled to produce had not been produced, and was not before him; thus, there was a defect in the procedure and a defect in law which might most materially have affected the decision of the case on the merits. Where a judgment or decision which has been previously passed is set aside either under s. 119 of Act VIII of 1859, or in the exercise of the power of review, and the suit is restored to the position in which it would have been if that judgment has not been passed, (28)—Witnesses—Duty of Court to summon witnesses—Reasonable time for attendance.—There is nothing whatever in the Civ. Pro. Code, Act VIII of 1859, which either expressly or impliedly declares that witnesses must necessarily be summoned before the day fixed for the first hearing of the suit. So long as the hearing of the suit merely stands adjourned, and so long as the party who wishes to summon witnesses has not closed his case, the Court is bound to summon them, unless it appears that the application is made so late that the witnesses, if summoned, could not attend, or reasonably be expected to attend in time to be examined before the closing of the case of the party summoning him. (29)—Practice—Summoning of public officers as witnesses.—The Rule of Practice contained in the Proceedings of the late Sadr Court, dated 25th August 1823, relative to the summoning of Public Officers, is hereby annulled. The Courts must in future be guided, as in the case of other witnesses, by the provisions of the Civ. Pro. Code. In fixing the time for the attendance of a Public Officer as a witness, or in granting the indulgence of an adjournment for that purpose, the fullest consideration must be given to the exigencies of the public duties of the officer summoned. (30)—Summons to witnesses, issuing of—Time of issuing summons—Act VIII of 1859, s. 149—Act X of 1877, *s.*159.—The 20th March of 1877 having been fixed for the final hearing of a suit, the plaintiff, on the 17th of March, and the defendant on the 19th, filed their lists of witnesses to be summoned. Both lists were ordered merely to be put up with the record. When the suit came on for hearing, it was dismissed on the ground that, when the plaintiff filed his list there was not sufficient time left to summon the witnesses. Held that the Judge was not justified in dismissing the suit on this ground, unless he found that it would have been absolutely impossible to secure the attendance of the witnesses had the summonses been granted on the 17th March. RAJENDRO NARAIN NEOGI v. RAJA KUMUD NARAIN BHUP, 3 C.L.R. 569.

sufficiently justified the plaintiffs in making no further application for a summons on their witnesses. [F., 22 B. 253 ; R., 22 W.R. 238.] There is nothing in the terms of Act I of 1847 which either gives finality to the order made by the Collector under the Act, or enables him to go into the questions of disputed title or to do anything more than demarcate by visible and tangible marks the boundaries between estates or fields. (33)—Process for witnesses before commencement of hearing—Summons, disobedience of—Warrant, application for—Laches of party, condonation of—Professional witnesses, examination of—Adjournment.—After numerous postponements a suit was ordered on the 20th December 1904 to be heard on the 1st February 1905, and summonses were directed to be issued to the plaintiff's witnesses including defendant No. 2. This was not duly served and on the 1st February, plaintiff applied for postponement and fresh summons. This was granted and the case postponed till the 23rd March. Process fees were duly filed and the summons served, but the defendant No. 2 did not appear. Plaintiff thereupon applied for a warrant which was refused and the hearing commenced: Held, there was no laches on the part of the plaintiff, and even if there had been any prior to the 20th December 1904, it was condoned. He was therefore entitled to the warrant prayed for. Every Court, is bound to render all reasonable assistance to a party to enforce the attendance of his witnesses. A party is entitled, at any stage of the case before hearing, to apply for a summons to cite witnesses, without reference to the number of such applications he may have previously made, and it is the duty of the Court to comply with such application, if any time be left before the hearing of the cause. A reasonable latitude should always be given for the convenience of professional men who have their own duties to attend to and cannot dance attendance all day on the chance of being called as witnesses. the special appellant urged that the lower appellate Court having fixed a date for the final hearing, and the return of the summonses to the witnesses ordered to be present not having been till then received, the Court was wrong in having held that the special appellant was not prepared to prove that the witnesses were material so as to be entitled to the issue of a proclamation in due form. Held that the Judge was wrong in having recorded that the special appellant should have on the hearing day been prepared to show that the witnesses were material or had absconded, because, under the circumstances, special appellant could not have done so as he did not know till the very date whether the witnesses would or would not appear the return not having come to hand till then. The High Court also observed that it is not legal in the case of a summons to a witness to affix it on the residence of the witness, the proper course being that prescribed in s. 156, Act VIII of 1859. The first Court decreed the suit, relying on the evidence of the plaintiff and two attesting witnesses. One of the attesting witnesses did not appear when summoned to appear in the District Court. Held that, as the witness had already been cross-examined and discharged in the first Court, nothing adverse to the truth of his testimony can be inferred, merely because he failed to attend for fresh cross-examination, as there might have been quite innocent reasons for his non-appearance. ——8.—Weight to be attached to Evidence.

(1)—Evidence of single witness believed by Court, duty of Court to act on.—The evidence of a single witness if believed will be sufficient, according to the law in the Courts in India, to establish any fact to which the witness might speak directly. If the Judge believes the evidence given by such witness, he ought to decide in accordance with the result of such evidence, and it is only in the event of his not believing the witness, on reasonable grounds, that he can come to a conclusion contrary to what the evidence of the witness purported to establish. RAJAH PROSONNO NARAIN DEB v. ROMONEE DOSSEE, 10 W.R. 236.

(2)—Act II of 1855, s. 28—Evidence of single witness, sufficiency of.—The evidence of one witness, if reliable, is sufficient to prove a fact. ZALEM MISSER v MUSSAMUT KUNDUN KOOER, 11 W.R. 194.

(3)—Evidence of single witness—Ejectment—Service tenure—Commutation.—There is no rule of law which prevents a Court from finding a question of fact, not amounting to high treason and any other offences specifically laid down in the Evidence Act, even on testimony of a single witness, if that testimony is believed by the Court. A suit was filed for the ejectment of the defendant upon the ground that he had failed to render the stipulated service. The defendant pleaded that he had offered a money payment in lieu of that service and that it was quite optional with him to do so. The Court decided the suit against the plaintiff. Held that the Court was not bound to take evidence as to the rate of rent to which the service ought to be commuted. RAJAH BALINDUR NARAIN BAHADOOR v. KALLA MESSOO KOOS, 18 W.R. 340.

(5)—Bias in a witness—When may be inferred.—Bias in a witness may be inferred from his being found to misstate facts, from his telling improbable stories, or showing malicious temper against one of the parties. RUN BAHADUR SINGH v. LUCHO KOER, 11 C. 301, P.C. =12 I.A. 23=4 Sar. 602. (On appeal from 6 C. 406.)

(6)—Witness— Credibility— Supporting false case in material features—Appeal—Setting up case inconsistent with that originally set up—Effect on case made by adversary.—Where certain witnesses not merely gave an opinion upon an isolated fact in a cause, but clearly showed that they had come to prove a false case—a case false in its material features much reliance could not be placed upon their evidence as to any particular question in the cause. Where in appeal, at the last stage of a case, a new case is set up by a party quite inconsistent with the case set up by him at any time in the cause, it could not be relied upon in so far as it affected the case made by the opposite party. KHAJAH HABEEB OOLLAH v. KHAJAH GOUHUR ALLY KHAN, 18 W.R. 523.

(7)— Evidence — Discrepancies.—If certain persons present at a particular conversation give different accounts of the exact words used, it does not follow that the Judge is justified in assuming that no such conversation took place at all. Different men have different powers of observation; the powers of memory differ widely in different persons and no two men repeating a conversation which took place some time previously (unless before coming into Court they have concerted together) are likely to repeat the conversation in the same words. The substance of what was said is all that is necessary. So, discrepancies in an account of what took place in a conversation are not a sufficient ground for disbelieving statements made by different witnesses. BHAJU SING v. KAIFNATH TEWARI, 3 B.L.R. A.C. 332.

(8)—Evidence—Professional witness—Credibility.—It is no doubt a legitimate objection to a man's credit that he is a professional witness; but to state broadly and generally that a witness has given evidence in other cases, and therefore becomes unworthy of credit, can only tend to increase that indisposition of respectable persons to come into Court as witnesses, which is one of the social evils of India. LALL BEHAREE LALL v. MUSSUMUT GOPEE BEEBEE, 18 W.R. 285, P.C.

(9)—Appreciation of oral evidence--Credibility of witness.—The fact, that the statement made by a witness of a party, does not correspond with the pleading of that party, is not a reason for not giving weight to the evidence of that witness. The real test is whether the evidence is worthy of credit and, if so, whether it substantially agrees with the case of that party and proves it. ISSUR CHUNDER SANTRA v. J.R. BELLILIOS, 22 W.R. 271.

(10)—Appreciation of evidence—Evidence of witness in favour of party calling him—No ground of disbelief.—To disbelieve a witness because his evidence tells in favour of the party who has called and examined him and against the adverse party is to beg the question in dispute. BAI GULABBAI v. SHRI DATGARJI, 9 Bom.L.R. 393.

(11)—Credibility of witnesses — Witness not shaken in cross-examination—Trial Judge satisfied with evidence—Evidence not to be rejected on suspicion.—Where witnesses, who cannot be regarded as independent witnesses, are not shaken in cross-examination and are believed by the Judge before whom they are examined as witnesses, their evidence should not be rejected on mere suspicion, especially where the story told by them is not in itself improbable. MUSST. MAQBOOLAN v. AHMED HUSAIN, 6 Bom.L.R. 233=26 A. 108=8 C.W.N. 241=31 I.A. 38=8 Sar. 583, P.C.

(12)—Weight of oral evidence—Opinion of first Court.—Evidence of witnesses who, though not independent, were not shaken in cross-examination, if believed in by the Court which heard them and watched their demeanour, should not be thrown out as worthless by the appellate Court on mere suspicion, when their statement is not in itself improbable. MUSSAMMAT MAQBOOLAN v. AHMED HUSAIN, 8 C.W.N. 241, P.C.=26 A. 108=6 Bom. L.R. 233, P.C.=31 I.A. 38=8 Sar. 583.

(13)—Appellate Court, examination of witness by—Value of such testimony.—Though the examination of a witness by appellate Courts is a proceeding which ought not to be taken except under special circumstances and, when doing so, it is most essential to the interests of justice that the Courts should state most fully and clearly the reasons which induced them to depart from the usual course of procedure and to call for fresh evidence in the appellate Court. still, it is not a condition precedent to the exercise of the power vested in appellate Courts to call fresh evidence, that reasons should be recorded; it is in point of law, sufficient if it appear that the appellate Court has considered the matter, and stated that these reasons did exist, without stating what they are. When a party is examined as a witness by the appellate Court, his testimony cannot be treated as conclusive on the point, as it is just as necessary to weigh the value of such testimony as that of any other witnesses in the case. SHIB CHUNDER MAHTOON v. KASHEENATH KURMOKAR, 12 W.R. 245.

conclusion on a question of fact, the lower appellate Court was held not entitled, unless there were very good reasons for so doing, to reverse the judgment, upon a mere question of testimony, on the ground that the reasons given by the Munsif did not satisfy the appellate Court. The High Court consequently remanded the case to the lower appellate Court for a fresh decision on the evidence, holding that the Judge's reasons were exceedingly inconclusive and unsatisfactory. NOBIN CHUNDER POOSHALEE v. BUNGO CHUNDER CHATTERJEE, 25 W.R. 363.

(15)—Credibility of witnesses—Decision of lower Courts not to be interfered with in special appeal.—The credibility of witnesses is a matter altogether for the Court of first instance and the Court which hears the regular appeal; and, where these Courts are satisfied, and especially when they are concurrently satisfied that the witnesses are not to be believed, it is not competent to the High Court to set aside their decision upon a question of fact even though upon a general view of the case, it should be of opinion that if it had tried the case originally, it might have come to a different conclusion to that arrived at by those Courts. GOUREE PERSHAD KOONDOO v. PRANNATH SURMAH, 10 W.R. 365.

(16)—Opinion about the credibility of witnesses, interference by the Privy Council with.—Their Lordships of the Privy Council did not conceive it to be any part of the duty to criticise with any strictness the opinion expressed by the lower Courts as to the credibility of witnesses; that being eminently a question for the Courts in India. MUSSAMMAT SAAFIQ-UN-NISSA v. RAJA SHABAN ALI KHAN, 6 Bom. L.R. 750=26 A. 581, P. C.=9 C.W.N. 105=7 O.C. 290=31 I.A. 217=8 Sar. 674.

(17)—Part of evidence disbelieved—Value of other evidence coming from him.—Though it is true that a Judge disbelieving a part of the evidence of a witness must view very warily other evidence coming from the same quarter, that does not exonerate the Court from weighing whatever evidence has actually been tendered and the mode in which it has been met. RAMESWAR KOER v. BHARAT PERSHAD SAHI, 4 C.W.N. 18, P.C.

(18)—Lower Appellate Court referring issue of fact to jury—Person convicted of perjury or other Criminal offence, credibility of.—The Civ. Pro. Code, nowhere empowers a Judge to try with the aid of a jury. The evidence of a person who has been punished for perjury, or of a person who has been convicted of a criminal offence, can hardly be entitled to the same credit as would be accorded to the testimony of a person against whom no such imputation could be brought. —8.—Weight to be attached to evidence —continued.

(19)—Civil suit—Rejection of evidence of witnesses on ground that they were declared untrustworthy by Criminal Court.—Held, that the Judge committed a manifest error of law in rejecting the evidence of three of the defendant's witnesses on the ground that these witnesses had already been examined in the Criminal Court with reference to the charge of breach of trust laid against the defendant (in respect of the money sued for) and had been found untrustworthy. LALL CHAND ROY v. BRINDABUN CHUNDER ROY, 13 W.R. 226.

(20) -Omission of plaintiff to produce important witness —Effect—Duty of Court.—Although a plaintiff must produce the best evidence in his power to prove his case, yet, the failure on his part to produce a most important witness must not prevent the Court from considering the weight and legal effect of the remaining witnesses. LATORE MISTREE v. AGAMUDDEE NUSHYO, 14 W.R. 482.

(21)—Procedure—Issues—Subject of issues—Motive for suit—Evidence.—It may be laid down as a general rule that only such averments should be made the subject of issues as are essential to support the cause of action and are denied by the defendant, or as are essential to support a plea and are denied by the plaintiff. Mere pieces of evidence which are to be adduced to enable the Court to infer the truth of a material averment ought not to be made the subject of separate issues. A plaintiff may have been actuated by ill-will in instituting the suit and may have done so out of pique; but if he establishes that he had a cause of action, his motive in bringing the suit would not be an answer to it, although, where the evidence in support of his case is doubtful, the Judge in weighing that evidence, may take into consideration the motives imputed to the plaintiff as having induced him to sue. BIRCH v. FURZIND, 3 N.W.P. 303.

(22)—Investigations in Revenue Courts—Procedure. — It was never intended that Revenue Courts should delegate their functions entirely to subordinate officers. The law contemplates a careful investigation and trial in the Revenue Court, local investigation being had recourse to not so much for collecting evidence which could be taken in Court, but to obtain the evidence which from its peculiar nature could only be obtained on the spot. —8.—Weight to be attached to evidence —concluded.

(24)—Suit for cancellation of mortgage-deed—Denial of attestation—Presumption as to execution.—The defendants were bound by the statements of the witnesses they had elected to put in the box, and they should not have been discredited simply because their evidence turned out unfavourable to the side on which they had been summoned. HARDIAL v. RAM DAS, A. W.N. 1884, 19.

(25)—Reg. VIII of 1819, s. 8, cl. 2—"Substantial witnesses," meaning of — Attestation—'Residing in the neighbourhood,' meaning of—Residents of village.—The expression 'substantial witnesses' in cl. 2, s. 8, Reg. VIII of 1819, means men who have some stake in the community, men of local influence or importance or respectability. The Regulation does not make it imperative that the attesting witnesses shall be residents of the village. The words "residing in the neighbourhood" include those living within a short distance of the cutcherry. MOHINEE DASEE v. JUGGODUMBA DOSSEE, W.R. 1864, 381.

(2)—Hearsay evidence — Evidence — Living witness — Information derived from deceased persons — Independent opinion on hearsay—Hearsay evidence.—It is admissible evidence for a living witness to state his opinion on the existence of a family custom and to state as the grounds of that opinion information derived from deceased persons and the weight of evidence will depend on the position and character of the witness and of the persons on whose statements he has formed his opinion; but it must be the expression of independent opinion based on hearsay and not mere repetition of hearsay. (3)—Recusant witnesses—Sale of property—Trial by Criminal Authorities.—The Court should proceed under s. 168 of Act VIII of 1859 for the attachment and sale of the property of recusant witnesses in order to realize such fine as the Court may have under that section imposed itself, and should also order those witnesses to be tried by the Criminal Authorities as

(4)—Application for examination by commission—Court to which it should be made.—An application to compel the attendance of a witness for examination by commission should be made to the Judge executing the commission, within whose jurisdiction, the witness is resident. TARINI CHARAN CHOWDHRY v. SARODA SUNDARI DASI, 3 B.L.R.A.C. 145=11 W.R. 468.

(5)—Statement made by witness when giving evidence in civil action—Privilege—Defamation.—A statement made by a witness, in his character as such, when giving evidence in a civil action, is a privileged one and cannot be made the basis of an action for damages for defamation. TULSI RAM v. HARBANS, A.W.N. 1885, 301.

(6)—Liability of, for giving false evidence.—The giving of false evidence, no matter how malicious and mala fide it may be, furnishes no right to sue in a civil Court, the only remedy being a prosecution for perjury. The mere fact that the giving of the false evidence is alleged to be the result of a conspiracy to obtain the conviction of a person of a criminal offence does not make any difference. TEMPLETON v. LAURIE, 2 Bom. L.R. 623=25 B. 230.

(7)—Prosecution of, after he has given his evidence to a certain extent—A witness, after he has given his evidence to a certain extent, cannot be made an accused and tried along with the other accused, though his name might have been mentioned in the original complaint by the Magistrate. A procedure like this is highly calculated to intimidate other witnesses. EMPEROR v. KRISHNA, 7 Bom. L.R. 472.

(8)—False evidence—Witness, liability of, for giving false evidence—Personal rights, infringement of—False evidence, giving of, not actionable—Civil Procedure Code, s. 16—Jurisdiction—Costs, costs in the cause, meaning of.—No action for damages will lie against a witness in respect of words spoken by him in the witness-box although they are false. The word "wrong" in s. 16 of the Code of Civil Procedure, means an actionable wrong; and the giving of false evidence is not an actionable wrong. Where, therefore, the only act done by the defendants within the original jurisdiction of the High Court was the giving of false and malicious evidence to the peril and prejudice of the plaintiff, pursuant to a conspiracy formed in a Native State, it was held that a suit for the injury caused in consequence of giving false evidence could not be instituted in the High Court as no cause of action arose within its jurisdiction. Held, also, that causing a person to be falsely charged with a criminal offence, to the knowledge of the person so causing him to be charged, is an infringement of the personal right of reputation and freedom of that person, and renders the person so causing civilly liable to him. Any invasion of the civil rights of another person is in itself a legal wrong carrying with it liability to repair its necessary or natural consequences in so far as these are injurious to the persons whose right is infringed whether the motive which prompted it be good, bad or indifferent. Held, also, that where one person has infringed the personal rights of another, other persons who combine with him towards such infringement will also be held liable. Held, further, that "costs, costs in the cause" do not mean that costs will follow the event, but that those costs remain to be dealt with by the Court at the hearing. Working for Gain.

(1)—Jurisdiction of Court, defendant 'working for gain within—Meaning of.—Unless the defendant either lived or worked for gain within the limits of a Court, that Court could not have jurisdiction. In this case the defendant admittedly lived at a place outside those limits and there was no record to the effect that he worked for gain within such limits. It was contended that the defendant did work for gain within such limits because he had contracted with Government to supply Kunker within such limits but it was held that it was quite possible that he may have contracts with Government for kunkers and yet not bring the kunkers himself within the limits in such a way as to be said to work for gain within the limits. Worship.

(1)—Places of worship—Right to erect.—In India, the members of a sect are at liberty to erect a place of worship on their own property, although it is more or less contiguous to a place already occupied by a place of worship appertaining to another sect. The people of any sect are at liberty to erect, on their own property, places of worship, either public or private, and to perform worship, provided that in the performance of their worship, they do not cause material annoyance to their neighbours. MADARY v. GOBURDHUN HULWAI, 7 C. 694=9 C.L.R. 303. (2 M. 143, F.)

(2)—Rights of rival sects.—Persons of all sects are at liberty to erect buildings and conduct public worship on their own land, provided they neither invade the rights of property enjoyed by others, nor cause a public nuisance. They are also entitled to conduct religious processions through public streets without interfering with the ordinary use of such streets by the public subject to any lawful directions

(3)—Right to worship an idol, not an interest in immoveable property.—The right of worshipping an idol is not in the nature of an "interest in immoveable property." ESHAN CHUNDER ROY v. MONMOHINI DASSI, 4 C. 683.

(4)—Right to worship outside temple—Usage.—Where worship is offered at places other than the temple, it should not be inferred, without distinct evidence of circumstances necessarily leading to the conclusion, that any right exists to offer it at the particular place. The mere fact that a person has offered worship at a particular place for a number of years would not necessarily give him a right to do so. Mamool or usage should be examined to determine whether any special right of worship exists. Courts should be slow to recognise, without proper evidence, claims of right which would materially interfere with the right of the trustees to regulate the worship and ceremonial of temples in the interest of the whole community. Held in this case that plaintiff failed to establish that he used to offer worship in front of his house as a matter of right. (5)—Mahomedan right of worship—Right to offer prayers—Right to recite Koran.—Every Mahomedan worshipper has the right to offer prayers and to recite the Koran as a part of his right of worship in the mosque. There is nothing to prevent a worshipper from receiving at the mosque money offered to him there by others or to distribute sweetmeats. But no worshipper can claim to use the mosque as of right for such purposes. MUTHALA KANDI KATTURI KOYA MULLA v. ABU BAKER, M.W.N. 1912, 1059.

(2)—Act VIII of 1859, ss. 26, 29—Plaint prolix or argumentative, to be rejected by Court or returned for amendment.—The plaint in this case had been drawn in contravention of the directions of the Civ. Pro. Code, and was most unnecessarily prolix, argumentative and full of matter wholly irrelevant. The first paragraph of the plaint was to the following effect:—"Suit for setting aside a fraudulent and fabricated deed of sale and for causing the defendant to be tried for forgery." The whole plaint was mere argument such as could be inadmissible even in a written statement in which usually more latitude is allowed than in a plaint. The High Court held that the plaint ought to have been rejected or to have been returned that it might be amended by striking out the reference to criminal proceedings and other unnecessary matters. BISHEN SAHAYE SINGH v. BEER KISHORE SINGH, 8 W.R. 295.

(3)—Written statement—Irrelevant matter.—Where matters irrelevant and improper were found in the written statement, the Court ordered it to be taken off the file with leave to file a fresh one. KASUBLAL DAY v. C. E. TRENEARNE, 3 B L.R. App. 12.

(4)—Civ. Pro. Code, s. 124—Written statement—Relevancy—Tender — Objection—Jurisdiction.—The filing of a written statement does not necessarily make it a part of the record, but it is merely for the purpose of notice to the plaintiff of the nature of the defence. The production of the written statement at the trial is the "tendering" contemplated by the Code, and if not then objected to, the written statement becomes part of the record. A Court has power to reject a written statement which contains irrelevant matter or scandalous or improper matter. In considering the relevancy of a written statement, the question is not whether it discloses a good defence to the action, but whether the facts stated therein are such as the defendant believed to be material to his case. KESHAVJI NAIK v. NASARVANJI ARDESIRWADIA, 10 B. H.C. 425.

(5)—Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 19—Act VIII of 1859, s. 120—Written statement—Court-fee.—A written statement filed by a defendant in a Civil suit at the first hearing does not, under the existing law, require a Courtfee stamp. The mere words "petitions or applications" will not include written statements filed in Civil Courts. The levy of a Court-fee on written statements was in 1870, effected only by the express provisions of s. 120 of Act VIII of 1859. This provision has been repealed by the Civ. Pro. Code, Act X of 1877. In re CHERAG ALI v. KADIR MAHOMED, 12 C.L.R. 367. (5 B. 400, F.)

(6)—Court-fees.—A written statement, either put in by the party at or before the first hearing or called for by the Court thereafter, is not liable to any Court-fee and may be written on plain paper. (8)—Set off—Containing a claim of set-off.—Where a claim of set off was asserted by the defendant in his written statement, but no issue on the point was raised ; no pronouncement on it was made by the first Court ; it was not made in appeal, the subject of cross-objections nor was it urged in argument before the appellate Court; the Court of appeal being of opinion that it formed an integral part of the suit, framed appropriate issues and sent the case back to the first Court for trial upon them, with a view to determining the validity of the defendant's claim for set off. THE AHMEDABAD A S. & CO. v. LAKSHMISANKAR, 6 Bom. L.R. 790.

(9)—Written statement — Not verified. — Where a written statement has been put in without the verification of the defendant and the same is allowed to be on the record, it is the business of the Court to take notice of the allegations which it contains and frame issues accordingly. RADHA CHURN ROY v. MORAN & CO., 13 W.R. 342.

(10)—Provisions in Civ. Pro.Code, relating to verification of written statements, nature of—Observance might be waived by plaintiffs.—The provision in the Code, relating to verification of written statements, being intended for the protection of the plaintiffs, their observance might be waived by the plaintiffs and if, therefore, the plaintiffs are prepared to waive all objections to the sufficiency of verification of the written statements, further evidence of the nature indicated may be dispensed with. SREENATH BANERJEE v. EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY, 22 C. 268.

(11)—Act X of 1859, *s.*59—Verification of written statements—Dismissal of appeal.—S.59, Act X of 1859, is silent on the subject of verification of written statements. A plaintiff is required to verify his plaint and the parties are to be examined on oath, and, at the time of his examination, the defendant is permitted to file a written statement, but the law does not require it to be verified. When the first Court goes into the merits of the case irrespective of the omission to verify the written statement, it is not competent to the Judge on appeal to make such an omission a ground for throwing out the appeal. G. CLARKE v. SREENAUTH SINGH, 1 W.R. 132.

(12)—False verification of written statement —Civ. Pro. Code, s. 115— False evidence—Indian Penal Code, s. 191.—A person filing a written statement in a suit is bound by law to state the truth, and if he makes a statement, which is false to his knowledge or belief, or which he believes not to be true, he is guilty of giving false evidence within the meaning of s. 191 of the Indian Penal Code. (17)—Written statement—Third party filing and verifying written statement on behalf of plaintiff—Civ. Pro. Code, 1859, ss. 28, 123.—The plaintiff in a suit went on a pilgrimage after he had been ordered to file a written statement, but without having filed it. Not having returned when the case was on the board, his son applied, under ss. 28 and 123 of Act VIII of 1859, for leave to verify and file a statement, alleging himself to be interested as a reversioner. The application was refused. Held that a third party will not be allowed to verify and file a written statement for a plaintiff who has culpably neglected to file one himself. DENOMOYE DOSSEE v. (28)—Amendment—Written statement — Inconsistent defences—Application for amendment, when disallowed.—It is open to a defendant to include two inconsistent defences in the alternative in his original written statement. (4 C.L.J. 437, 34 C. 54, R.) An application to include in the written statement a defence inconsistent with the defence originally taken, is not bad. Whether an application to include in the written statement a defence inconsistent with the defence originally taken, is to be granted or not, depends upon whether the application is made in good faith and whether the application is made at such a stage of the case that, if the prayer be granted, the plaintiff may be injured in consequence of the defendant's raising without notice a totally different and inconsistent case which the plaintiff has not sufficient opportunity to meet. (29) — Written statement — Admission.—A brought a suit against B to recover ancestral jummai lands, of which he alleged that he had been dispossessed by B. B, in his written statement, stated that A's ancestor having relinquished the land, the Zemindar had leased the same to him, B, and he had been in possession ever since. He also stated how A's ancestor relinquished, and that he, B, had thereupon obtained a potta. He denied that he had dispossessed. Held, that B having admitted the possession of A's ancestor, it lay on B to prove his title. Per Macpherson, J.:—The opinion of the Full Bench in case No. 76 of 1867, 31st January 1868, was that if a party makes a qualified statement, that statement cannot be used against him apart from the qualification; not that if a man makes a series of independent unqualified statements, those statements cannot be used against him. That case goes no further than to lay down that an unfair use is not to be made of a man's written statement, by trying to convert into an admission by him that which he never intended to be an admission. (2)—Act X of 1859, ss. 138, 142—Vexatious distraint— Suit for damages. — Where the plaintiff sues for damages done to his crop while it was under distraint at the suit of the defendant, such distraint having been previously declared by a decision of the Deputy Collector to have been illegal, damages might be awarded under s. 142 of Act X of 1859. In such a case, the Judge should not award damages for vexatious distraint, the time to award damages for such injury being under s. 138, Act X when the Deputy Collector directs the release of the distrained property. NONKOO RAM v. WOOJOGHUR ROY, 5 W.R. Act X, Rul. 68.

(3)—Act X of 1859, s. 109—Money decree for damages for illegal distraint—Execution against moveable property—Suit for declaratory decree against immoveable property, not maintainable in Civil Court.—The special appellant who had obtained a decree for the recovery of damages on account of injury caused by the illegal sale of his property under the distraint law in the Deputy Collector's Court, sued out execution against the moveable property of his judgment-debtors and had exhausted it, the decree, however, remaining unsatisfied. He then instituted the present suit in the Civil Court to obtain a declaratory decree that the immoveable property of his judgment-debtor was liable for the satisfaction of his decree. The Judge refused to entertain the suit, and the High Court agreed with him holding that the special appellant had his remedy under s. 109 of Act X of 1859 and could apply to the Collector for execution of his decree, which was passed after Act X came into operation, against the immoveable property belonging to his judgment-debtor. There is nothing in the provisions of Act X rendering them inapplicable to suits instituted before but decided after it came into operation. JADUR PAUL POTEDAR v. RADHA LAL CHATTERJEE, 6 W.R. Act X, Rul. 67.

(4)—Execution by putneedars of decree for possession—Delivery of nominal possession—

Putneedars carrying away crops of ryots—Abuse of law of distraint—Liability for damages.—Certain putneedars obtained a decree for khas possession and, in execution of decree, were put into nominal possession of the lands in suit. Instead of ousting the ryots in due course of law, they stood by and allowed the ryots to cultivate the lands, and then distrained the crops so cultivated and grown, and cut and carried them away. Hence this suit by the ryots for damages. Held, that the act of the putneedars was an abuse of the law of distraint and they were therefore liable for damages. ADOR MOHUN CHUCKERBUTTY v. THAKOOR MONEE DABEE, 10 W.R. 70.

(5)—Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869—Distraint—Suit to contest demand—Damages for informal distraint.—If a ryot institutes a suit to contest the demand of a distrainer, the Court has no option, but must adjudicate upon the demand. If, on the other hand, the distrainer has distrained "otherwise than according to the provisions of the Rent Act," he has done so at his peril, and renders himself liable to an action for damages by the owner of the distrained property. TARINEE KANT LAHIREE CHOWDHRY v. RAJ KISHORE TONTRY, 24 W.R. 334.

(6)— Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869, s. 101—Wrongful distraint—Procedure.—A Munsif before whom proceedings are taken under Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869, s. 101, is bound first to inquire whether an offence has been committed, and if he is satisfied that it has been committed, the only order he can make against the offenders (not being tenants) is that they shall pay the value of the crops distrained. PREM CHAND LAHA v. ADDOITO DOSS, 20 W. R. 445.

(7)—Wrongful distraint — Title to crops established by decree—Suit for value of crops.—Where crops growing on the land belonging to the plaintiff had been wrongfully distrained by the defendant, and the plaintiff's title to such crops had been established by a decree of a competent Court, a subsequent suit for the value of crops lost to the plaintiff cannot be affected by any litigation regarding the proprietary title to the land on which the crops grew. RUSHEEK MOHUN BANERJEE v. GOPAL DOSS, 1 W.R. 89.

(8)—Illegal distraint—Effect on rent—Illegal distraint of crops affects the zemindar's title to rent. RAM DYAL SINGH v. LUCHMEE NARAIN SINGH, 1 W.R. 240.

(9)—Wrongful distraint of crops—Suit for damages — Jurisdiction — Revenue Court.—Hearing the plaint and reading the judgment in the case, the High Court found that the suit in question had been brought to recover damages for an illegal distraint of the crops of the plaintiff and it was of opinion that such a suit had been properly brought in the Revenue Courts. SHUMBOONATH BANERJEE v. TARINEE CHURN BOSE, 6 W.R. Act X, Rul. 33.

(10)—Act X of 1859, s. 143—Wrongful distraint of crops—Jurisdiction of Collector's Court.—S. 143, Act X of 1859, contemplates the case, not only of a person who purposes to follow its provisions, though he has no power to distrain, but also of a person who distrains under colour of the Act, but not according to its provisions. RADHA MOHAN NASKAR v. JADU NATH DAS, 3 B L.R.A.C. 261=12 W.R. 68.

(11)—Jurisdiction — Wrongful distraint—Damages—Act X of 1859, s. 143.—A suit to recover damages from certain parties who had distrained plaintiff's crops on the allegation that they were respectively izaradar, dur-izaradar, and gomashta, though not really clothed with those capacities, was held to come within the terms of s. 143, Act X of 1859, and to be cognizable by a Revenue Court, the Civil Court having no jurisdiction. RAM CHANDRA CHOWDHRY v. SUBAL PATRO, 3 B.L.R. App. 74=11 W.R. 539. (9 W.R. 162, F.)

(12)—Demand of distrainer, suit to contest—Onus of proof on landlord and tenant—Damages for illegal distraint, burden on tenant to prove actual loss.—This was an action to contest the right of the defendant to distrain certain crops belonging to the plaintiff. The prayer in the suit was to obtain the release of the property distrained, and to recover damages for injuries wantonly done thereto. The landlord, it was held was in such a case to be required only to prove that the plaintiff was his tenant, and that he was liable to pay at the rate specified. If, after the landlord had succeeded in proving these facts, the tenant wanted to get rid of the claim by pleading payment, and the payment was denied, the tenant would have to prove his allegation. On the question of damages, the High Court observed that no enquiry had been made into the extent of the injury alleged to have been done to the crops distrained, the only ground upon which the claim for damages was based in the original plaint; nor did it appear on what date the lower Courts had calculated the amount of damages awarded by them. Being of opinion that before the tenant can obtain any decree for damages on account of the illegalities set forth by him, he must prove what loss he has actually "sustained thereby" (s. 142 of Act X of 1859), the High Court remanded the case to the lower appellate Court directing the necessary trial. OOJAN DEWAN v. PRANNATH MUNDUL, 8 W.R. 219.

(13)—Act X of 1859, s. 143—Distraint—Suit for damages—Jurisdiction.—The provisions of s. 143 of Act X of 1859 will not apply, where the distrainer does not profess to have been empowered by the superior holder to distrain, but the acts of the distrainer, if wrongful, are the acts of a trespasser, for which he may be liable for damages in a suit in the Civil Court. If the distrainer is the agent of a person between whom and the defaulting tenant the relation of landlord and tenant does not subsist, Act X of 1859 will not apply and a suit for damages must be brought in a Civil Court. SHAIKH ROWSHUN v. BHOLANATH DOSS, 5 W.R. Act X, Rul., 67.

Wrongful Distraint—concluded.

(14)—Act X of 1859, s. 143—Distress—Justification—Trespasser.—In order to maintain a suit under s. 143 of Act X of 1859, the plaintiff must prove that the defendant, in making the distress, was acting, not only without right, but without anything to justify him in supposing that he had a right to distrain. The plaintiff must establish distinctly that the defendant distrained when he was a mere trespasser, and when there was no reasonable foundation whatever for the allegation that he was entitled to the rent which he claimed in respect of the land. The mere fact that the defendant had no legal right to make the distress will not be sufficient. RAYEE KUMUL DOSSEE v. JHOROO MOLLAH, 15 W.R. 543.

(1)—Person long out of possession — Extinguishment of right — Subsequent wrongful possession.—If a person is out of possession of lands for a period of 15 or 16 years, his title in them is extinguished, and no new right or cause of action can accrue to him by reason of his wrongful possession since that date. KRISTO GOPAL ROY v. ROODRO CHUNDER ROY, 25 W. R. 131.

(2)—Act IX of 1871—Wrongful possession for 12 years—Limitation.—There is nothing in Act IX of 1871 which warrants the making of a decree in favour of parties on the strength of a wrongful possession for more than 12 years. NUGENDRO NATH MULLICK v. TRIPOORA CHURN BOSE, 24 W.R. 217.

(3)—Wrongful possession, right to recover money paid during—Limitation.—Although a person might have supposed that he was the lawful owner of the property, yet where he was really, in the eye of the law, a trespasser and wrong-doer in holding possession of it against the true owner, whatever sums he might have paid in respect of the property while in such possession, were paid in his own wrong and he cannot recover such sums from the true owner, on the ground that they enured for the latter's benefit. The practice of calling for alternative votes should not be resorted to. NARAIN SINGH v. HIRA SINGH, 6 P.R. 1885, Rev.

(2)—Appointment—Principles—Tribal representation.—The object of appointing a Zaildar by election or selection is to secure tribal representation. It is not determined by the results of the election alone but by the combined results of the votes of the headmen of the circle, the personal fitness of the candidate and the service rendered by him to the state. ALI MUHAMMAD v. BURA MAL, 13 P.R. 1885, Rev.

(3) — Succession — Selection -- Grounds — Minority.—The office of zaildar is not hereditary and the holder of the office should be able to perform the office duties himself and not by a deputy. Thus personal fitness is one of the essentials for the appointment, and hence a minor is not eligible for the same. FATAH DARYA v. HUSAIN SHAH, 1 P.R. 1886, Rev. [F., 7 P.R. 1891, Rev.]

(4)—Appointment - Grounds.—A large preponderance in the number and weight of votes secured by a candidate, the greater fitness for the post and having a larger stake in the zail are all grounds for preferring a candidate for the post. SABHA CHAND v. SADHA RAM, 4 P.R. 1886, Rev. (8 P.R. 1880, Rev., R.)

(5)—Appointment — Removal — Grounds—Succession— Principles.—A Zaildar if once appointed can only be removed for misconduct or neglect of duties. Old age or inability is no ground for removal. The rules governing the appointment of lambardars will be applied to that of zaildars also. ANOKH SINGH v. SANT SINGH, 13 P.R. 1886, Rev.

(6) —Appointment — Rules.— Men who by character and influence are not fitted to discharge the duties of a zaildar and those who are believed to have acquired votes in an improper manner should be excluded from appointment. Though there is no special rule that a zaildar should reside in his own circle or own land in it, it is the intention of the Government that the zaildars should be selected from the landowners of the zail. Selection to the post of zaildar should ordinarily be made from the lambardars of the circle though under exceptional circumstances a landowner, though not a lambardar may be appointed as a zaildar. SHER SINGH v. CHANDA SINGH, 15 P.R. 1886, Rev.

(7)—Pleader whether qualified to be Zaildar.—The Second Financial Commissioner held in this case that a pleader ought not to be allowed to be a zaildar as both duties cannot be satisfactorily discharged by the same person, having regard to administrative convenience. GHULAM NIAZ KHAN v. ACHAL SINGH, 3 P.R. 1887, Rev.

(8)—Hereditary claims—Recognition of.—The relationship of the claimant for the office of zaildar to the former zaildar is neither a qualification nor a disqualification. If the man elected as having strongest claims on the recognised grounds is also the son of the former aildar, a Collector might fairly feel confirmed and supported in his choice. The dictum that appointments should as far as possible not be of a hereditary character disapproved. ATAR SINGH v. (9)—Zaildar —Appointment of— Hereditary claims.—It among the claimants to the Office of a Zaildar there is a son of the deceased who has the strongest claim on the recognised grounds, he should not be disqualified on account of his relationship. (11)—Zaildari appeals. — Zaildari appeals must not be encouraged and the Deputy Commissioner's order must if possible be upheld. SANDHI v. BUDEN CHAND, 5 P.R. 1890, Rev. [R., 3 P.R. 1892, Rev.]

Zaildari.

(1)—Claim of a candidate of the prevailing tribe in a zail—Superior right.—Held that a person who belongs to a prevailing tribe in a zail and is also otherwise fit to act as a zaildar should be given preference over other candidates for the post. JAFAR KHAN v. RAJA AZIMULLAH KHAN, 2 P. W. R. 1907, Rev. = 43 P L.R. 1908.

(2)—Zaildari—Punjab Land Revenue Act (XVII of 1887), s. 28—Rule 166 relating to zaildari—Appointment of an unqualified candidate as zaildar not allowed.—Held, that no person is eligible for appointment as a zaildar unless he is a qualified candidate under Rule 166, before the appointment is made by the Collector. SARDAR KHAN v. BAHADUR KHAN, 3 P.W.R. 1907, Rev.

(3)—Zaildari- Qualifications of the candidate —To remove disqualification or to acquire qualification—Deputy Commissioner's order not to be reversed without very strong grounds.—Appeals in Zaildari cases should not be encouraged and the orders of the Deputy Commissioner in all cases, if possible, should be upheld (6. P. R. 1887 Rev. 5 P.R. 1890 Rev. 3 P. R. 1892 Rev. F.). In zaildari cases, as in Lambardari cases, resort to special arrangement to remove disqualification or to acquire qualification is unobjectionable. For instance, in order to be eligible, a candidate for zaildarship may induce a lambardar to resign the lambardari in his favor. (14 P.R. 1881, Rev. 3 P. R. 1903, Rev. R.) The position of an Inamdar is superior to that of a mere lambardar and the Deputy Commissioner's recommendation for the candidature of the former cannot be rejected without very strong grounds. In making such an appointment, previous good public services of the candidate and the fact of his discharging the duties satisfactorily when acting as Sarbarah of the late zaildar deserve special consideration. Zamindar.

See HINDU LAW—IMPARTIBLE ESTATE.

See IMPARTIBLE ESTATE.

(1)—Right of zamindar to grant tenancies.—A Zamindar can grant a tenancy to A over the head of B without interfering with the previously acquired legal rights of B. MOHUN CHUNDER DUTT v. FUKEER CHUND DEB, 6 W. R. 122.

(2)—Rights of zamindar and sir-holder distinguished.—The rights of a sharer in a zamindari, qua zamindar, are to receive his share of the rents paid by the cultivators and of the miscellaneous profits of the estate. The rights of a sir-holder, qua sir-holder, are to be allowed to cultivate, or to cause to be cultivated by others the sir-land subject to the taking into account as against himself in some form or other, at the divisions among the sharers of the profits of the estate, of the rent which is, or which might be, assessed upon the holding. And, although it is true that among the miscellaneous profits of a sharer in a zamindari is included the privilege of holding sir-land, rent free, or at a nominal or a favourable rent, yet, when the area of the land as to which this privilege runs is, as it is in the present case, a fixed area, the right is a specific right, as to the mode of enjoyment of which, so long as his status of zamindar subsists, the sharer may act in the way which he thinks best conducive to his own interests. In other words, so long as his status of zamindar subsists, and the area of his sir-land is defined, a sir-holder has certain rights, qua sir-holder, which are separate and distinct from those which he has qua zamindar. And such rights are capable of assignment without the interests of his other co-sharers being affected by the transfer; for the sharer who assigns his rights as a sir-holder will, in the division of the profits of the zamindari, have set down against him in the accounts the quota of rent, if any, assessed upon the sir-land, or if no rent is assessed upon the sir-land the value of the rent-free tenure. (3)—Zemindar's customary right to portion of sale proceeds—Involuntary sale—Sale proceeds received by judgment-creditor—Right of zemindar to sue for his share—Act IV of 1846, *s.*10—Object of.—Where the zemindar's customary right to one-fourth of the proceeds of sale exists in cases of involuntary sale in execution of a decree, the zemindar can assert it against the judgment-creditor who has received the whole of the proceeds of sale. His right arises upon the sale and it is a right to a portion of the sale-proceeds as a fine or fee on every change in the ownership of the property. His right attaches to the sale-proceeds and is a prior charge upon the proceeds and he may sue to recover his dues from the judgment-creditor. The object of s. 10, Act IV of 1846, was to provide that sales in execution had not the effect of sales for arrears of revenue, but only of private sales. BYJ NATH PERSHAD v. MAHOMED FUZL HOSSEIN, 2 Agra 404.

(4)—Zemindars, rights of—Huq chaharum—Conditional sales.—The Huq chaharum rights of a zemindar, namely, the right to the customary due of ¼ of the sale-proceeds, is payable not only upon ordinary sales, but also upon conditional sales, which have subsequently become by foreclosure absolute. The zemindar is entitled to recover this amount not only against the vendor, but also against the conditional purchaser, as it is incumbent on the purchaser, if he would acquit himself of all liability, to see that the zemindar is satisfied in respect of his due, and as the payment to the vendor does not discharge him. (5)—Act XVI of 1842, scope of—Lease of land for planting garden—Lessee building on leased land—Suit to eject lessee.—The power to lease, and the restrictions imposed on it, were intended to promote and to protect the just rights and interests both of the proprietor and of the Government who received the revenue payable by him. If, on the renewal of a settlement, no cause appeared for disturbing any just arrangement already existing between the proprietor and a lessee, and both parties continued to act upon the provisions of the previously existing lease, the law did not apparently contemplate nor require that they should contract anew, as if strangers to each other. A lease granted by a Zemindar for a period exceeding the term of his own engagement with Government is voidable at his option, but is not absolutely null and void. Semble, that Act XVI of 1842 applied to agricultural leases, not to bona fide leases for other purposes. NITA RAM v. NANUCK DASS, 1 N.W.P. 103.

(6)—Disputes in respect of boundary—Title—Power of Zemindars to alter boundaries.—When litigants claim as strangers, and the question resolves itself into a boundary dispute, the title of the plaintiff is not, except under very peculiar circumstances, open to attack. But, where the plaintiff sues for possession of property in the defendant's hands, not as forming part of another estate, but as having right thereto under a superior title, then the defendant has a right to call the plaintiff's title in question. Zemindars have no authority, without the sanction of Government, to alter the boundaries of their permanently settled estates, and to transfer villages from one zemindaree to another. Such an arrangement is of no binding effect, except between the parties who have made it. RAMCHUNDER BANERJEE v. MUDDUNMOHUN TEWAREE, W. R. 1864, 355.

(7)—Decree for possession obtained by zemindar as such, whether could be pledged as security for zemindar's personal debt—Estate or succeeding zemindar not liable for such debt.—Where a zemindar had, as such, obtained a decree for possession of certain land with wassilat, it was held that it was not competent to him to pledge such decree for a debt personal to him, and the estate could not be made liable for the debt. (10)—Liability of zemindar to preserve his irrigation tanks—His liability to damages caused by breaches in bunds of tanks—Vis Major—Statutory rights and duties—Negligence—Right and duty of Zemindar to maintain irrigation tanks—Ancient tanks.—The Madras Railway Company sued the zemindar of Carvetnagaram for damages on account of injuries occasioned to their railway and works by the bursting of two tanks upon his land. The defendant contended, inter alia, that the injuries were the result not of any negligence of his, but of vis major or the act of God. He further contended that he was legally entitled and bound to store in his tank for purposes of irrigation and that he was storing water therein. The first two Courts held that the defendant was not guilty of negligence and that he was not liable for damages in the absence of negligence. Before the Privy Council, it was contended for the plaintiff that the defendant, by storing up water on his land, rendered himself liable in damages should it escape and do injury to other persons, even though he might not have been guilty of negligence. Held that the defendant was not liable. The rights and liabilities of the defendant with regard to the tank were analogous to those of persons or corporations on whom statutory powers have been conferred and statutory duties imposed. The duty of the defendant to maintain the tank was a duty of very much the same description as that of the Railway Company to maintain their railway. If the banks of his tank were washed away by any extraordinary flood without negligence on his part, he was no more liable for damage caused thereby than they would be for damages to a passenger on their line, or to the lands of an adjoining proprietor occasioned by the banks of the railway being washed away under similar circumstances. The public duty of maintaining existing tanks, and of constructing new ones in many places, was originally undertaken by the Government of India, and, upon the settlement of the country, has, in many instances, devolved on zemindars. The zemindars have no power to do away with these tanks, in the maintenance of which large numbers of people are interested, but are charged under Indian law, by reason of their tenure, with the duty of preserving and repairing them. (12)—Act VIII (B.C.) of 1862, liability of putneedars to pay zemindari dak charges not affected by.—The question in this case was, whether the zemindar was entitled to re imburse himself from the putneedar for the dak charges imposed upon him by Bengal Act VIII of 1862. It was held that the Act did not relieve the putneedars from liability to the usual payment of dak charges under the old laws. Act VIII of 1862 was not intended to impose a new tax, but to consolidate and regulate an old liability. Primarily the zemindars are in all cases liable to Government; but it was not designed to alter any right of the zemindar to re-imburse himself from under-holders. BISSONATH SIRCAR v. Admitting the putnee lease, the defendant contended that he was not bound by the terms of his lease to pay the sum demanded by the plaintiff. Held that the terms of the lease in question did not make the lessee liable to the burden of paying a tax which was leviable from the zemindar under the provisions of Act VIII of 1862; and no incidence could be annexed to written contracts in matters with respect to which they are silent. (16)—Zemindars of Central Provinces, status of—British subjects with delegated judicial and Police powers not feudatory chiefs—Resumption of Police and excise functions—Abolition of private pounds—Suit by Zemindars in Civil Court, questioning legality—Executive acts—Zemindars, removal of, forfeiture of their privileges, discontinuance of nazarana, provisions as to, in wajib-ul-arz, if legal—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts.—In 1864, when certain petty chiefs of the Central Provinces were declared to be feudatory chiefs and the rest were classed as non-feudatories and declared to be ordinary British subjects, certain judicial and administrative powers were entrusted to the latter or left in their hands as a matter of convenience or economy of administration. These Zemindars in exercising Police and Excise functions were not acting as of right but were so acting either by sufferance or by delegation. The resumption of these functions by the Government was a thing done by the Government in exercise of sovereign powers, and no action was maintainable in a Civil Court in regard to such resumption. The maintenance of private cattle-pounds is incompatible with the provisions of the Cattle Trespass Act, and the establishment and maintenance of cattle-pounds under the superintendence and control of Government officials empowered to obtain the assistance of the Police when required, may be considered essential for the maintenance of law and order and the peace and good Government of the country, and therefore an act of the Executive Government with which it is not competent for the Civil Court to interfere. Where such non-feudatory zemindars accepted a fresh assessment of the takoli or revenue payable by them to Government under s. 54 of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act (XVIII of 1881) for 11 years from 1st July 1890 to 30th June 1901 or until a fresh settlement was made, and agreed to be bound by all the conditions of the wajib-ul-arz of their zamindari as laid down by Government ; and at the new settlement of May 1903, the zemindars were required to execute wajib-ul-arzes, which, amongst other things, provided for the resumption of the Police and Excise administration and cattle-pounds by Government, and also provided for the removal of zemindars and forfeiture of their privileges and the discontinuance of nazarana on grant or renewal of leases, and the zemindars executed the wajib-ul-arzes as required but under protest. Held, that the resumption of the Police and Excise administration and of cattle-pounds by Government could not be questioned by Civil Courts, but the District Judge's decree cancelling the clauses relating to the removal of the zemindars and the forfeiture of privileges as also concerning the discontinuance of nazarana on the grant or renewal of leases was proper BIR BIKRAM DEO v. (18)—Zemindar — Under-tenant — Reception of evidence.—The Zemindar of Jeypore sued the holder of certain taluks, forming portion of a pergunnah attached to the zemindary, for increased rent, in lieu of discontinued service of keeping up armed men ; the holder set up original possession of the whole zemindary and subsequent transfer of the same, with the exception of the disputed taluks. Held, confirming decisions of Courts below, that the appellant (defendant) had failed to discharge the onus which lay upon him, starting with the incontrovertible fact that the permanent settlement, effected with the grandfather of the respondent (plaintiff), clearly showed that the assessment was charged on the zemindary including the pergunnah of which the disputed taluks formed a part : and that, as to the reception of evidence, it would be mischievous to allow the objection against certain accounts, when such objection had not been taken in the Courts below. A statute restricting Courts of justice from hearing and determining suits upon certain contracts not entered into without the consent of Government, and not registered in a particular manner, does not render those contracts illegal, and therefore when that statute has been repealed, such contracts may be enforced in Courts of justice, although entered into whilst the statute was in force. (1)—Zanzibar—Law in Zanzibar territory—Ex-territorial rights of British subject—Zanzibar Order in Council, 1884—Treaty of 1886—Landholder's rights governed by local Law—Indian Land Acquisition Act, 1894, ss. 6, 9, 18, 24—Valuation of plots of land acquired for railway purposes.—The Administration of the East Africa Protectorate, acting under the Indian Land Acquisition Act I of 1894, for the purposes of a railway at Mombasa, acquired plots of land on the island from owners to whom compensation was awarded. Possession was taken before the land had been duly acquired under the Act, and building for the railway purposes went forward without the consent of the present claimants. The provisions of the Indian Land Acquisition Act, became applicable at Mombasa on the 27th May, 1896, under power given by the Zanzibar Order in Council of 1884. The declaration of requirement of the land was made on the 2nd November following. The assessment of the value of the land acquired was made by a Court held by the Vice-Consul at Mombasa, and heard in appeal by Her Majesty's Court for Zanzibar, which increased the compensation awarded. Held, as to the value of the land, that the claimants were entitled, as the Act declared (ss. 23 and 24), to obtain as compensation the market value at the date of the above declaration of requirement including such advance in value as had then taken place. Any rise in value afterwards likely to accrue from the use to which the land was intended to be put was expressly excluded from consideration in determining the value by s. 24. The valuation of the Vice-Consul was more consonant to the evidence and was based on sounder principles than that of the Court for Zanzibar, which had given misleading importance to sales of small building plots close to Mombasa, and had attached importance to potential values to come; and these had been sources of error. As part of their compensation the respondents claimed the value of the buildings erected on the land before the date of the declaration, alleging that the buildings had, as soon as they were attached to the land, become the property of the then owners of the land, according to English Law. That law, however, recognizes the principle that the incidents of property in land are regulated by the law of its site. Therefore the system of law applicable on this question was the law of Zanzibar—concluded.

Zanzibar regulating the holding of immoveable property. That law was the Muhammadan law. It was true that art. XVI of the Treaty of 1885 conferred on British subjects the rights of ex-territoriality as regarded their persons and their property. But that was consistent with the application of the rule of the lex loci rei sitae. The whole question turned on the meaning of exterritoriality. It could not be maintained that, when an Englishman in foreign territory, having that right purchased land, it was thereupon attended by the same incidents that would belong to it, if it were treated as actually transferred to England. The real state of things was that the English law, for such purposes as the present, applied the local law of Zanzibar. According to this local (i. e. Muhammadan) Law, as proved in the Vice-Consul's Court, the owner of land, on whose property another person has built without his consent, is not entitled to the building as having become attached to the land, but is only entitled to have the building removed and the land restored to its original state. In this case that right ceased on the acquisition of the land. Whatever its value while it lasted, as a measure of compensation that value was no part of the present claim. The source of jurisdiction is the Treaty, giving authority to the Queen in foreign territory, Zanzibar The English Acts relating to foreign jurisdiction supervene, enabling Her Majesty in Council to order in what way her authority over British subjects there shall be exercised. The order in Council then is that jurisdiction shall be exercised partly in accordance with certain Anglo-Indian legislation and partly with English law. That legislation is silent on this point; and the English law, for purposes of which the present is one, incorporates the local law of Zanzibar. THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS v.
